Moreover, creation of a joint army is described as a condition for agreement by the West German government to provide a German military force and participate in a rearmament program. German participation probably would be expected under no other conditions, these advisers are reported to have told Washington.

Nevertheless, creation of an actual joint European army and, especially, selection of a commander for it may be several steps removed from next week's meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers.

In some quarters, especially military, it is suggested that what might emerge first, ahead of a supreme command, is some form of combined chiefs of staff with a chairman or similar head. This would be the unit to plan and get into eventual existence a joint army.

Shortage of Meat Maybe Temporary Howe Tells House

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP) — Trade Minister Howe said today in the Commons he thought the shortage of meat which is causing high prices, might be temporary.

He was replying to Howard Green (PC—Vancouver Quadra) who asked whether the government's new "stanby" control bill might help to bring down the cost of living.

That, said Mr. Howe, was "very hard" to say. The increase in the cost-of-living index was largely due to increases in food prices. However, the natural laws of supply and demand might operate to increase meat production and bring down prices.

The main purpose of the legislation was to keep the effects of war buying at a minimum.

Mr. Green called for curbing price rises on meat and lumber. He said lumber prices had caused housing to "go completely out of reach."

Mr. Howe replied the only way the government could control prices generally was by declaring a state of emergency and invoking the war measures Act of 1914. He added the opposition previously had been saying the government was hanging on to controls too long.

He said the present situation "hardly warrants" putting that act into play.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, suggested the government could introduce a comprehensive controls bill apart from the war measures Act.

Alex McKinnon, Great Hockey Star of '20's, Dies

Sudbury, Sept. 8 — (CP) — R. Alex McKinnon, a great hockey star of the 1920's, died today of a heart seizure. He was 51.

His fatal attack was the second in a month. He took ill the weekend of Aug. 6 and went to hospital but was up and around within a week and attended a baseball game last night.

McKinnon was a rugged forward with the famed old Sudbury Wolves of the early 1920's. In 1922 he joined Pittsburgh Yellow jackets, a power in United States amateur hockey in those days, and later moved into the national hockey league—first with the old Hamilton Tigers, then with New York Americans and Chicago Black Hawks.

He kept up his interest in sport after his retirement as a player. For a time he coached Sudbury's junior kockey Wolves and until five or six years ago was a hockey referee and baseball umpire.

A native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., he moved to Sudbury with his family as an infant. He served overseas for three years in the First World War, winning the Military Medal.

He had been a Sudbury alderman continuously since 1939 except for 1943 when he unsuccessfully contested the mayoralty election.

Surviving are his widow, three

Shooting of Men Pursuing Bandit Told at Trial

Simcoe, Sept. 8 (CP) — A wild pursuit of a bank robber along a dusty Norfolk County side road last June, when two pursuers were cut down by machine gun fire, was described today by witnesses at the murder trial of Joseph Herbert McAuliffe.

McAuliffe was identified by seven witnesses at yesterday's hearing as the man who robbed the branch of the Imperial Bank at Langton and escaped with $23,000. Crown Counsel D. E. W. Tisdale attempted to link him with the man who killed two tobacco farmers in the subsequent chase.

One of today's witnesses, Harry Manary, a Houghton Township farmer, said he saw two cars going west on King Lake Road about 20 feet apart and going very fast. As they passed his house he heard a shot and a few seconds later another shot.

Robert Nobel, 16-year-old farmer's son, told of seeing the first car going into a ditch and the second stopping behind it. He saw a man in the second car with "his rifle out the window" and then he heard shots and the man with the rifle slumped over inside the car.

The boy said he thought he heard a burst of about 10 shots and dropped to the ground. He heard four or five more shots "and by that time I was crawling home."

Other witnesses also told of the shooting. Provincial Constable W. E. Rogers, first policeman at the murder scene, testified to finding the bodies of the two men, Arthur Lierman, 31 and William Goddyn, 24.

He said that on the back seat of their automobile was a .22 rifle with a telescopic sight which looked as if it had been placed there. When he opened the breech there was no shell in it and no cartridge case. It didn't appear to have been fired. When he tried to discharge it, it wouldn't fire.

McAuliffe's twitching face muscles and dry lips betrayed nervousness during yesterday's hearing.

McAuliffe, a 32-year-old wartime arms expert, was flushed from a shack and captured three days after the killing by police and civilian posses in the area where the dead men's bullet-drilled car was found.

Five of Thursday's witnesses were bank employees who described the robbery. More than 50 have been subpoenaed.

Prime Minister Will be Invited To Unveil Tablet

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent will be invited to Belleville as the principal speaker at the unveiling of the monument to Sir Mackenzie Bowell' now being erected on the Armouries lawn by the Historical Sites and Monuments Committee.

At city council Thursday evening members passed the recommendation inviting the prime minister to take part in the unveiling. Date for the unveiling ceremony is still to be set.

A committee of Alderman Tice, as chairman of Tourist and Publicity, with Aldermen Liddle, Hyde, Butler, Haig, assisted by the manager and directors of the Chamber of Commerce, was named, to arrange the unveiling program.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., Local Master, has been mainly instrumental in having the monument to Canada's one time prime minister being erected in the city. He took the matter up with the Historic Sites and Monuments Committee which decided to erect the monument here. For many years Sir Mackenzie Bowell lived in the city and had business interests here, at one time being the publisher of the Daily Intelligencer newspaper.

The monument is now in course of erection on the Armouries lawn and is being built of cut stone. The completed monument will be roughly nine feet in height and will carry a bronze plaque.

Two Men Trapped On Roof Face Breaking Charge

Toronto, Sept. 8—(CP)— Two shopbreaking suspects were trapped on the roof of a downtown building Thursday night when a dozen taxi-cabs were used to form a cordon around the building. The men, William Ferguson, 27, and Jack Turkoski, 28, were charged with breaking into two offices and attempting to smash a safe.

An officer heard noises inside the building and asked a passing taxi to radio for help. Within a few minutes the cordon was formed and headlights trained on the building. The suspects were found on the roof. They are alleged to have had $100 and a bottle of whisky when captured.

Misunderstanding On Trade Serious

London, Sept. 8 — (Reuters)— The Times says today that in the "serious misunderstandings" between Canada and Britain on the question of trade, neither side is wholly right or wrong.

The paper, commenting on the meetings of Commonwealth ministers later this month, says "they would seem to provide an excellent opportunity for discussing the 'perplexed' problem — as the Canadian Minister for External Affairs has described it — in the wider setting of the Commonwealth's economic difficulties and opportunities."

DECOYS

To the uninitiated North Korean soldier, whose army chow consists of any edibles he can scrounge from the land, this weird contraption could be a secret weapon that might end the war overnight. One mess sergeant reported that when his field kitchen was overrun by the reds, they concentrated their fire on the kitchen equipment while his men escaped. Informatively they're simply cans filled with water for washing mess kits. The awesome gimmicks sticking from them are immersion heaters for making the water hot. — Central Press Canadian.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

AND THE LAST SHELL . . . !

The boys in the mushball backrooms are scratching wondering noggins these cool evenings. Some of them are beginning to wonder, if, after all, there is a scintilla of truth in the old sports adage that "anything can happen in a ball game."

* * *

A few of the old die-hard supporters of the doughty Howe and Hagerman Pipe Fitters and Herbie Henn's valiant Sudsmen of the Brewers' Warehouse mob, the two apparently invincible teams of the Commercial "A" League, during the schedule, that is, claim that the slipping from grace of their favorites in the inaugural tilts of the semi-finals series, is more or less a flash in the pan. A law of averages, they snort, or "just one of those things."

* * *

But the faithful followers of the Stewart Warner clan and the hard-fighting Ox Pointers who wear the blue and white of M'sieu "Ham" Legate's company of Point Anne feel differently.

As matters stand now, or at least at the time this is being written (Friday afternoon), the upstarts from the Alemite plant and those nervy cement manufacturers from Murney Green's balliwick have a victory in hand, with four games to go.

And from what we have seen, and in the opinion of unbiased softball enthusiasts both winning teams have been full value for their victories.

* * *

All four squads have been at full strength in this first jousting of the semi-finals. All four have started their ace hurlers and in some cases found them wanting. The games have been close and hard-fought and the winners deserved their victories. Perhaps a "break" that intangible gremlin which sometimes settles wars and sports contests, may have had something to do with the wins — but according to the play it is hardly fair to classify the deciding factors in the "break" category.

* * *

In other words, and if the first games of the series can be judged a criterion, there will be some hard-fought battles in both brackets of the series before the finalists are decided. Unless of course, one of another of the squads fall to pieces during the process.

* * *

However, while that is a possibility, the performances to date of all four teams would indicate they are "chips-down" teams. The brand of softball dished up to the faithful thus far in the series, has produced some of the best games of the season. And with the right to enter the finals at stake, and the league championship beckoning in the distance, it is a safe bet that all four squads will be out there battling for their dear old Alma Mammies in the forthcoming games.

* * *

There are those who, earlier in the season, predicted that the Sudsmen and the Pipe Removers would sweep through to the finals, with "yer pays yer money and takes yer choice" as far as the championship is concerned. Since then the "experts" have learned that it does not pay to sell any team short. It would be a touch of irony, indeed, should the finals series resolve itself into a stern battle between the lowly Stewart Warners and the upsurging Point Anners.

* * *

As matters stand now, and judging from the calibre of softball served by these teams to date, the "breaks" may, after all, play an important part in the series. We are not of the opinion that the Alemite and Point Anne teams are "over their heads", nor that the Brewers and Howe and Hagerman squads are in a slump. Far from it. It looks to this corner that all four squads are making a determined bid for the league gonfalon and in so doing are producing some outstanding exhibitions of the large - ball pastime.

* * *

We do not suggest that the Brewers and Howe and Hagerman teams took it for granted that they could sweep aside the opposition with more or less ease in the semi-finals. The majority of the players are veterans of the sports lanes and fully realize that any game is not over until the last man is out or the final whistle blows. But if they were resting a little on their schedule laurels, so to speak, the defeats of the first games of the series, should snap them back into high gear. They should realize by this time that the opposition is not fooling and will not hesitate to sweep the series, if it is in their power. All of which augurs well for the faithful, for the upcoming games will be productive of fast and furious action on the part of all concerned.

* * *

Tonight's battle between the Point Anne team and the Brewers should be a thriller. Stung by their 10-7 setback of Thursday night, the Sudsmen will go all out to avenge the defeat and even the series. On the other hand the fast-moving Ox Point squad are just as determined to make it two straight at the expense of the Henn flock. Game gets under way at six o'clock at the Alemite Field.

* * *

"SO SOLLY . . ."

The president of the Major "A" Bowling League is Jack Bennett, of Northern Electric and not Jack Devine as was reported in yesterday's pillar. President Bennett's leeague is anxious to secure one more team to complete its roster of eight teams for the coming season. As the loop gets under way next Thursday potential entries are requested to contact President Bennett at 4025J, or Secretary Cecil Hardwick at 4389W in the evening or in the daytime at 99.

Losing Streak Ended, Sawyer And Phillie Whiz Kids Look Forward to Smoother Sailing

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Eddie Sawyer and his Philadelphia whiz kids are looking forward today to smoother sailing.

The youthful pennant seekers were given a real scare the last few days, but thanks to a couple of old hands, Russ Meyer and Eddie Waitkus, the Phils once again enjoy a commanding 5 1-2 game lead in the National League race.

Meyer and Waitkus teamed up to end a five game losing streak and give the Phils a 4-3 victory over the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers last night in the finale of a four-game series, after the Dodgers had won the first three games.

The Dodgers, defending champions, entered the Phillies' lair Thursday, 7 1-2 games behind. The Brooks promptly took a twi-night doubleheader and followed up with another triumph to shrink the difference to 4 1-2 games.

Sawyer entrusted the important fourth-game assignment to the temperimental Meyer. The 26-year-old righthander, who hadn't pitched a complete game since July 5, came through brilliantly to restore the Phils to a healthy lead.

Braves Beat Giants

Boston Braves, seven games behind, turned back the fourth-place New York Giants 4-3 on a three-run homer by Tommy Holmes in the seventh inning. Warren Spahn went the distance to gain his 18th victory.

Elsewhere in the National League, a scheduled twi-night doubleheader between Chicago and Cincinnati and a night game between Pittsburgh and St. Louis were rained out.

Detroit crawled half a game ahead of the runner-up New York Yankees in the nip-and-tuck American League flag battle. The Tigers edged the White Sox 3-2 in a night game at Chicago, while the Yanks and third-place Boston Red Sox were idle.

Vic Wertz singled home Don Kolloway with the Tigers' winning run in the ninth inning to give veteran Dizzy Trout his 12th victory. Lefty Bob Cain was the loser.

Browns Dump Indians

The lowly St. Louis Browns just about knocked Cleveland Indians out of convention by taking a twi-night doubleheader from the Tribe 5-4 and 6-0. The defeats dumped the fourth place Indians 5 1-2 games behind.

St. Louis spotted Cleveland 4-0 in the opener but fought back and tied the score in the eighth when Sherm Lollar homered. Ken Wood singled George Stirnweiss home from second with the winning run in the ninth. Don Johnson, a former Yankee, blanked the Indians on seven hits in the finale in outpitching 20-game winner Bob Lemon.

Rookie Julio Moreno made his major-league debut and pitched Washington Senators to a 10-4 victory over Philadelphia Athletics. The Cuban righthander had a shutout until the eighth inning.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

Dick Fowler of Toronto, fresh from the Canadian Army, pitched a no-hitter for Philadelphia Athletics against St. Louis Browns five years ago today. The 21-year-old right-hander, at present hampered with a sore arm, walked four men and allowed the Browns to hit only five balls out of the infield.

Waterloo Tigers Claw Their Way To Top Position

(By The Canadian Press)

Waterloo's fighting Tigers clawed their way into the lead in the Intercounty Senior baseball round-robin playoffs Friday night by way of a 3-2 triumph over Brantfrod Red Sox.

Tigers, with 6 wins to one defeat, took 10 innings to slap down the second place Sox.

Nearly 1,600 fans watched St. Thomas eke out a 7-6 victory over Stratford Nationals last night while Kitchener Legionnaires fanned their faint hopes for a berth in the final series by whipping London Majors 7-1.

In the Brantford game, Joe Yosurak went for eight innings for Tigers and was pulled with two out and two on in favor of Cy Bricker who saved the game was credited with the win.

In the 10th McIntyre's hit, Bricker's bunt and hits by Archambault and Kovasnak won the the game for the Bengals.

The season's largest crowd 3,500, looked on.

At St. Thomas it was the Legion's second straight victory and their third in the series against three losses. It was Stratford's sixth loss against one victory.

Kitchener's win was their second in six starts in the series. It was London's fourth loss in seven games.

The Legionnaires scored all their runs in the sixth when they chased Tommy White, London's starting hurler. Singles by Org Gott, Irv Ler and Bob Bloxam, three errors gave Kitchener their big rally.

Statistics released by the Niagara District Senior Baseball League put Billy Whittet, third base veteran with Niagara Falls Fords into the position of batting king. With a mark of .391, Whittet leads his teammate, first baseman Ed Johnson, by six points.

Toronto Argos Can Move Up By Beating Als

(By The Canadian Press)

If Hamilton's surprising Tiger-Cats can beat Ottawa Rough Riders today, they'll be well away in the race for the 1950 Big Four championship.

If they can't Toronto Argonauts can move into a first-place tie with Hamilton by defeating Montreal Alouettes.

Either way, today's games should answer a lot of questions about the probable end of the Canadian football season.

Out West, Saskatchewan Rough Riders and Winnipeg Blue Bombers invade Alberta. Each has a game scheduled in Calgary and Edmonton.

A pair of victories by the Eskimos would put them far ahead of the Western Conference standing. But a pair of losses by the Alberta clubs would mean Winnipeg and Roughriders could displace Edmonton from the league leadership.

The weekend will also show whether the Bombers can do any scoring without Jack Jacobs. The starry quarterback and Tom Casey have done all Bombers scoring this year. Jacobs will be out of action with an injured shoulder.

In the other eastern game, Windsor Rockets open their Ontario Rugby Football senior season against Sarnia Imperials. Sarnia whipped Toronto Balmy Beach 39-0 last week in the first ORFU game this year.

Montreal have been concentrating on a passing attack in their workouts for their game in Toronto—the first league game this year in renovated Varsity Stadium. Coach Lew Hayman says Argos have "glaring errors" in their pass defence and if they haven't been corrected he doesn't expect too much trouble. But two of his star backs — Bob Cunningham and Jack Harper—still are shaky from injuries, and Alouettes will shy away from a running game.

Ottawa Rough Riders, winless this year, will face the rampaging Tiger-Cats with Howie Turner, Ted McLary and Eric Chipper doubtful starters. They were beaten 26-17 by Hamilton last week.

Montreal Royals Still Game Ahead Of Baltimore

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs last night defeated Montreal Royals 4-2 to keep Royals from clinching second place in the International League standings. A win for Royals would have done it, as Baltimore, fighting for second spot, split a doubleheader at Jersey City.

The Royals now are one full game ahead of Baltimore.

Baltimore made sure of third place by beating Jersey City 1-0 before losing the nightcap of their doubleheader 4-1.

Jersey City remains in fourth place, the last playoff qualifying berth.

Anse Moore's 20th home run of the season in the eighth inning, first extra frame, won the ball game for the Orioles.

Springfield clung to its precarious hold on fifth place by breaking even with Syracuse Chiefs 8-3 and 12-2.

Bob Wellman smashed a grand-slam homer in the fifth to lead the last-place Buffalo Bisons to an 8-3 victory over Rochester Red Wings.

Ted Morris Quits As Coach of Balmy Beach

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—Where does Teddy Morris go from here in Canadian football?

The fighting 165-pounder, one of the game's greatest halfbacks and coach of three Canadian championship teams, last night quit unexpectedly as coach of Toronto Balmy Beach of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

There seemed no immediate place for Morris to go in the game that has been his first love for nearly 20 years.

It was little more than a month ago that Toronto Argos — where Morris broke in as a junior—took over the franchise of the Beach club to operate it as a farm team.

Morris had already been appointed coach. He turned down a job as manager of Argos after Frank Clair, formerly Buffalo Bills coach, was brought in to rebuild the Argos.

Morris offered no explanation of his sudden resignation. A friend quoted him as saying: "It's nearly 20 years since I started with Argos. I'm still too much of an Argo man to start a controversy. I'm very happy and contented at the way things have gone."

Morris, now 40, took over the Argos after the war. He built them from the ground up into a team that won three straight Grey Cup titles. And he did it without the use of American imports—at a time when more and more clubs were turning south of the border in the hunt for talent.

Last year the Argos fell apart. This year Clair was brought in to rebuild the team.

President Bob Moran of the Argos said he was startled by the resignation.

"I think we've been fair with Ted," he said. "He could have been our team manager as long as he wanted. But he wanted to coach football so he asked to be allowed to go to the Beach."

Despite his light weight, Morris was one of the greatest plungers in the game during the 30s. He became assistant coach of Argos in 1939 and coached Navy teams during the war.

Pep Retires in Eighth Round With Shoulder Injury Giving Sandy Saddler Feather Title

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, Sept. 9 — (AP) — The bizarre wind-up of the Willie Pep-Sandy Saddler fight last night gave Saddler the featherweight championship and Pep a dislocated left shoulder, but it still didn't answer the No. 1 question: "Who is the better man?"

So today it appears that Wiley Willie and Slasher Sandy will have it cut again for the fourth time this February at Madison Square Garden, scene of their first two thrillers. Matchmaker Al Weill of the International Boxing Club said the two gladiators are signed for a return that month.

A record crowd and gate for "little men" — 38,781 fans and $262,150 — watched in stunned silence last night as the skinny, hard-hitting 24-year-old Negro was recrowned champion of the world while Pep sat sadly on his stool in a corner of the ring.

The surprising finish came as the bell sounded for the start of the eighth round of what had been a great scrap thus far. Referee Ruby Goldstein waved off the onrushing Saddler and announcer Johnny Addie told the puzzled throng that Pep had dislocated his left shoulder and could not continue. According to New York rules it was listed as an eight-round knockout.

Pep claimed the dislocation was caused by Saddler's wrestling tactics. The shoulder, incidentally, was reset in the ring by Dr. Vincent Nardiello of the State Athletic Commission. X-rays later showed no break.

"He got me in a double arm lock at the end of the seventh round and twisted my arm," said Willie. "Otherwise I could have kept on. I didn't feel any punch. I felt very good. I wanted to keep on fighting, because I though I could lick him. But they would not let me."

Pep Ahead at Time

"Armlock, my eye," said Saddler. "I knew something was wrong with him, but I didn't think it was his shoulder. I could see something was wrong after I hit him a shot to the kidney in a clinch. He couldn't come up again before the round ended. Brother, those kidney punches hurt."

The fight, as far as it went, gave the crowd plenty to roar about. It promised to be just as sensational as their second one 19 months ago when the Connecticut cutie took back his title with a dazzling exhibition.

Willie won the first two rounds, lost the third when he was trapped and decked, and then came back to sweep four, five and six. Saddler's heavy body bombardment won him the seventh and final round of action.

Referee Ruby Goldstein and Judge Frank Forbes both had Pep ahead 4-2 with one even. Judge Arthur Susskind had Willie in front, 5-2.

Each weighed 124¾.

Thus Saddler duplicated Pep's record feat of regaining the feather crown: he won the title the first time by knocking out Pep in the fourth round in October, 1948 and lost it back in 15 rounds in February, 1949.

Pep got a nice $90,000 bundle to console himself. He got 45 per cent of the net. Saddler collected about $30,000 with his 15 per cent.

Major Leaguers To Play Game In Toronto

(By The Canadian Press)

A barnstorming crew of major league baseball players will play Montreal and Toronto during an October tour.

Teams representing the National and American Leagues will play each other during the tour, which starts in Montreal Oct. 10 and winds up in Oakland, Calif., nearly a month later. They will appear in Toronto Oct. 13.

Included among the National leaguers are home-run king Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh; Sammy Jethroe, fleet Boston Brave centrefielder; ace relief pitcher Konstanty and third baseman Puddinhead Jones of Philadelphia Phillies and New York Giant hurler Larry Jansen.

Slugging Vern Stephens and Walt Dropo of Boston Red Sox, rookie outfielder Irv Noren of Washington and Pitchers Lou Brissie of Philadelphia and Dizzy Trout of Detroit will be among the American leaguers.

Bobby Jones, onetime king of all golfers whose greatest effort these day is three holes of pitch and putt, met a former golfing queen in Atlanta, Ga., Thursday for the first time in 25 years.

Bobby and Alexa Stirling together grew up in golf at old East Lake course No. 1. Bobby and his perfectly co-ordinated swing went on to 13 major U.S. and international championships and Alexa to three U.S. women's amateur crowns and a dozen others of lesser weight.

Alexa, looking much as she did in 1916 when she first won the U.S. amateur, has returned to her birthplace and the golf yard she made famous seven years before Bobby won his first American open.

Now Mrs. W. G. Fraser of Ottawa, Alexa has come home to play in the Golden Anniversary U.S. Women's Amateur Sept. 11-16.

The grand slam king needs a cane to walk and his right leg still drags slightly. An extremely serious spine ailment and two major operations in two years have left Bobby in a condition which may never permit him to play 18 holes of golf again.

Attorney-General Harold R. Fatzer of Kansas has called on the Western Union Telegraph Company to discontinue sports ticker service to 26 business establishments in 11 Kansas towns.

Fatzer said a state-wide investigation was started by his office to determine if the tickers furnishing sports information were being used in connection with gambling transactions.

Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., third seeded United States professional, led a field of U.S. and Canadian tennis players in the first round of the Canadian open professional tennis championships at Quebec today.

Kovacs, seeded No. 1, ousted E. S. Stillman, New York, in straight sets, 6-0, 6-0, 6-0. Welby Van Horne of Philadelphia, fourth U.S. seeded player, had identical scores over Walter Debany, New York. In a second-round match, he won without losing a single game from Charles Sak of Rhone Island.

See Your Fish

Glasses Add to Fishing Pleasure

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted sportsman, author and creator of Solunar Tables)

Have you ever wondered how many fish look at your fly during the course of a day's casting? To be sure, you might glimpse an occasional flash of a refusing fish, but this is the exception rather than the rule.

For the past two winters, I have left my desk during the month of March and headed for the Florida Keys to enjoy the comparatively new sport of salt-water fly fishing.

Very little blind-casting is done while fishing for the salt-water species that inhabit the flats and channels of the Florida Keys. Rather, the average day is more a case of sighting, stalking and casting directly to the quarry — be they bonefish, tarpoon, channel bass or what have you. Thus, the emphasis, as you might well imagine, is placed on seeing the fish.

My first experience on sighting cruising bonefish in waist-deep water were not happy. My guides became thoroughly convinced that I was a blind old duffer that should be led around by the hand. Then one of them found the solution to my difficulties.

"Lemme see those glasses of yours, Mr. Knight."

Glasses Improved Vision

I took off a reasonably-expensive pair of driving goggles I had been using to shield my eyes from the water glare and handed them to him. He glanced through them, grunted and, taking off his own, passed them to me. I put them on and suddenly, there was the bottom! I could see the black sponges, sea fans, and bottom weeds. In short, I could see what I was not seeing before.

The remainder of the trip was a pleasure. I sighted fish like a veteran and enjoyed myself thoroughly. When we started for the dock, I asked him about these glasses of his. They were of inexpensive construction, made in a one-piece shield of polaroid plastic. Unlike the laminated glass and polaroid goggles, which bend the light rays several directions, these were made of a single polaroid material that did not leave me with throbbing eyes and a headache after a day's wear. Needless to say, I purchased several pair the following day.

My son, Dick, combining both fishing and education, spent his last year in college at the University of Miami, graduating last June. He arrived home in time for the tail-end of the trout fishing and we took the first opportunity to head for our favorite stream. As we set up our tackle, I noticed him tuck a polaroid shield into his shirt pocket.

"I'm going to try this thing on riffles today," he said. "I'm curious to see what goes on when I drift a dry fly down through a feeding run."

Good Fishing

I didn't see him for several hours. We met on the way to the flat at the base of the pool for the evening rise. I asked him what success he had had and was greatly surprised at his answer.

"I raised fifty-four, hooked six and landed four."

Although I thought he was stretching the long bow a bit, I let it pass. But on our next trip, I included a polaroid shield in my outfit.

We had planned our arrival to coincide with the afternoon Major Solunar Period and as we walked down to the stream, I could see the dimples of steady feeders all through the run.

Putting on my shield, I waded into position, and waited for the fish to get used to my intrusion. At once the glint on the surface of the water disappeared and I could see the bottom quite clearly. I glanced idly about, killing time watching the bottom, when I spied a brown trout lying some ten feet from me, finning in the current.

Carefully I dropped my fly above him and watched as it drifted down. He sighted the fly and eased up below it, refusing at the last minute, and turning back towards his station.

An Enjoyable Day

All afternoon, I cast over rising trout. The suspense of watching these fish investigate my offerings, like a picture in slow motion, was a pleasure I hadn't enjoyed before. I saved many useless casts over smaller fish by sizing them up as I watched them rise. I found the proper fly to match the hatch much sooner by watching the behavior of several nearby feeders. All in all, it was an enjoyable day.

Each bass season, my son and I fish the more remote stretches of Pine Creek that lie within the Grand Canyon of Pennsylvania below Wellsboro. This past week we fished over our favorite stretches as usual, but this time we wore polaroid shields. The fish activity during Solunar Periods was normal. But the additional thrill of seeing the majority of the bass to which we cast made the day even more pleasant.

Try it for yourself. Purchase a polaroid shield (at last quoting, the price was under two dollars) and increase your fishing pleasure. Try seeing your fish and you'll learn more about them.

DOUBLE-GAITED CHAMPION

Syracuse, N.Y., Sept. 9 (AP)—Hodgen, winner of the $10,000 Governor's Cup for pacers at the New York State Fair, rated today as the new champion double-gaited stallion.

Hodgen rounded the mile track in 1:58 3-5 yesterday to take the second heat after placing fifth behind Gratton McKlyo in the first heat of the cup event.

The seven-year-old harness horse, owned by Mrs. Mildred Knisley of Toledo, O., previously had trotted a mile in 2:02 1-5. His total time for the two miles trimmed one-fifth of a second from the double-gaited record set by Raider in 1934 and 1935.

Grattan McKlyo was timed in 1:59 3-5 in the first heat. He finished sixth in the second heat.

Tennis Talk

Gossip From The Courts of The District

BY "DIG"

The playoffs for the Corby Cup have got off to a rather delayed start owing to the weatherman not being too considerate. Nevertheless some very good tennis has been produced. Point Anne and Quinte two are deadlocked at five points each and have to play a further match tomorrow afternoon at Point Anne to decide who shall have the honor of meeting the winner of the other semi-final between Trenton and Batawa. This extra game should be very well worth seeing if it is anything near as good as the match on Wednesday evening on the Quinte courts.

Next week the final round will be started and the league executive will make an announcement in this connection as soon as the names of the finalists are known.

A very good dance was held by the Point Anne Club in the community hall on Labor Day. It was fairly well attended by tennis members and friends from the district and we believe a small profit was realized which will help to augment the funds of the local tennis club treasury.

Tennis is assured of a good future in this district if the interest shown by the youngsters this season is any criterion. Many who are in their first year on the courts are able now to give some of the older and more experienced players a good run. Several of the boys and girls from school have practically lived on the courts during the summer and could be seen there from very early in the morning to late at night. It is really very encouraging to see the younger members taking an active part in this very popular sport. The enthusiasm shown in the Intermediate League matches was particularly noted and it is worth all the effort in putting these matches to see the final results on the courts across the district.

A very interesting competition is being run by a group in the Lindsay district to popularize the game. For $6 a head they are putting on a mixed doubles tournament. The six dollars covers entry fee, hotel room, meals, and a dance on Saturday evening. The show is being run at Thurstonia Lodge this weekend.

Corner Shots

A Weekly Peek At The Soccer Picture

BY ELDEE

On Monday the Bay of Quinte All Stars journed to Toronto to take on the Toronto Celtic. The All Stars were somewhat under full strength but nevertheless managed to give a good account of themselves although they were beaten by four goals to one. On the days showing, forwards were definitely lacking but in the defensive department the local boys were quite the equal of the lads from the Queen City. Unfortunately it is goals that count and those did not seem to come the way of the All Stars. Lionel Blaker, the Belleville United goalkeeper who was between the sticks for the Quinte lads sustained a couple of broken fingers when gathering the ball at the same time as one of the Toronto forwards was attempting to shoot. This rather put the local squad off balance although they were able to pick up a substitute goalie from the sidelines in young Don Buchan of the East York United Juvenile team. Don will certainly be up with the best of them in a year or two.

Bill Henshaw, president of the Celtic organization, has certainly done a grand job in bringing the club from nothing to its present position in the soccer world. He has a fine bunch of players and they have a real good club spirit. Bill, it will be remembered last year was in charge of the Toronto Irish club when they visited Belleville. Whilst in Toronto we saw another familiar face, Wes McCulla, who was last year playing for Belleville United and this year is a member of the Celtic club but unfortunately cannot make the first team as yet.

Today our Trenton Flyers are flying to Camp Borden to play the first leg of their semi-final round in the Ontario Intermediate championship playoff. In the other semi-final Peterborough U.E.W. are at home to Kingston United. The round is played on a home and away basis with the total of goals scored in the two matches to count. The return matches are scheduled to be played next Saturday. In the event of the teams being tied at the end of the second game extra time will be played.

Batawa once again took over the lead in the Bay of Quinte League when they defeated Flyers by three clear goals on Wednesday evening. This was the last evening game to be played this season owing to the darker evenings. Trenton Merchants took two points from 6 R.D. on the same evening and thus are only one-point behind fourth place 6 R.D.

Next Saturday Belleville United are scheduled to meet Ottawa Combined Services in the Eastern Ontario League. The Ottawa boys who started off the season very strongly are the only team the Belleville United have beaten and the boys are hoping that they might be able to complete the double at the expense of the lads from the Capital.

"STARS IN MY CROWN" APPEALING FAMILY PICTURE

"Stars in My Crown", new human and appealing M.G.M. family picture opening today at the Belle Theatre, stars Joel McCrea with a cast of screen favorites in the action-filled story of a two-fisted parson whose whisper spoke louder than six guns.

McCrea, inseparably associated with outdoor roles, plays the Civil War cavalryman turned preacher, who brings law and order, love and laughter to a small southern community. Appearing opposite the star is Ellen Drew who portrays that unsung heroine, the housewife and the gentle power behind many a man's success. As their little ward, who contributes much of the laughter to the story, is Dean Stockwell, popular juvenile star who recently scored in "The Secret Garden". An outstanding supporting cast features Alan Hale and Lewis Stone.

New Tom and Jerry Cartoon

A new and very funny Tom and Jerry color cartoon, "Ventriloquist Cat", the popular Paramount Newsreel, and an entertaining multiple-reel novelty "Expectant Father", precedes the feature attraction.

"Stars In My Crown" is delightful entertainment that every member of the family will enjoy!

AT THE CAPITOL — Vincent Price, as "The Baron," in a tender scene with Margia Dean, as the Marquesa, in "The Baron of Arizona," opening a 3-day engagement Monday at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Radar Secret Service," starring John Howard and Adele Jergens. Both hits are first city showings.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON

The rule meaning of an opening trump lead is: "Partner, I have an ace or a king in each unbid suit." However, an expert player has good reasons for starting with a trump lead at other times, too.

One such is when he has four or more trumps a lead from which will not lose trick for him. He will then keep pumping trumps at declarer in the hope of saving tricks in side suits for his pair.

Another case is when opponent bids go something like this:

South	North
1 S	4 S

It is evident from the bidding that opponents will rely mostly on trumps to take their needed tricks. This they will do with dummy ruffs or with cross-ruffs of losers in both hands.

To cut down their ruffing power, a trump lead is desirable. It matters not how few trumps you may have. At every opportunity you and your partner should lead a trump to reduce opponent ruffing chances.

♥K J 2
♣8 6 5 3

The order of choice of leads is tops, longles, shorts. With no top card lead, rule says to lead a long suit. But a lead of a club here would be a futile gesture.

This brings you to the choice of leading a short suit. But it is inadvisable to lead from a short suit containing an ace or king or tenace containing one or the other of these.

Better lead a trump at once from this hand. Even though it is a suit bid by opponents. It is what experienced players would call a waiting lead. It awaits leads in the other suits.

A skilled player will not misread this lead to mean you have an ace or king in all the unbid suits. He knows it is prompted by such bidding. It has a label on it.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on Mary Watkins frunt steps talking to her about diffrent subjects, and Puds Simkins came over and sat down too without being invited, and a officer in a uniform came out of Mary's house and git in a car and drove away, looking swell and Mary's house and get in a car and Uncle Frank. He's a lootenant and all the soldiers have to salute him, and I think he's wonderful.

I'm going to be a generel, I said. Everybody will have to salute me, including lootenants, and I wont have to salute back if I dont feel like it, but I probably will anyways, just for politeness, I said, and Puds said, I'm going to be the Secretary of War, and no battle can happen without my written consent. And what's more, I can discharge any general I want to, and what's still more, you'll probably be the ferst one I discharge, he said.

Aw, that's what you say, I said, My men will be so faithful to me they wont fite without me leeding them on my white horse, so if you discharge me the newspapers will accuse you of trying to lose the war, so you'll be lucky if you have time to resign before you get shot for treason, I said, and he said, Aw is that so?

Yes that's so, I said, and Mary Watkins said, Oh, stop the arguing. My other uncle is in the army too, and he sews soldiers up again and stops their panes, and that's a lot nicer than ordering them to get shot, and that's why he's my favorite uncle and I think he's perfect, she said.

Aw, I'm going to be an actor and entertain the troops by singing and dancing, I said, and Puds said, Me too, we'll travel around the werld together and cheer up the whole army. Gerls never know what they want, he said.

Meening Mary Watkins, and she went in the house mad, and me and Puds shook hands and said, Thick and Thin.

Being the secret passwerd of our new club.

FINAL DECISION

Mr. St. Laurent said the government has every intention of conforming with that 48-year-old law. Parliament would approve or reject any warlike move on which the cabinet decided.

Dispatch Not Covered

The bill itself did not cover the dispatch of the special force to Korea. It said the broad basis for such moves and authorization to send the force to Korea would be done by order-in-council and those orders would be placed before the House at this session. The bill established the right of the government to place any part of the forces on active service to back Canada's U.N. obligations.

An executive order by the cabinet, that is an order-in-council, would establish what forces would go and where. But those orders would be placed before parliament for approval.

The day also saw:

1. A motion by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, regretting the government's "refusal" to appoint a House Committee on Defence defeated by a vote of 142 to 43.

2. A C.C.F. motion for nationalization of the "production and sale of munitions and armaments" defeated 156 to 12.

Wants Representation

3. Clarie Gillis (CCF-Cape Breton South) call for appointment of workers' representatives to National Industrial Councils which would do the work dollar-a-year controllers did in the last war.

4. Capt. Victor Quelch (SC-Acadia), a Military Cross winner in the First World War, defend arms-making profits because, he said, they are only part of the great prosperity Canada came to know in the war and post-war years.

5. Second reading or approval in principle given Mr. Howe's bill after he said no expansion of existing industrial facilities is planned as a result of the arms program. He cited lumber and steel as two materials that might be controlled, but said he hopes cooperation will eliminate any need for government action.

Both the Conservative and C.C.F. motions were introduced as amendments to the government's $850,000,000 appropriations bill to finance the rearmament program.

Mr. Drew thus carried his fight for a House Defence Committee to the last ditch and forced the government to go on record as voting down the proposal. He said Canada was caught unprepared by Korea and argued that the country would at least have known of this existing state of its defences if a committee had been functioning.

WALL OF GAS BARS

Although there was no positive word as to the 12 missing miners rescue crew leaders suggested that they may have taken refuge in some other part of the diggings.

It was after the break-through to the main group that the black damp peril impeded completion of the rescue of the 116.

Men in Good Spirits

At 2 a.m., the press association said reports reached the surface, where 200 persons maintained a night-and-day vigil, that the men were in good spirits. The general manager of the mine described them as "in the best of fettle." The 116 men were taken to an adjoining pit for physical examinations and rest before being led to the mine entrance two miles distant.

It was then that the mine tests showed the presence of the deadly black damp.

"Gas is raging down there," said a National Coal Board official. "It can only be moved slowly and any attempts to hasten the process might have fatal results."

As the job of pumping out the poisoned odorless gas proceeded, William Pearson, secretary of the Scottish Miners Union, announced:

"It will be hours yet before we can get them up. The gas is moving very slowly."

The King and Queen, who are in their Scottish Castle at Balmoral, were kept informed of the rescue operations. At the scene was Arthur Horner, secretary of the National Union of Mine Workers.

AMERICAN TROOPS

Try to Close Gap

The two forces were trying to close a six-mile gap in the allied northeastern line along the 120-mile Korean warfront. They moved fast to beat an anticipated new red drive on Taegu, main allied central front base.

The south Korean advance gave Taegu a breather. Defenders of the city, largest left in the allied defence perimeter, have dug foxholes for street fighting if a 50,000-man red force of the city rolls down from the mountains.

The communist radio in Pyongyang, north Korean capital, broadcast that Yongchon was in communist hands. Allied sources said the south Koreans firmly held the junction but were undergoing communist shelling.

On the rain-lashed southwestern front before Masan port, heavy fighting prevailed between the U.S. 25th division and 40,000 north Koreans attempting to reach Pusan seaport.

Without the valuable help of allied air power, American troops lost and then recaptured Battle Mountain, two miles west of Haman, and a high ridge northwest of Yongsan.

Close to Succeeding

It was along these critical sectors that Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker disclosed that the communists came close to succeeding in their drive toward Pusan last Sunday. Pusan is the all-important United Nations supply port on the Korean peninsula's southeast tip. It is only 35 miles from the extreme southern front.

Gen. Walker, commander of the U.S. Eighth Army, including all U.N. ground forces in Korea, told correspondents that the situation looked bad Sunday—his "own worst day." That was during the red offensive which exploded on the southern front at midnight Aug. 31.

While heavy fighting progressed on the same front today, the communists farther north continued their pressure toward the communications hub of Taegu.

Groups of reds were reported infiltrating across the highway between Yongchon and Kyongju, 35 miles east of Taegu, but the U.S. Eighth Army communique said the highway and both towns were still under allied control.

DOMESTICATED EARLY

The reindeer has been domesticated in Finland for about 4,000 years.

Schooners Collide, 2 Men Drowned

Souris, P.E.I., Sept. 8 (CP) — Two Magdalen Islands seamen were drowned last night as two schooners loaded with coal collided 4 1-2 miles off this small port.

The 34-ton Arthena M. foundered immediately, taking with her Capt. Gregoire Arsenault and his son, Clement, both of Point Basse, Magdalen Islands.

The school B.T.U. though damaged managed to put in here.

Legere Arsenault, another son of the Arthena M's missing skipper, was the only one saved when the schooner went down. He could give no reason for the collision, which occurred on calm seas with visibility almost perfect.

GARDEN CONTEST

Brandon, Man. — (CP) —F. S. Stewart has been awarded the O. L. Harwood Cup for the best home and grounds in the city on the basis of beauty and utility. The beautification competition was sponsored by the local Horticultural Society.

SECOND OF QUADS DIE

Hong Kong, Sept. 8—(Reuters) —The second boy of Hong Kong's first set of quads, born 10 days ago to the 33-year-old wife of a bricklayer, died today in hospital.

The mother, Lau Fai-Kee, was reported "critically ill."

The first boy died three days after birth Aug. 30. The surviving boy and girl, the second and fourth of the quads, were said today to be in a "weak condition".

SOFT WATER FOR MILK

Experiments have indicated that cows increase their milk production as much as 50 per cent when they are switched from hard to soft drinking water.

Chinese Patient's Temperature 112.5

London, Sept. 8—(AP)—A British army doctor reported today that a Chinese patient he had in Malaya ran a temperature of 112.5 degrees and lived.

The Chinese, aged 67, developed the high fever soon after a gall bladder operation. The doctor said it continued for almost an hour before he could bring it under control by sponging the patient with cold water.

Normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees. Persons who run temperatures much above 106 usually die. Today's case was described in a letter to the British Medical Journal by a medical officer stationed in Malaya.

PAID THE PIPER

North Battleford, Sask. (CP)—Lawrence Lone Singer, 29-year-old Treaty Indian from Sweet Grass Reserve, wanted to go to the fair. Monday he stole a cow and sold it for $169. Next day he shot the works at the fair. Thursday he appeared in court for stealing the cow and by Friday he was headed for Prince Albert jail for a year.

Blood on the Stars

By Brett Halliday

The limousine ground to a stop beyond them and both doors swung open to disgorge three men who raced back to the roadster before either occupant could open a door to get out.

The three men were masked with handkerchiefs and all three held pistols in their hands. The first to reach Dustin's side jerked the door open and rammed a muzzle against his side. "Take it easy," he said, "and you won't get hurt."

Dustin sat where he was immobile but not unvocal. The other two men circled the car to Celia's side. One of them opened the door and said, "Stick out our arm, lady."

"Don't do it, Celi." Dustin's voice was thick with anger. "There'll be someone along. They won't dare..."

The man who had spoken to Celia leaned past her and smashed the barrel of his gun down the westerner's face. The front sight had been filed to sharpness and it laid his cheek open from temple to jaw.

"Good going," the man beside Dustin muttered as the victim slumped back with blood streaming from the gash. "Get the stuff off the girl fast."

Celia was screaming hysterically and kicking. The two men jerked her out of the car and one of them used a pair of snippers on the linked platinum. It parted easily and they threw her aside to the ground.

The third man had been going through Dustin's pockets. He found the wad of bills in a side pocket held together with a silver clip. He extracted them as the others raced around to join him.

They all leaped for the open doors of the limousine as Dustin half fell from the roadster and staggered after them, cursing incoherently. He was half-blinded with pain and with shock, but the life he had led had not fitted him to accept such an outrage without fighting back.

He stumbled forward as the three men jumped in and slammed the doors shut. The limousine jerked forward just as he reached it and caught the rear door handle It turned in his hand and the latch released, but the door didn't open and the car was picking up speed.

The man in the rear seat rolled down the glass and leaned out. He cursed and smashed his pistol barrel down on the hand clutching the door handle. Mark Dustin stumbled back and the limousine roared away toward downtown Miami Beach.

Celia ran to him, sobbing as he swayed drunkenly in the headlights of the roadster. When she saw the blood streaming down his face and the crushed hand he was holding out stiffly, she cried out "Oh, Mark, what have they done to you," in an agonized voice.

He put her aside with his other hand. His face was stony and his voice harsh as he grated, "We've got to notify the police. Get under the wheel and see if you can back out."

"But your face! And your hand! you've got to get to a hospital!"

"Get in and drive to a phone," He shoved her toward the roadster and walked around to get in the other side.

Celia didn't waste time arguing. She had the car in gear and gunned the motor and let the clutch out with a jerk. The rear wheels spun momentarily, then took hold and the roadster lurched backward onto the pavement. She put it in low and spun the steering wheel. The left fender was crushed against the wheel and rubber screeched protestingly against steel and she swung in a short circle and headed toward the hotel.

Dustin started to protest that they could reach help faster by driving on to Fifth Street, but a look at the set of her jaw stopped him in mid-sentence.

The steering mechanism had evidently been injured for the roadster wobbled drunkenly as she gained speed but Celia kept the accelerator down and herded it down the pavement with grim concentration.

Mark Dustin held a handkerchief to his cut face His injured hand lay on his knee. When they drove up to the hotel entrance the doorman opened the door and Dustin snapped, "Get the police. We've been robbed of a couple of hundred thousand dollars."

"Send the doctor up to our suite Please hurry." She was out of the car and going around to open the door on Mark's side. She put her arm around him and led him in through the lobby and on to an elevator.

The resident doctor had Dustin's cheek bandaged and was putting a temporary splint on his injured hand when the first contingent of the law arrived two city detectives and the chief of the Miami Beach detective bureau.

Peter Painter aggressively took the lead in snapping questions at the victims getting a brief outline of the occurrence and sending his two subordinates scooting away with routine instructions to establish a road-block across the bay and put out a radio alarm for the limousine.

Before long the doctor had Dustin's broken hand swathed in bandages which he assured the suffering man would take care of it until he could get it X-rayed and properly set. Three fingers were broken and two smaller bones in the hand itself, he explained and as soon as the first shock wore off he should go to a hospital for a thorough examination.

He picked up his bag and went out. Celia went to the telephone and ordered something to drink sent up. Then she reseated herself beside her husband while Peter Painter stood in the centre of the room and regarded the couple disapprovingly.

He had reason for this attitude. In his opinion, any tourist who ventured out in Miami wearing a fortune in jewelry was a congential fool and deserved whatever happened to him. Moreover they were a great nuisance to him and his department and were always kicking up a stink in the newspapers if their stolen property was not recovered within a few hours which it seldom was. Such robberies made bad publicity, and were frowned upon by the City Fathers to whom Painter owed his job.

The detective chief was small and slender, with a thread-like black mustache. His taste in clothes was fastidious and now he thrust both hands deep in the patch pockets of a gray suede jacket and said, "You say tonight is the first time you've worn the bracelet Mrs. Dustin?"

"Yes. We just bought it today."

"It wasn't delivered until today," Mark corrected her. "We actually bought it last Monday but I didn't take possession until insurance was fixed up and my check cleared through my bank."

"How many people knew you were going to wear it tonight?"

"No one. No one could possibly haxe known." Celia threw frightened glance at her husband. "I hadn't told anyone, Mark. I swear I hadn't. It was to be a complete surprise at the concert tonight. Those men must have seen me wear it when I went through the hotel lobby," she went on rapidly "and followed us when we drove away."

"From your story of the hold-up it sounds like well-planned crime ...by an organized gang." Painter lifted his right hand from his pocket and thumbnailed his mustache. His black eyes flashed from Celia to Mark. "Hardly the sort of thing to be got up on the spur of the moment. Beside how would any crook know how valuable the bracelet was...with just one look at it as you went through the lobby?"

The Hood Uses the Ropes But Fails to Hang Yukon And the Brawl's a Draw

Well, "yer pays yer money and yer takes yer choice". That was the opinion handed down last night by hundreds of wrestling fans who witnessed the brawl between Yukon Eric and the Hooded Horror, alias the Masked Marvel.

The fantastic fight ended in a draw, natch, despite the fact the lads put on a large economy size of the Hanging of Dan McGee with Referee Sam Gotter, who might as well stayed in Toronto, as one of the victims.

This Hood is tough. You can't get away from that fact. At times he had the touted Yukon Eric, the stalking tiger of the Arctic circles looking like a mashed potato. True he used everything outside the city hall, the CNR and Harvey McFarland's fleet of bulldozers in an effort to tame the Yuke, and did a danged good job of it.

A Tough Bout

But the Yuke was tough too. In fact so tough that the Hood in the dying moments of the brawl snatched the rope that Yuke uses to hold up his dungarees, from its position and used it as a necktie for the Pride of Alaska. He lassoed the big lumberjack in a neat throw that would make the Lone Ranger look like a sucker and proceeded to cut off the Alaskan's air supply.

Enter Mr. Gotter. He was the third man in the ring, so we were told, and he promptly informs the Hood that the use of a rope was a breach of the constitution of the College of Applied Pachydermy.

"Phooey" growled the Hood and promptly applied the rope treatment to the gullet of the Man from Toronto.

"Poppa spank" gurgled the official tonsils, but the Hood, it is presumed, grinned under his mask and tightened the hemp. "Poppa be damned" it is assumed he said as the air bubbles trickled from the nostrils of the official bloke.

And that is the way it ended. It was a roughie toughie brawl all the way through with the Hood having an edge against the mountain-torsed biggie from the wilds of Alaska.

The Hood took the first fall with Eric evening matters in the second. Then came the third and final clash with the hanging procedure. The faithful milled around the ring after the official nod and it looked like a bit of a Donegal until the limbs of the law cleared up the situation.

In all likelihood the feud between the Hood and the Yuke will be resumed next week.

In a sparkling semi-final Lee the Leer Henning roughed up flashy Pat Flannigan to no end and earned the wrath of Referee Cliff Fox. That official, promptly gave the Leer the ole heave-ho after he had used tactics that did not meet up with the official idea of things.

Ray Gunkel, a new comer here, displayed lots of ability against rugged Jack Moore and won his first bout in a Belleville ring.

FRANKFORD

Bowling League Officers Named For Coming Year

Frankford—It now appears that the Frankford Bowling League is away to a flying start again this year. Thursday night brought an excellent turnout for the meeting and practice night in Trenton.

First item was the election of officers. On a close count, Jack Farley was elected president of the league, and Arnold Westlake re-installed as secretary.

Rules and regulations were read, in some cases amended, and adopted for the coming season. A copy of these will be given to each bowler, who is to read them carefully. In this way, there can be no excuse for a breach of regulations.

The newcomers to the league will definitely be a big asset in both bowling and fun. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hanna, or "Paw and Maw Kettle" as teammates affectionately call them, promise to be a big lift to the league. Denton "Lefty" Spencer looks good in pre-season training, as does "Fireball" Bailey.

All in all, it looks like another great season of bowling for the Frankford League.

A large number of Frankford folk attended the Twiddy-Creaser wedding in Ivanhoe on Friday afternoon.

Miss Maisie Rankin is spending a holiday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Eric McComb in Abitibi Canyon.

Cannifton Wins From Latta 4-3

Cannifton's charging Clippers took over the crucial game of the South Hastings Baseball League playoffs last evening when they downed Latta Lumbermen 4-3 at Latta. The win gave Cannifton a 3-2 lead in the best of seven playoffs with two games a tie. The eighth game will be played at Exhibition Park Wednesday night at 8.00.

The winners scored once in the first frame, twice in the fifth and once in the seventh. Latta tallied once in the first inning and twice in the seventh as a belated rally just failed to catch the Clippers.

Bakelite Moves Into Tie for First Place in League

Bakelite moved into a tie for first place in the 'B' section of the Commercial Softball League last evening, when they outslugged Avon Jewellers 18-10 in the last league game of the season.

The win deadlocks Bakelite with Belleville Mercuries for the league lead which will have to be decided on paper as the regular league playoffs must get under way Monday night. The team with the best runs for and against record will be declared the B league flag winners.

Bakelite lost little time in establishing their claim to the league leadership by scoring nine runs in the first four innings while holding the Jewellers to just two tallies.

Bakelite connected for their tenth run in the sixth and then took a frightful lead in the eighth as they pushed over seven runs to make it 17-3. The aroused Jewellers, stung to the quick, rushed back into the game to rescue their honor with a six run rally on seven healthy hits, including two triples and two doubles.

The Jewellers were working on another rally in the ninth when it was choked in its infancy with them being able to connect for only one run.

The game did not alter the playoff prospects in the 'B' league as both teams were assured of a berth before the contest was staged. The loss left Avons reposing in the fourth playoff spot behind Bakelite, Belleville Motors and Bateman Motors.

Line Up

Bakelite: Littlejohn 3b; Arnott 2b; Burley ss; Cousins c; Cook lf; Lawn rf, replaced by Lucas in 6th; Clarke cf, replaced by Bicknel in 7th, relieved by Stewart in 9th; Powers 1b; Burtch p.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

St. Augustine, Fla., Sept. 9 —(AP) —St. Augustine, oldest city in the United States, celebrated its 385th birthday anniversary yesterday. Cutting of a giant cake adorned with 385 candles, topped off the celebration.

Plumbers Move Back in Contention Beating Alemite

Howe and Hagerman's resurgent Plumbers moved back strongly into contention in the Commercial Softball League "A" play-offs last evening when they took a 12-2 decision from Stewart-Warner in something that was reminiscent of a ball game.

The Alemite crew came apart at the seams in the sixth frame and as the game went on looked less and less like a ball team, committing such atrocities afield that one might suspect they were deliberately delaying the game in the hope that it would be called off because of darkness. The alarmed Plumbers, sensing something ill in the wind, did their best to strike out and speed up the game, but couldn't seem to do anything but club the ball right at the spots where the Alemite fielders should have been. Of course, the Alemites weren't there and all these Plumber mistakes went for extra bases.

Finally, however, in the seventh inning, when it appeared that the game might not be completed, Ray Lunberg snatched Bill Spafford's long fly to centre field and Roger Mallory conveniently left third base to end the inning and make the game official.

A Triple Play

In the eighth, the Stewart-Warner nine carried shenanigans to the ultimate as the Plumbers pulled off the first triple play of the season. Jack Moon started it with a sharp grounder to third base with men on second and first, and ended it when he walked off first base by several feet to be tagged for the third out.

Howe and Hagerman scored the first run in the top of the first inning on an error and two singles, and added their second in the fourth, on a walk, a stolen base, a fielder's choice and a single. They poured over seven runs in the sixth and three more in the seventh.

Alemite counted twice in the sixth on a single, a walk, a fielder's choice and a double.

The game, if you use the word loosely, was one of the poorest seen in a long time and definitely not up to the calibre of ball that has been dished out in the "A" league all summer.

Al Adams did a commendable job on the hill for the winners, walking two, striking out six, and giving up six hits for two runs.

Harold Dracup started for Alemite and in five and one third innings, he walked two, struck out none, and gave up eight hits for six runs. Marty Halloran walked three, struck out one, and was hammered for five hits and six runs as his mates did little to support him in the field.

Line-ups:

Howe and Hagerman — Doyle 2b, M. Fitzgibbon 1b (replaced by Mallory in 3rd), Wardhaugh cf, D. Adams c, Bawden lf (replaced by E. Donovan in 2nd), Spafford ss, Hunter rf, Tomaso 3b, A. Adams p.

THIRTY-TWO SOLDIERS KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Roaring Gun Duel In Second Day on Hills Around Taegu

Smash Against Anchor Of Perimeter is Imminent

Tokyo, Sept. 11 — (AP) — American big guns today knocked at large numbers of North Korean artillery pieces in the second day of a roaring gun duel on the northwest hill approaches to Taegu.

A U. S. Eighth Army spokesman in Korea said the toll of red guns was "a great many"

But a new red Korean smash against the northwest anchor of the Allied defence perimeter appeared imminent.

Elsewhere on the front, red thrusts slackened before Allied counter-attacks.

The expected communist infantry drive on Taegu had not developed late Monday afternoon. A communist prisoner disclosed that the reds' time-table had called for an assault Monday on the city, northwestern anchor of the allied line.

The Eighth Army spokesman said it was believed great numbers of red Koreans were massed just beyond the communist forward positions north of Taegu.

The reds hurled two probing attacks, one a suicide charge, against U. S. 1st Cavalry positions five miles north of the city.

One American front-line officer said "We are having a field day" with artillery against these thrusts and the reds' big guns.

American artillery and Allied planes pounded the red troops ceaselessly. Nearly 40,000 reds are massed in this area, the tempting but bloody "bowling alley" corridor, for new smashes.

A semi-circle of allied positions guarded the flatlands leading to Taegu.

Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said the eastern gateway to Taegu was locked Monday by a South Korean drive northeast of Yongchon, 12 miles east of Taegu.

Drive More Than Mile

A spokesman said the South Koreans drove more than 1 mile in their initial thrust and still were moving ahead. Defensive lines around Yongchon, twice held by the reds, definitely have been secured, he said.

Associated Press correspondent Bem Price reported from the front that South Korean patrols knifed seven miles into red territory between Yongchon and Kyongju, but found little red strength in the rugged mountains where supply problems are enormous.

The patrol spotted two companies of red Koreans. Kyongju is a main highway junction southeast of Yongchon.

Cordova Man Struck by Car, Instantly Killed

Marmora — (Special)—Struck by a southbound car outside Marmora as he was walking home after attending Marmora Fair, Michael Coules, 67, of Cordova, was instantly killed early Saturday morning. Coules was single and had no relatives in the Marmora district.

The man was struck by a car driven by Leo Willman of Madoc and is believed to have stepped in front of the vehicle just as the Willman car was meeting a northbound car.

Willman swerved his car to avoid striking Coules and in doing so collided with the northbound auto driven by Gerald Caverly of Marmora township. Two passengers in the Caverly car were injured, Miss Eilleen McPherson, 20, Marmora district school teacher, suffering chin lacerations, a bruised knee and shock, while Mrs. John McGregor, of Marmora township, had her leg fractured and also suffered shock. The two women were attended by Dr. H. G. Parking of Marmora.

An inquest looking into the death of the dead man was ordered, the preliminary hearing being held Saturday before Coroner Dr. S. R. Beattie of Madoc and following identification of the boy by a neighbor, John Anderson of Cordova, was adjourned until September 18.

Jurors empanelled included Arnold Walker, foreman, Wm. Smith, Thos. Paranuik, W. J. Cottrell and James Sullivan.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constables Hector Gould, and T. Lummiss, both of Madoc.

Britain May Send 3 More Divisions To Germany

London, Sept. 11—(Reuters)—Prime Minister Attlee is expected to tell parliament tomorrow that Britain will send at least three more divisions to join the two already in Germany.

One of the new divisions would be armored.

The prime minister's announcement is likely to be made in his speech opening parliament's three-day defence debate. It would come on top of President Truman's weekend statement that the United States is sending more troops to Europe.

Highlight of parliament's defence debate is likely to be the first details of the new army planned under Britain's revised defence program. Military experts predict that the new army will have a ration of two armored divisions to four infantry divisions, with a strengthened paratroop force.

Attlee called his military chiefs-of-staff into a cabinet meeting here today, presumably to advise on technical points that may arise during parliament's debate.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 11 Synopsis — Moist easterly winds continue to dominate the weather picture across Ontario today. Skies are still cloudy over the entire province with occasional rain reported from scattered localities in southern sections. Little change is indicated for today and Tuesday.

Storm warnings have been hoisted at Lake Superior ports with easterly gales of 35 mph expected over open water.

PC'S SEEK TO KILL BILL GIVING HOWE CONTROL POWERS

Claim Bill Invasion Of Provincial Rights

Ottawa, Sept. 11 — (CP) —The Progressive Conservative party is seeking to kill a government bill which would vest in Trade Minister Howe wide powers to allocate and control commodities required in Canada's defence.

Describing the measure as "an invasion of provincial rights," John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) moved a motion in the Commons Saturday calling on the chamber not to give it second reading, approval in principle.

Backed by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and A. L. Smith (PC—Calgary West), Mr. Diefenbaker said the bill should be thrown out because the government:

1. "Failed to name and declare the national emergency upon which it seeks to base authority for this bill."

2. "Has not specified the materials and services which are to be subject to the provisions of the bill."

In the three-hour Saturday debate, controls bill found favor in Social Credit and C.C.F. ranks. The house rose before a vote could be taken on Mr. Diefenbaker's motion, but this likely will be done today.

At the house opening, External Affairs Minister Pearson said a government committee is giving consideration to means of cutting down on the issuance of passports to reds in Canada who go to Moscow and other communist centres for "subversive purposes."

He also stated that the resources department is studying means of preventing the kind of floods that devastated the Red River Valley in Manitoba. Reports would be handed to the Canada-United States international joint commission on boundary waters.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the controls bill now before the chamber goes further "than any legislation that has ever been brought before this House."

The powers contained in the bill were "absolute" powers. That kind of power, when placed in the hands of a minister without clauses to define it, was "too great."

Mr. Drew said Mr. Howe had indicated that the measure would provide him with merely "stand-by" power.

"The suggestion is made that if the gentle suggestion of the minister is not acted upon quickly enough, the power will be connected. The minister says that this power is to be something in the nature of a club to get results."

"Your words, not mine," interjected Mr. Howe.

what he says," continued Mr. Drew. "He wants behind him power of this kind so that he can say to anybody he deals with:

"'You do this, or else'."

Former OPP Constable Keays Arrested After Whipping Out Revolver in Court

Ottawa. Sept. 11 — (CP) — J. E. Keags, former Ontario Provincial police constable who figured prominently in an Ontario police probe, today made a dramatic appearance in county court, whipped out a Browning automatic revolver and declared himself "subject to arrest." He was immediately taken into custody.

Keays, sometimes known as Soubliere, was the central figure in the 1949 Royal Commission investigation into provincial police activities at Belleville, Ont. Although that probe led to his resignation from the force, he appeared in county court in full uniform.

He stood up in court just as the session was about to adjourn, and shouted:

"Your Worship, I am Provincial Constable Keays of Belleville. I am here to render myself subject to arrest."

With that he whipped out the automatic. The weapon was not loaded, but Keays held a clip of ammunition in his hand. Magistrate Austin O'Connor ordered his arrest. Provincial Police in the courthouse closed in on him.

Keays struggled. Two officers overpowered and handcuffed him and led him out of the courthouse.

Keays demanded of assistant Crown Attorney Sam Tepofsky and Provincial Police Corporal, George Nault:

"What am I being arrested for?"

"You are being arrested for carrying a concealed weapon and for causing a disturbance."

Police said they believed Keays made his appearance in court to test his belief that despite the findings of Mr. Justice Keiller Mackay following the Belleville inquiry, he never had been officially dismissed from the force.

When Keays was overpowered, Cpl. Nault ordered the police tunic stripped from the prisoner. Keays demanded of the corporal:

"Do you know whose coat this is, George?"

"I don't know," Cpl. Nault replied.

"Do you think it is the property of the force?" asked Keays. Nault did not reply.

Acheson Expected to Press For Strong Build-up of West European Defences at Parley

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Sept. 11 (AP) — Diplomatic officials predicted today that State Secretary Acheson of the United States will press firmly this week to put over plans for a strong buildup of Western Europe's defence forces by next July 1.

His arguments will be greatly strengthened, these authorities believe, by President Truman's carefully timed weekend decision permitting "substantial" U.S. troop reinforcements in Europe and his call for home-front sacrifices.

The troop-increases—an estimated five to 10 divisions as they become available— were made dependent on matching action by Britain, France and other allies in the conflict with Russia.

Therefore the Western foreign ministers with whom Acheson will be meeting Tuesday through Saturday are already on notice that the United States' contributions to their defences are based on the principle of mutual effort and not on American Willingness to assume a disproportionate share of the burden.

The sessions will begin here tomorrow when Acheson meets with Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Schuman of France. Foreign Ministers of the other North Atlantic powers will join in the talks Friday and Saturday.

Acheson set a keynote of confidence for the vital western talks late yesterday. He declared he is sure that with "modern weapons and ingenuity" the western world can build a defence that will stand firm against the superior manpower strength of Soviet communism.

Democratic Strength Only War Preventative Says Crerar at Legion Convention

Winnipeg, Sept. 11 (CP)—The Canadian Army's commander in the Second World War said last night that a third global war will surely grow out of Korea unless the democracies build a solid political, economic and military barricade against the Soviet Union.

Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, of Ottawa, spoke as grand president of the Canadian Legion. He was opening the Legion's 13th Dominion convention which lasts five days.

"Canada, in effect, already is at war," he said. Korea was the opening battle in a long and desperate conflict "with a sphere of action probably involving the greater part of the world."

The one way to prevent world war was "to face the Soviet government with firmness and consistency, backed up by great, actual, military strength."

The democracies could pray Churchill was right in saying there still is a short breathing space to build military strength, but "surely we cannot be so completely negligent as to waste a minute. . . ."

Russia and her satellites had vast military strength that could be put into action today or tomorrow. The democracies had only potential forces which would take 1 1-2 or two years to put in the field.

"Unless we in the democracies now are prepared to sacrifice some of our comfort and our wealth in now erecting a solid, political, economic and military dike—strong enough definitely to contain Soviet Russia and its satellite states—a Third World War. . . will surely break out."

Gen. Crerar said he has seen newspaper reports that universal military training and large armed forces in Canada would be wasteful of, and even damaging to, Canada's defence potential.

"Well," he said, "if Soviet Russia and its satellites overrun what yet remains of Europe and Asia outside the iron curtain . . Canada's defence potential and that of the United States can be put in the wastebasket. . .

"With the great land mass of Europe and Asia. . . under control of Moscow, the Communist plan of world dictatorship would have developed to the point of practicable attainment."

Last night Hon. Hugues Lapointe, minister of Veterans' Affairs, read the convention a message from Prime Minister St. Laurent. The Prime Minister praised the Legion's example of self-sacrifice and devotion to duty.

A heavy agenda faces almost 1,000 delegates at four days of business sessions in Civic auditorium, starting Monday. Defence Minister Claxton was to attend today's meeting.

Cloverdale, B.C., Sept. 11 — (CP) — A New Westminster, B.C., pilot was killed yesterday while "buzzing" the farm home of his fiancee, municipal police reported.

The pilot, Tom Trowsdale, died in the arms of the man who was to have been his father-in-law. His fiancee, Irene Mitchell, was at work at the time of the crash.

Scene of the crash was a field two miles west of here and about 25 miles southeast of Vancouver.

Both Trowsdale and fiancee were employed at the Provincial Mental Hospital.

Another air crash occurred Sunday in the lower mainland area, near Ladner, B.C., but the two occupants of the plane walked away uninjured.

Woman, Two Men Arrested Outside Montreal Plant

Montreal, Sept. 11 — (CP) — Madeleine Parent, Quebec organizer of the United Textile Workers Union of America was arrested today on a charge of disturbing the peace in a fight outside the Hochelaga plant of the Dominion Textile Company here.

Police also arrested two other U.T.W. employees, Paul Croteau and William Mozder on charges of assaulting Sarto Larivier and Gabriel Cromier of the rival Textile Workers Union of America.

Police said Miss Parent and the two men clashed with the T.W.U. representatives at the plant gate in connection with a vote scheduled there Sept. 22 to decide union affiliation of some 5,000 Dominion Textile employees.

The two locals, Local 102 of the U.T.W. and 1107 of the T.W.U.A. have been involved in a dispute over representation for the past year. Textile Workers Union officials charge that the rival union is communist dominated.

The vote on representation was ordered late last week by the Labor Relations Board. It will be held simultaneosly at each of the five company plants in the city.

TRUMAN SETS UP CONTROL SYSTEM FOR U.S. DEFENCE

Curbs Voluntary Now Ceilings When Needed

Washington, Sept. 11 — (AP)—President Truman Saturday night set up a powerful new wage-price-production control system to steer the United States through a defence program that may last for many years and cost far more than $30,000,000,000 annually.

Truman created a new economic stabilization agency to curb both prices and wages by voluntary means now — and by war-style ceilings when and if needed.

Warning that the fight against communist aggression will demand sacrifices from every American, Truman declared that price and wage controls will be imposed vigorously and promptly if either wages or prices get out of hand.

He served notice that industry "to the extent necessary" will have to stop making some civilian goods and begin turning out military equipment.

Check Inflation

In a radio - television address to the country, he called for these further steps to spur production, keep inflation in check and put the mobilization program on a pay-as-you-go basis:

1. Higher taxes for everybody. Truman said his call for a $5,000,000,000 rise in income taxes is only the first instalment. He asked an excess profits tax to make sure nobody will "get rich out of this emergency."

2. Harder work and longer hours for everybody.

3. No pay raises beyond those needed to keep up with the cost of living.

4. An all-out drive by industry to produce more goods by better methods. The president said the national economy should top the $300,000,000,000 - a - year goal he has set for 1954.

5. No hoarding by individuals or by industries.

To co-ordinate the whole program Truman named W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Symington thus becomes an economic policeman over the U. S.

FURS RECOVERED

Toronto, Sept. 11—(CP)—Furs valued at $30,000 were recovered early today within 15 minutes after they were loaded on a stolen truck outside a fur store in nearby Thornhill. A woman living near the store called police, who broadcast a description of the truck. As police closed in at 70 miles an hour, the truck plunged into a ditch and its driver fled.

Passenger Train Plows Into Rear Of Troop Train

Wreck Near Columbus, O., Four Coaches Telescoped

Coschocton, O. Sept. 11 (AP) —Thirty-two persons were killed early today when a passenger train crashed into the rear of a stalled troop train in the fog, Coroner William E. Phaadt reported.

The coroner said the figure was "at least 32 and possibly more," he placed the injured at 40 or 50.

Coshocton, O., Sept. 11—(AP)—The Spirit of St. Louis, crack passenger train of the Pennsylvania Railroad, plowed into a troop train stalled by mechanical trouble in thick fog early today.

Twenty-five soldiers, all members of the Pennsylvania National Guard, were killed.

Approximately 60 other Guardsmen, en route to camp in Indiana to enter federal service, were injured.

Railroad officials said "we won't have anything on cause of the wreck until after an investigation is made."

Most of the dead and injured were in an old-fashioned coach on the end of the 20-car troop train. Some were sleeping, others were being awakened for breakfast when the crash occurred at 6:15 a.m. EDT.

The rear coach looked like a pile of tin cans and rubbish after it had been rammed. Its roof, 70 feet long, was compressed to 10 feet.

Remove Bodies

Four hours after the accident workmen with acetylene torches still were removing bodies from the wreckage. Each was tenderly laid, covered with an army blanket, on the ground as a heavy rain fell.

The troop train had stopped, apparently due to mechanical trouble, one mile east of West La Fayette. The town is seven miles west of Coshocton.

Red flares were put out, a train crew member said, but they apparently were not visible to the engineer of the approaching diesel-drawn Spirit of St. Louis.

The crash came five minutes after the troop train halted.

First reports indicated no one aboard the 17-car "Spirit" was killed, although its locomotive toppled over an embankment.

"We either were stopped or slowed down when the crash came," said Capt. Robert Short, battery commander whose men slept in the third car from the rear.

The crash occurred about 6 A.M. EDT on a straight stretch of track just west of West Lafayette, seven miles east of here.

Physicians, nurses and blood donors were called in from Cambridge, Coshocton, Zanesville and New Philadelphia. The Ohio highway patrol sent whole blood to the scene.

19-Car Train

The troop train was made up of two baggage cars, 16 coaches and two kitchen cars.

The Spirit of St. Louis was bound from New York to St. Louis.

A P.R.R. spokesman at Philadelphia said members of the train crew of the Spirit of St. Louis were injured slightly. The crack 17-car passenger train was pulled by two diesel engines.

The diesels were derailed and rolled down an embankment, the spokesman said. Wreckage from the splintered troop coaches blocked the right-of-way.

A coach in the centre of the troop train was derailed by the jarring crash but the spokesman said no soldier was injured in this coach.

The Red Cross reported that disaster stations were set up at an armory and two churches in Coshocton.

Covered With Blankets

Rain began falling as the bodies were temporarily laid out in a field, 40 feet from the track. They were covered with army blankets.

Had the wreck occurred 15 minutes later, the men would have been at breakfast in the kitchen car, six cars from the rear, one soldier said.

The troop train had stopped, apparently due to mechanical trouble,, and flares had been put out, railroad men said. It was foggy and visibility was poor.

A diesel was pushing the troop train and a steam locomotive pulling it as the train halted on a slight grade.

Liquor, Beer Price Boost Expected

Toronto, Sept. 11 — (CP) — A boost in liquor and beer prices as a result of Ottawa's increased taxation will be announced in the next few days, Hon. Arthur Welsh, chairman of the Liquor Control Board, announced today.

"The price of both liquor and beer will certainly have to be raised but I cannot say just how much as yet," he said.

Col. Welsh returned to his office today after attending a conference of provincial liquor commissioners in New Brunswick.

Price Controls, Extension of Social Security Demanded by T.L.C. Head

Montreal, Sept. 11 (CP)—Price controls and the extension of social security were demanded today by Percy Bengough in his presidential address to the 65th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Opening the convention of his 480,000-member organization, he blamed lack of price control in large measure for the rail strike that tied up Canada's trains for nine days last month. "Governmental failure to implement price control, and to formulate a comprehensive transportation policy was the basic cause of the railway impasse," Mr. Bengough said.

He said the government and "its high paid servant," Donald Gordon, President of the Canadian National Railways, "must accept the responsibility and the blame for the strike and any blame for the suffering it has caused our citizens."

Mr. Bengough said Canadians wanted a comprehensive scheme of social security. And while voicing strong support for Canada's defence measures against the communist threat, he said Canadians should not be "fooled into believing defence expenditures preclude a wide measure of social security.

Failure to make social security available, he said, would merely be unloading the cost of defence on the aged and the infirm.

Mr. Bengough struck out sharply at communism in his speech, delivered to a convention that had just undergone a purge of suspected communists among the delegates.

Yesterday the T.L.C.'s credentials committee refused registration to 20 delegates from seven unions, basically on the grounds of suspicion of communism though it employed technicalities in some cases.

The suspects' cases were still under consideration by another congress committee at opening time today, but it appeared likely most of the banned 20 would be kept out of the convention floor for the duration of the week-long meeting.

This was the T.L.C.'s second major wallop at reds in a year. Last fall at its convention in Calgary, it threw out the left wing Canadian Seamen's Union after a major internal upheaval over the issue.

Yesterday's committee action did not deprive the unions of representation. The ban was imposed only on certain individual delegates, leaving others from the unions free to attend.

In his presidential address Mr. Bengough said those in unions who follow the communist line are dupes of the Russian dictatorship.

Student Council Fees Increased At Collegiate

The rising cost-of-living has made inroads on student pocketbooks this year—and not just because the price of soft drinks and candy took a jump last week, either. Student council fees, which have in former years rested at the dollar level, jumped to $1.25 this year.

The new rate will apply to all students except those in Grade 9. One reason for the increase is that insurance rates, which apply to all students in the school, have gone up. Formerly, each student was given $50 accident coverage, with a $10 deductible clause in it, each year, for about 25c. This year, the rate has gone to $1.00 for three years, or slightly more than 33c per year.

School sessions will get back to routine this week, with the first student assembly scheduled for Wednesday morning. For the first time, the student body will have to be divided into two sections for assembly purposes, due to the large enrolment. The auditorium holds about 900, and more than 1100 students are registered.

Senior assembly will be held Wednesday morning in the first period, of the day and juniors will assemble in the first afternoon period on the same day. Programs for the first sessions has not been made up as yet.

Conditions have become so crowded at the collegiate that the student cafeteria is being used for classrooms, and the library was subdivided during the summer, to provide more room.

Transient Loses Leg Below Knee Boarding Freight

Apparently slipping as he attempted to board a freight at the Canadian National Railways coal chute east of the city, George Kingston, 40, of Carleton Place, had his left leg severed below the knee early Sunday as he fell beneath the wheels of the train.

Railroad workers found the badly injured man lying beside the tracks shortly after seven o'clock. He was rushed to hospital where the leg was amputated.

Police stated that Kingston was a transient attempting to obtain a ride out of the city and believed the man had slipped as he attempted to board a slowly moving freight. It was not known how long the man had lain beside the tracks before being found but although he had suffered greatly from shock and loss of blood he was still conscious when found.

His condition at the hospital was said late Sunday to be favorable He was attended by Dr. V. Blakslee.

Formby Heads Brilliant Cast In New Show

Those theatre-goers who saw George Formby and his "London Music Hall Varieties" during his trans-Canada tour last season may wonder if this famous singing comedian can possibly surpass the outstanding musical revue he brought to this country a few months ago but, according to advance reports, George Formby has assembled an entirely new "London Music Hall Varieties" edition that is admittedly the envy of British music hall managers. The top calibre of these acts will be evident when George Formby's new musical revue is presented at the Memorial Arena on Wednesday night.

Top Dancing Team

Included in this latest edition of the "London Music Hall Varieties" for the forthcoming and widely-heralded coast-to-coast Canadian tour are Mills and Belita who, in the opinion of the majority of Britain's theatre-goers are the top sophisticated dancing team today. Douglas Mills was the featured dancer in such London Coliseum extravaganzas as "White Horse Inn" and "Casanova" and in later Ivor Novello musicals until he enlisted in the Royal Navy at the outbreak of the last war and served for three years on the famed H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth. His partner for the past four years has been Betty (Belita) McGill, herself a star in her own right in British musical comedies until she teamed up with this suave dancing partner.

For a couple of generations, Hershel (Jizz) Henlere has enjoyed an international reputation for his piano versatility, including Royal Command performances before the present monarchs as well as Queen Mary and the late King George V. Another in the fine Formby line-up is Harry Bailey, world-famous Irish comedian and star of British films and the B.B.C. Others in this second edition of the "London Music Hall Varieties" are Henri Vadden, another Royal Command performer and acknowledged as Britain's foremost juggler; the Carsony Brothers, top acrobatic act, who have played in every major music hall in Europe; Marion Sanders, personality songstylist and favorite over the B.B.C. And let's not forget George Formby, star of the "London Music Hall Varieties", who has long been a favorite with Canadian stage and movie goers, in addition to the collectors of his inimitable phonograph records.

Jewish Community Ushers in Celebration of New Year 5711

(Prepared by Rabbi A. M. Babb of Sons of Jacob Synagogue)

With sunset today, the Jewish community of Belleville, Picton and Trenton in accordance with age-old tradition will usher in the year 5711 with a special service in the Sons of Jacob Synagogue. Celebration of Rosh Hashanah (New Year) will continue until sunset Wednesday with services held thrice daily. The services will be conducted by Rabbi A. M. Babb assisted by Cantor Perlov.

The Biblical name for the Festival is called "Yom Teruah" (Day of Blowing of Trumpets). Hence the blowing of the Shofar (Ram's Horn) during the two days of Rosh Hasanah. In ancient Israel the Shofar was blown in times of distress as well as on joyful and solemn occasions. The Shofar calls to the mind of the Jew the glorious history of its people.

According to the Talmud the shrill voice of the Shofar calls: "Awake, awake you Israelites from your slumber of indifference and carelessness. Arouse from your pleasures and sins. Examine your ways and remember your God and return to the path of duty and righteousness."

Day of Memorial

The second Biblical name for Rosh Hashanah is "Yom Zikoron" (Day of Memorial). On these days the individual Jew is called upon to recall his actions during the past year. If he has done wrong he must endeavor to obtain pardon for his shortcomings and resolve to do better in the New Year.

The day is also called "Day of Judgment" (Yom Hadin). Contrary to other religions, New Year's day [illegible] is a day of serious[illegible] by many a day of religious awe. According to the sages it is a day in which the world was called into being, and the day on which God calls all His creatures to stand in judgment before Him. The Book of Life and Death is opened and on its pages is inscribed the fate of all men for the coming year.

The paramount thought that Rosh Hashanah awakens in the Jew is the flight of time. A year of life's journey has flowed into the ocean of time. How was the year spent? How many good and noble deeds are inscribed in the pages of his book of life? Has he improved in goodness, knowledge and wisdom? Whom has he offended or wronged? Has he been faithful to his duties? What has the New Year in store for him? Sunshine or clouds, health or sickness, joy or sorrow, happiness or misfortune, life or death? These are the thoughts that permeate the soul of the Jew when he sits in the Synagogue during these days. Such thoughts lead the individual Jew to a self-examination, and to the improvement of his conduct.

Following two days of Rosh Hasanah, begin the eight days of penitence and which culminates with the Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) which will be celebrated this year on Sept. 21st.

Days Breathe with Sacredness

No other holiday has such influence upon the Jew as the high holidays of this month. These Holy Days breathe with sacredness, and bring the greatest moral lesson to the Jew. The prayers and liturgy of the festival are the finest in human expression. During these days the Jew prays not for Israel alone, but for the glory and splendor of the entire human race. Expressions such as "Impose O Lord, Thine awe upon all Thy works; may they all form one league to do Thy will with a perfect heart. Our God and God of our fathers, reign Thou in Thy glory over the whole universe and shine forth in the splendor of Thy might upon all the inhabitants of Thy world" permeate the entire liturgy of the Festival.

How the world today needs this lesson from the Hebrew Rosh Hashanah? If the world today is sick at heart, if civilization lies prostrate, it is because the nations of the world have not yet learned that the happiness of humanity is its own happiness, that real civilization and humanitarianism can result only if every nation thinks not merely of and for itself but of and for humanity as well.

1,103 Students Enrolled At Belleville Collegiate, Girls Outnumber Boys

The girls outnumber the boys at Belleville Collegiate Institute this year. Enrolment figures released this morning show a total of 1,103 students, 560 of whom make up the female count. The figures are further divided into the collegiate and vocational sides of the school, with the latter losing the numbers battle.

Thus far, 610 students are registered on the collegiate side, and only 493 have picked timetables for vocational studies. Further subdivided, the attendance totals show 293 boys and 317 girls in collegiate classes, and 250 boys, with 243 girls on the vocational side.

Timetables are still in the process of being straightened out, with students trying to fit their required subjects into the master sheet devised by principal G. E. Currie.

Four Replacements

Of the seven new teachers reported last week as being new on the staff, four are replacements. John Gluck, who came from the Fort William Vocational School, is replacing George Anderson as drafting instructor. Bernard Kinlin, a commercial teacher, came to Belleville from Parry Sound High School to take over from the former Miss Marion Smith, who married during the summer.

Miss Nancy Redfern, new senior girls' physical education instructress, formerly of Renfrew Collegiate, replaces Miss May McKinney, who has gone to Toronto. Fourth replacement is Ernest Tindale, a graduate of the Ontario College of Education, who is replacing Miss Daisy Davidson in art instruction.

Another new teacher is John Snetsinger, who comes from Cornwall is a graduate of O.C.E. and is taking his first position since graduation. Mr. Snetsinger will teach commercial subjects and social studies. Also new is John Fry, who had teaching experience at Dutton, Ont., and was principal at Matachewan Continuation School until he came to Belleville. Mr. Fry is a specialist in French and German, and will teach junior French and Social Studies.

A graduate of B.C.I., Queen's University and O.C.E., Charles Sloan is accepting his first position in the teaching world this year at his alma mater. Mr. Sloan will teach English and Social Studies.

'Suicide' Squads Searching Miners Are Called Off

New Cumnock, Scotland, Sept. 11 (Reuters) —Safety inspectors today called back "suicide" squads searching 700 feet underground for 13 missing Scottish miners as driving rain threatened to wash more mud into the slime choked workings.

The men have been trapped in the New Cumnock Castle colliery since Thursday night.

Drenched relatives, huddled in groups in the flooded fields, looked on in silence as rescuers clambered up from the 300-yard wide crater making the subsidence which originally trapped 129 men underground.

Extra pumps were rushed to the spot, but firemen were doubtful whether they could keep pace with flood water rushing down the surrounding slopes.

Access to the pit through the crater has been declared unsafe, but the search is to begin again as soon as the entrance has been strengthened.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 11 — (CP)—Prices pushed mildly higher as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Base Metal stocks held most of the limelight, continuing Friday's strong advances into new high price ground. The remainder of the list had difficulty making headway as profit-taking sales appeared on last Friday's gains.

Almost all base metal stocks trading pushed upwards. Price increases in lead and zinc Friday gave the list a strong push and buying strengthened today.

Market leaders like Consolidated Smelters and Quemont paced the group with gains ranging up to $1. United Keno Hill, Waite Amulet, Anacon Lead and Ascot Corp., also attracted considerable attention.

Industrials were held to small fractional changes. Papers, utilities, steels and liquors climbed while foods and a few refining oils eased.

Western oils slipped slightly on mild pressure in Central Leduc, Calvin and Anglo - Canadian. Golds were narrow with a few junior producers adding pennies. Lomega Mines, in its first appearance on the board, traded heavily at about 20 cents.

Destroyers Will be Relieved And Replaced by Next April

Ottawa, Sept. 11 — (CP) —The navy today announced that it will relieve and replace Canada's three destroyers in Korean waters with other Canadian naval units by next April.

"The relieving ships will be selected from destroyers now based on the east coast," the navy said in a statement.

First to become available on the Atlantic seaboard will be the destroyers Nootka and Huron. The navy gave no indication when the actual dispatch of these warships will take place.

It said:

"The three Canadian destroyers now operating with United Nations naval forces in the Korea theatre will all have been replaced by other units of the Royal Canadian Navy by April 1, 1951, according to present plans"

Canada's three destroyers in action in the Korean war since July 30 are Sioux, Cayuga and Athabaskan. They left their west-coast base at Esquimalt, B.C., on July 5.

It is intended that after between six and eigth months of operations in Korean waters, these destroyers will return to their home dockyards for refitting the navy said.

It also will give the ship's companies—about 700 men—a chance to get leave and to take courses required for promotion.

Since early August the three destroyers have been attached to a United Nations fleet operating off the Korean west coast. They have undertaken extensive duties including convoy, patrol, blockade and bombardment of enemy installations.

The identity of the other war was not determined. Masterson suffered scalp and facial lacerations.

On the Belleville - Foxboro highway on Sunday two cars collided at the intersection of the 5th concession of Thurlow township. Miss Helen Orser, College St., was driving a pick-up truck west on the township road and on entering the highway was in collision with a southbound car driven by Kenneth Barriage, Pinnacle Street. Both Mr. and Mrs. Barriage were shaken up by the impact and were taken to hospital.

SIGNS OF BOUNTY

Everywhere time tells that autumn is not far away. The fields are witnesses of the march of the summer season to its close less than two weeks away. On market days in town and city is seen the wealth of a season's growth in all forms of produce for the feeding of men, women and children of this land and many other lands not so blessed with fertility of soil as that on which Canada produces her riches. The Saturday markets and the lesser two markets are a rich tribute to the industry of Canada's agricultural population. And not only on the market squares but in the provision shops there is the evidence of the fertility of the soil. It makes for a happy Dominion to know that this country creates a wealth untold in food annually for Canadians and for export.

No one needs to be unusually alert to note the signs in this evidence of plenty to realize that this is the time of bounty from a kindly Providence and from which will take care of the leaner periods of the year at home and abroad.

Now nature has almost completed the annual round of duty from sowing to the harvest home festival which brings to people's hearts a sense of gratitude for the blessings which are theirs.

To many persons the coming weeks are among the choicest of the year in the sense of satisfaction they bring to mankind.

This intense satisfaction and the sense of gratitude to Providence for all the blessings of the year is expressed in countless harvest home festivals and in the national Thanksgiving Day.

There is yet a long stretch of time in which fine Canadian weather may be expected to prevail.

AN EXPERIMENT

Before the year is out, it may be that scientists will learn whether human beings can survive by breathing a fluid instead of air.

One of the boldest experiments is being tried out at this time in the employment of a fluid in which oxygen is dissolved under pressure at the Illinois College of Medicine. Word from Chicago is that the scientists expect to submerge a monkey into a tankful of oxygen-filled fluid some time during the coming autumn. If the plan works out, it is said that trials may be made next on human beings.

Is it too fantastic? Well the scientists ask one to remember two things, that lungs use oxygen, not air. And many babies start life with amniotic fluid in their lungs. This is expelled when they take the first breath of air.

What would be the result? A man with a liquid in his lungs would be a durable creature and could go deep into the ocean.

The possibility of fluid breathing was discussed by Dr. Stein, assistant professor of psychiatry and assistant to the director of laboratories at the Illinois Neuropsychiatric Institute and by Dr. Warren S. McCullough who is professor of psychology and psychiatry. It was agreed by these experts that knowledge obtained from the project had shown that such breathing is theoretically feasible. The function vital to life is to get sufficient oxygen through the membrane coating of the lung to the lung capillaries. They state that water will not do, it contains traces of dissolved free oxygen — enough to sustain fish with their large gill areas for extracting it, but not enough to prevent suffocation in an air breathing animal.

But why not a liquid containing a high percentage of oxygen and the same minerals and proteins found in body fluids? This offers a possibility of sufficient oxygen supply without the danger of damage to lung tissues.

If the monkey experiment is successful, means will have to be worked out for its practical application to man.

A helmet, with the special fluid surrounding the head and filling the diver's lungs, conceivably could be used for deep sea work. A rocket traveller could be immersed in a tank or breathe the fluid via tube from a container strapped to his back.

TWO CENTURIES OF TARTAN

The earliest export order for tartan to North America that has been found in Scotland is one of the 200 objects on view in an exhibition, entitled "Two Centuries of Tartan," being held during the Festival period. Dated 1797, it is a request from Thomas Heriot, an Edinburgh tailor, to William Wilson and Son, a Bannockburn firm who were the principal manufacturers of tartan in Scotland from the close of the eighteenth century to the close of the nineteenth. The request is for two pieces of tartan "the same as I got in July last to send to America."

The letter forms part of a collection of more than 30,000 exhibits belonging to Mr. J. Telfer, Dunbar, from which the complete exhibition display has been drawn.

Prints illustrating the revival of a vogue for tartan when George IV visited the capital in 1822, show one flamboyant style favored by Sir William Curtis, Lord Mayor of London, with tartan pantaloons and a sporran.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1950, Edgar A. Guest)

LUCKY

"Lucky!" sneered a fellow grim.
No one near-by to remind him:
When good fortune smiled on him
He was out where luck could find him.

When on shore the smart ones stayed
Change of wind and weather wishing.
"Lucky!" was the comment made.
He was lucky! He went fishing.

Say it often, as men will,
Some are lucky, past denying;
But we should remember still:
Luck will seek the lad who's trying.

Luck the quitter passes by.
Doomed to failure it will grade him.
Who needs help to win must try
And be out where luck can aid him.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The number of us who do not in the least mind somebody reading over our shoulders must be extremely small. It might be reasonable to say that ninety-nine out of a hundred of us actively dislike anyone reading over our shoulder. And of that number, possibly twenty-five resent it so hotly that it amounts to a sort of phobia.

If you will take note in a street car or bus, you will see that nearly everyone who is reading a newspaper is so holding the paper, or sitting in such an attitude, that the persons next on either side cannot get a glimpse of the sheet.

If you will make a little more attentive survey, you will observe certain of them not merely holding the paper so that nobody else can see it, but are casting sly, auspicious and even hostile glances at their neighbors, as though expecting them to be peeping; and even hitching their shoulders in gestures of impatience and irritation, as if they had caught somebody in the act, and were publicly discouraging them. These are the ones with the phobia.

This curious characteristic in us does not apply only to strangers. Some of us detest even our brides, or our beloved children, peering over our shoulders at what we are reading. We push them away, kindly but firmly.

What the source of this queer quirk in us can be, even the psychologists cannot tell. It may be the vestige of some very ancient instinct in us to guard what we are eating. For example, a dog does not like even its own master or mistress to come in over its shoulder while it feeds. The effort of concentration which we new put into reading may be akin to the concentration we used to put on our food back in the days when we were nearer the dog in nature.

Next queerest to the dislike of anybody peering over our shoulder, however, is the almost overpowering desire, when we sit beside someone reading, to peer.

THE FIERY FURNACE

Noncomformists—we hate them when they contradict us, and we glorify them and call them saints if they play ball on our team.

History is full of the stories of nonconformists. Socrates was one; and so were Amos, Jeremiah, John the Baptist, St. Paul, and—most significant of all—Jesus of Nazareth. In the Christian era the biographies of nonconformists light up the pages of secular history and give these pages a glory in spite of their sordidness.

There is a great narrative in the Book of Daniel about the three Hebrews who would not bow down and worship the king's golden image and were thrown into the fiery furnace. What happened thereafter made King Nebuchardnezzar's hair stand on end. As he peered into the furnace, he saw these three Jewish captives walking about amid the flames unharmed. Most significant, there were not just three of them—with them was a fourth figure "like until a Son of Man".

Be sure that if you are a nonconformist you may sometime be thrown into a fiery furnace. But if you have the companionship of One "like unto a Son of Man" you will walk through the flames in comfort, unharmed, and conscious of an inspiring fellowship.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

STUMBLEBUM, KNOW THYSELF

A friend of mine who lives in Greenwich Village swears he heard a moocher deliver the following spiel to a lady on West 8th Street:

"You ask, Madam, how a man with a Harvard accent got to be a bum. Well, you've given me a civil dime and that entitles you to a civil answer: The fact of the matter is that I speak with a Harvard accent for the best of reasons—I went to Harvard.

"In my third year at college, I decided I wanted to be a playwright, and shortly after I graduated cum laude, I finished my first play. And it was a great moment for me, some months later, when I stood in the wings of a Broadway theatre and watched its opening performance.

"Next morning, the critics reported that the play had its entertaining moments, but was a bit on the reminiscent side. The first act reminded Atkinson of Clifford Odets; the second, according to Chapman, smacked of Bill Saroyan, and the third, in Morehouse's opinion, was a steal from Eugene O'Neill.

"Well, nobody likes to be accused of pilfering the brains of his betters, and so I gave up the theatre and tackled music. I rented a piano, enrolled at Julliard, and after three years of hard work succeeded in having my first symphony performed by the Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall.

"The critics unanimously pronounced it a good symphony, a very good one, in fact—but reminiscent. Olin Downs pointed out there was a bit of Sibelius in my main theme, and Virgil Thompson, always the perfectionist, said he was intrigued by the curious blend of Wagner and Debussy in the second movement.

"I, of course, still had my heart set on expressing my own individuality, and so I abandoned music and turned to oil painting. I went to the Art Students League, sketched at Provincetown for several summers, and after completing over a hundred canvasses I was fortunate enough to get myself a one-man show at a 57th Street gallery.

"It was the some old story: The art critics went out of their way to be kind, but once again I was Joe Reminiscent. My landscapes, it seemed, reminded them of Corot; the coloration of my still life was too Matisse-ish, and as for my scenes at Coney Island, one writer opined that Reginald Marsh wouldn't be out of line if he instituted suit.

"Well, madam, I had to face up to facts. It was obvious that arts would never bring out the Real Me, and so after brooding about it I decided to follow the calling which produces more rugged individualists than any other—cab driving.

"Again I went through the necessary apprenticeship. A garage mechanic in my neighborhood taught me how to manoeuvre in traffic, I studied the street maps of all five boroughs, and finally, through a political connection, I was granted a license by the Hack Bureau.

"The very next day, however, I hadn't been out of the garage more than twenty minutes when a motorcycle cop blew his whistle and pulled alongside. As he wrote out a ticket he explained I had been speeding like Barney Oldfield, rounding corners like Floyd Davis, and burning oil like Sir Malcolm Campbell.

"Well, I was so annoyed with myself that I got out of the cab and left it in the middle of the street.

"Since I was reminiscent, even as a cab driver, I made up my mind right then and there that the only way I could ever find myself was to be myself. And that madam, is how I happened to become a bum."

Mackenzie's Column:

Dutch New Guinea Now in Dispute Between Countries

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

With much of Asia revolting against "western imperialism" it's interesting to see both The Netherlands and the new Republic of Indonesia vying for the privilege of colonizing Dutch New Guinea, whose possession now is in dispute between them.

In fairness one hastens to add that Dutch New Guinea presents a unique situation. It is called the last stand of stone age man because it is inhabited by primitive head-hunters and cannibals. It will require generations to educate these wild folk to the point where they can establish civilized communities. Meantime, of course, some outside guidance and protection will be imperative.

Thus the question of "imperialism," in the general accepted sense, doesn't arise in this case. Still, that term of opprobrium is bound to come up sooner or later, and so must be taken into account by any power — Asiatic or Western — which undertakes colonization.

New Guinea — world's third largest island—nestles up against the Equator just north of Australia. The western part is Dutch and the eastern is Australian. It is hot and humid, insect-infested and fever-ridden. And there are the stone age savages.

However, from the point of view of colonization, it has rich gold, coal, copper and silver deposits. It has oil-fields and vast timber lands. Rubber and coffee are among its products.

Wants Country Transferred

These would seem to be reasons enough why both The Netherlands and Indonesia are anxious to develop Dutch New Guinea. Of course The Netherlands already is in possession, but Indonesia has demanded that it be transferred to the republic, claiming that Dutch New Guinea rightfully belongs in the group of islands forming the republic.

A joint Dutch-Indonesian commission now is engaged in trying to settle this issue, and a decision has been called for before January, 1951. Thus far no agreement is in sight and it appears the argument may wind up in the United Nations.

The Indonesians already have tossed the charge of "imperialism" into the Dutch camp. The Dutch reply is that this shoe also fits Indonesia, since the Papuans are a distinct race which has no relation to the Indonesian peoples. Therefore, it is argued, Indonesia would be as much a colonial and "imperialist" power as would The Netherlands.

The dispute has become so bitter that fighting language has been used.

Australia naturally is vitally interested and has been in close consultation with The Netherlands. There even has been some suggestion of joint Australian - Netherlands rule of New Guinea.

All the more reason, one would think, why the problem should wind up in the United Nations.

Urges Street Named After Late R. Bogle

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

By Friday's paper I see that something is to be done re the duplication of street names.

This was discussed at one of our recent meetings and I was instructed to contact somebody in authority re same.

What we would like to see, is one street named after the late Robert Bogle, preferably in the new veterans' area, something like Bogle Gardens.

The late Robert Bogle was indeed a real friend in need to some of the First World War veterans, never was a man turned away empty handed and besides this, he helped the various veterans' organizations financially without which they could not have functioned as well as they did.

By naming a street after this benefactor I believe it would make an everlasting memorial which time and weather could not destroy.

A copy of the above has been sent to Alderman Hyde.

MEDICINE TOO STRONG

Dijon, France, Sept. 11 (Reuters) —Louis Reveney, 82-year-old villager from Evillers, near here, wanted to cut a dashing figure at a wedding to which he had been invited in his capacity as oldest inhabitant. So instead of taking five drops of the medicine his doctor had prescribed for a heart ailment, he took 50. They are burying him after the wedding.

KING AND COURT BLANKED

Toronto, Sept. 9—(CP)—Toronto Peoples, Canadian softball champions, blanked the King and his Court—a touring four-man team—4-0 last night. It followed an 11-7 win over the barn-storming club two weeks ago.

Ed Feigner allowed 10 hits for the losers — but many of them were banged out while he was pitching from his knees or from back of second base. He collected 13 strikeouts. Russ Johnson yielded six hits for Peoples.

THE BLOOD IN QUESTIONS OF PARENTAGE

All normal blood looks the same regardless of sex, age or race. When viewed through a microscope, it is also impossible to tell the age, sex or race of the person from whom it came. Nevertheless, not all blood is the same and the differences which exist, while not discernible by viewing single, untreated specimens, are established definitely by laboratory procedures.

Thus, there are four major blood "groups" in the human family, to one of which we all belong. These groups are usually known as A, B, AB and O. Of these groups it is estimated that group O compromises about 43 per cent of adults, group A 40 per cent, group AB 10 per cent and group B 7 per cent.

These major groups contain further differences in themselves, such as opposing Rh factors, about which more at another time.

While the nature of the physiological differences between the major blood groups is outside the scope of this article, suffice it to say that in some instances if blood of a certain group is transfused into the circulation of a person of a different group, severe reaction may result. This is so generally understood that today many thousands of persons know what blood group or "type" they represent.

The members of group O are regarded as universal donors, that is, they may give blood to their own and to all other groups without fear of untoward reaction, providing that they have not previously themselves received a donation of conflicting blood.

The group AB while not suitable as donors to any other type than their own, may receive blood without fear of untoward reaction from any other type or group.

Thus it is shown that great differences may be present in the blood of individuals although the blood may appear identical and respond similarly to a wide range of tests.

The blood group to which an individual belongs is determined by his heredity, the laws of which are as definite as anything else in nature.

A child cannot inherit certain blood factors or distinctions unless the same quality exists in at least one of his parents. If both parents are of group O their child cannot be of group AB. The reverse is also true.

Occasionally a question in law arises regarding the parentage of a child. By examining the blood of the three persons involved, it may be possible to prove that one person could not possibly be a parent of the child, although if blood groups are identical it does not prove beyond question that a designated person is the parent. Thus a person who just happened to have a type of blood compatible with that of a child of disputed parentage could not be identified on that basis alone as the parent.

In addition to the tests based upon the broad principles of blood group inheritance, others based upon the Rh factor are coming into use. 85 per cent of the human family are Rh positive and 15 per cent are Rh negative. The Rh "factor" is merely another quality or attribute of the blood peculiar to individuals in the same manner that blood grouping is, and as such calls for no greater explanation at this point.

TODAY'S TALK

INDIFFERENCE

One of the surest ways to lose battles and friends is to be indifferent. Indifference has many a time changed the course of history. To win any sort of a battle, all that we possess should be thrown into it, if we desire victory. It's the same with the holding of a friend. To keep that friend there must be whole-hearted loyalty, accepting that friend as is—faults, virtues and all!

There is so much imperfection in us all that we should be kindly toward imperfections in others. Their virtues can be made to shine before our eyes with so much more glow and satisfaction when we show an interest in all the undertakings of our friends. More friends are lost through indifference than anything else.

There is something deadly about indifference that eats into the soul. It is through the indifference of the people of a nation that their liberty and freedom often have been swept from under their feet. We get bad legislators because of our indifference toward good government.

The privileges and opportunities in a democratic state are endless, but if we are governed by indifference toward them we are apt to lose them without realizing their loss until it is too late to save them. We only preserve those things in which we are interested in preserving. A citizen's free ballot is one of his greatest inheritances. It is his personal key to good government—if he wants it! Through indifference to this ballot, by a non-use of it, often bad government results.

The employer who is interested in his employees, giving them encouragement and cheer, can hardly fail to be anything but successful. Indifference to a good worker's worth has often lost that worker, and to a wiser competitor! On the other hand, indifference toward one's own work pays no one.

Glory in the new days that is yours. Be not indifferent to its revelations and blessings. Give the most and all that you are to it, in your work, with your friends, and when at the close, meditate upon all that has been yours, and upon all that you have given away!

MARMORA

3,000 Attend Annual Fair, One of Best in History

Marmora — Marmora's annual Fair held on Friday was one of the best in the history of the local Agricultural Society. From near and far, former residents of this village and district and many visitors from outside points made an approximate crowd of three thousand.

President Jack McAvoy, the youthful president and his fellow directors were very pleased with the results.

The showing of cattle was the best for some years. Exhibits of sheep, swine and vegetables showed a falling off but otherwise entries were good. Chief winner in the Agricultural Horse classes was Carman Downey of Crookston. In the special classes he divided honors with Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company of Kaladar, which had the best team on the grounds.

Wesley Finch of Campbellford took highest honors with Holsteins. Barry Neal of Marmora and Ray Ellis captured other prizes. Elmer Wood of Crookston carried off all prizes with his herd in the Ayrshire classes. With the exception of one second prize, Norman Whytock of Madoc did the same with his Shorthorns and Garnet Kerr of Campbellford stood alone as winner in the Jersey class. Ray Ellis and Joseph O'Neill had most success with their Grade Class cattle. Elmer Wood, Garnet Kerr and Norman Whytock shared the specials almost evenly. Don Heath of Stirling had six firsts and three seconds with his showing of sheep and Erwin McGuire of Crookston secured three firsts and four seconds.

Wins Six of Seven Prizes

In the Swine Class, Wesley Finch, of Campbellford carried off six of the seven prizes with his Yorkshires. Dan Heath met no opposition with his Tamworths.

In the poultry division, Erwin McGuire led well in Plymouth Rocks and Leghorns. Garth Sabine and Douglas Lynch both of Marmora were chief winners with their Hampshire Reds. No turkeys were exhibited. T. J. Bateman of Marmora took firsts for geese and ducks. Clem Ketcheson of Belleville meeting with little opposition was a large winner in the vegetables but Irwin McCoy and Douglas Lynch of Marmora and Mrs. P. Henderson of Deloro got in on the prize money four or five times Clem Ketcheson sustained a big lead also in grain seeds obtaining all prizes except two.

As the only competition in the fruit class he also got five firsts.

Butter, Cheese Entries Big

Archie F. Pitt, of Madoc, got two firsts with his entries of butter.

For best white cheese not shown as specials the awards were 1. Gerald Fluke, Marmora. 2. Murray Heath, Campbellford. 3. Ray Brown, Harold.

The special prizes given by Madoc Cheese Board went to the same competitors in the same order. The prizes given by Hastings County Cheese Producers Association were won as follows: 1. Archie F. Pitt, Madoc. 2. Murray Heath, Campbellford. 3. Gerald Fluke, Marmora. 4. Roy Brown, Harold.

L. E. Bryant and Mrs. G. R. Putnam, of Wooler, were winners with their honey exhibits and T. J. Bateman and D. Lynch took honors with eggs.

In the Domestic Science, Mrs. Hugh Jones of Stirling, led in bottled fruits and jams and shared honors with Mrs. T. J. Bateman, Mrs. E. Brady and Mrs. J. O'Neill for baking.

Come to Front

The Wooler exhibitors, Mrs. L. E. Bryant and Mrs. G. R. Putnam came to the front another year in ladies' work, closely followed by Mrs. G. D. Young, of Marmora. E. C. Prentice led in the floral classes with Douglas Lynch also getting a good share of prizes.

Keen Competition

In the children's classes good entries were received and winners met with keen competition. Two outstanding exhibits of the fair were that of the Hi Hoe Garden Club and the Junior Club project Calf Club.

The midway was the best in years with the chief amusements being furnished by the Casey Shows of Winnipeg. Refreshment booths were operated by three local organizations—the Women's Institute, the Catholic Women's League and the I.O.D.E.

The revival of horse races did not produce the competition hoped for. Results were:

SHANNONVILLE

Well-Filled Entry List, Variety Program Makes Fair Success

Shannonville — The World's Fair at Shannonville on Friday and Saturday the eighth and ninth, was a huge success, the beautiful weather brought out a large attendance, one of the largest in years. The school parade, which was a great credit to the teachers, was led by the Kinsmen Boys' Band of Belleville, and two majorettes. Five schools participated, followed by a clown band, decorated cars, heavy draft horses, as well as modern tractors, trucks and cars

Well Filled Entry List

All classes of exhibits were well filled especially the palace, which was crowded with all kinds of needlecraft, domestic flowers and cooking, not forgetting the wonderful display of children's exhibits. A great attraction during the afternoon was the baby show with a good number of entries and Dr. D. C. McVicker as judge.

The evening entertainment was provided by Mrs. Riley, teacher of music in this school area, consisting of songs, guitar solos and duets. Dancing, both solo and duet, this program was well received, the master of ceremonies was capably handled by Mr. Sidney Fitzgerald.

Midway in Attendance

The feature attraction of the fair was the Casey Company midway with several kind of rides which were well patronized. The Melrose United Church ladies served meals throughout the day. The ladies of Holy Trinity Anglican Church had a booth which was very profitable.

The day finished with a dance in the Palace, music was provided by McEvoy's orchestra.

The board of directors of the Shannonville Agricultural Society are to be commended for their splendid effort in putting on such a fine show. They wish to thank everyone who made donations and contributed in anyway to make the fair a huge success. Their slogan is "Bigger and Better every year."

the real-life story of a cancer victim

If you had been told last November that you had but a few months, maybe weeks to live, how would you prepare for the inevitable? What kind of life had you led? What part does religion play in your everyday living? Do you think it right that man should suffer unnecessarily? Do you believe in Mercy Killing? If you knew that your days were numbered, these questions would demand immediate answers. Mr. C. T. Russell, for whom cancer has marked a date on the calendar, has thought these things out. He has set his house in order. He tells in simple, yet deeply-moving terms, his innermost thoughts and emotions; how he has prepared to meet death with calmness and dignity.

The Standard is privileged to print Mr. Russell's story in the hope that not only cancer sufferers, but others, too, will gain from it both strength and understanding.

WEDDINGS

CAMERON—JAMES

On Saturday afternoon, September 9th., the marriage took place in Bridge Street United Church, beautifully decorated with baskets of yellow and white gladioli and candelabra, of Marion Lois James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Spencer James, 227 John Street, this city, and George Roderick Cameron, son of Mr. Justice Charles Alexander Cameron and Mrs. Cameron of Ottawa. The Rev. Donald C. Amos officiated at the ceremony assisted by Rev. J. G. Hornsby and wedding music was played by Mr. Alec S. Gordon.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white lace with molded bodice, the neckline outlined with seed pearls, long sleeves and the skirt ending in a train. Pearls were used on the coronet of her veil and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses, gladioli and stephanotis.

Miss Jean Sills, of St. Catharines; Mrs. Edward McCormick, Montreal, and Miss Joan Hunter, of this city, attended the bride, all gowned alike in pastel green nylon marquisette over taffeta. Their gowns featured shirred bodices with sweetheart necklines, cap sleeves and full skirts. They wore matching headdresses and carried cascade bouquets of yellow 'mums, gladioli and roses.

Mr. Hugh Cameron, of Ottawa, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Clark James, Belleville; Mr. Edward McCormick, Montreal; Mr. Alfred Miller, Toronto and Mr. Ken Murchison, Ottawa.

A reception followed at Edsholme, Moira Lake. Mrs. James chose for her daughter's wedding a lovebird's green lace dress with matching hat, ashes of roses gloves and corsage of Sweetheart roses. Mrs. Cameron, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy blue dress with matching accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Cameron left on a motor trip to the United States, the bride travelling in a grey flannel suit.

Out-of-town guests were in attendance from Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, Guelph, Michigan, Ohio, Florida and Quebec.

On their return the bride and groom will reside at 221 Ann St., Belleville.

Previous to her marriage Mrs. Cameron was guest of honor at several social events, among those who entertained for her were Mrs. P. C. McGuire and Mrs. H. G. Morden, a tea and presentation of crystal; a shower by Mrs. Allison Coll, of Ottawa; also one by Miss Margaret Dean, of Toronto; dinner party and presentation by Miss Geraldine Schuett and Miss Elaine Darter of Toronto, and a dinner party and presentation by Miss Joan Hunter, of Belleville.

SCHWASS—FLOUD

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hubble, Frankford, Ont., September 2, at two o'clock, in front of an arch decorated with evergreens, white gladioli, asters and phlox, when their niece, Muriel Winnifred Floud, daughter of Mr. Lee Floud and the late Mrs. Lee Floud, became the bride of John Pembrooke Schwass, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Schwass, Frankford, Ont.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Gerald Kemp and the soloist was Harold Kemp, who sang "I'll Walk Beside You", and during the signing of the register, "O Perfect Love".

Given in marriage by her uncle, the bride looked charming in a floor-length gown of white slipper satin, featuring a fitted bodice and butterfly bustle, long pointed sleeves and a net yoke line with lace trim. Her fingertip veil fell gracefully from a coronet of white baby roses and lily-of-the-valley. She carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

Miss Doreen Rogers was maid of honor and wore a gown of pink taffeta, featuring net yoke line and shoulder-length veil.

Miss Olive Schwass, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, wearing a gown of green net over taffeta, tight fitting bodice of embroidered organdy, with sweetheart neckline, puffed sleeves, shoulder-length veil and white accessories.

Little Edna Hubble was the flower girl, pretty in her floor-length gown of pale yellow organdy. She carried a basket of pink and mauve asters.

The groomsman was Mr. David Schwass of Woodstock, brother of the groom.

Bursary Fund Will be Set Up By Catholic W.L.

Kingston, Sept. 11. (CP)—Establishment of a provincial bursary fund of $15,000 by the Ontario Provincial Council of Catholic Women's League was authorized by one of 10 resolutions passed at the third provincial convention, here Sunday.

Other resolutions urged members to discourage the distribution of comic books; to protest lewdness in periodicals, and advertising display cards; called for stricter enforcement of liquor laws; favored the growing custom of the dual wedding ring ceremony as a tangible reminder of marriage vows; urged members to be active in unmasking such "crafty devices" used by communists as the "ban the bomb" petition; and reiterated the stand on the rights of parents to educate their children in schools of their choice.

Abroad With Me

EDINBURGH, SCOTLAND

This day can never be surpassed. Come over it with me and I hope I can pass on to you at home some of its glory and interest.

Our bus called for us at 9.30 and we are off for the day in the countryside around Edinburgh. We have a Scottish laddie for a guide, one in his last year at University and who is majoring in architecture—the right man in the right place.

We pass Dobbie's, the largest nursery in the country, and it is a blaze of color. The high walls of Newbattle Abbey are on the right. It was founded in the 11th century and the monks who lived there are credited with finding coal in Scotland. It is now a miners' hostel and this region is the centre of the coal industry. Both hard and soft coal are mined here and the whole area is honeycombed. Miners often walk four or five miles underground to reach their work, but the surface is a fine agricultural area.

Bothwell's Castle is the next interest, built in 1567, the home of Mary, Queen of Scots, and her third husband, Earl of Bothwell. It was from here they escaped besieging Presbyterians by dressing as maid and groom. It is one of the few castles that is still livable. Middleton House is now on the right, a beautiful old home, owned by the city and used as a summer school for children of the city. Boys and girls from the heart of the city can have several weeks of country life here.

We are now getting up higher into the hills and here also the grain crop is excellent. Flocks of sheep are everywhere and our guide tells the different kinds: Oxford or Suffolk or Southdown; Leicester and mountain sheep. They cross breed a Cheviot ewe, which strain is particularly hardy, with an Oxford ram, noted for its early maturity as well as prime quality of wool and the result is a large sturdy strain of sheep, maturing early and yieding excellent quality wool. In the mountain sheep even the ewes have long horns. (Ruth mutters, "trust the Scotch to take all they can get"). It is compulsory to dip the sheep here and some farmers add coloring to the sheep dip. We saw many flocks a brilliant yellow in color and you can visualize their beauty against the green countryside. It is supposed to bring in a little more money at shearing time.

I had been wondering what crop it was that stands about the height of our soya bean, and when I ask about it the guide tells me it is tares, used for ensilage. When I reply that I hadn't seen one silo, the guide said, "No, you won't They are all underground." The rainfall averages 27" and it is unusual to have more than six degrees of frost.

We pass Gala Water, a tributary of the Tweed, and we learn it is one of the famous salmon streams of Scotland and beauties of four or five pounds are taken. The pasture fields have plenty of thistles, Scotch also, and I see a farmer mowing to get rid of the pests.

Going through the quaint village of Stow we see its one and only policeman patrolling its single street on bicycle. He cycles from this village at the same time each day and meets the policeman halfway from the neighboring village, who has started at the same time. Then they each turn around and go back home—this is their highway patrol. About the only other duty of the village policeman is to see that the farmers of the community comply with orders and clip their sheep. We are in the Cheviot Hill country and I am intensely interested for my Scottish ancestors came from here—the border Elliotts (the E in my signature stands for Elliott). The hillsides are especially beautiful with splendid examples of the copper beech here and there. The guide assures me it is not native to this country.

Gala Shields is the next interesting town and it is here that the world famous Cheviot Tweeds are manufactured. This border manufacturing town is unusual in that it is the only one aesthetically minded. It sustains an art centre and the 8,000 people in this wealthy town can be counted upon to support any branch of cultural activity. The country homes are lovely in this district. They are of reddish sandstone which runs in belts across Scotland. They never have any erosion problem because of the nature of the subsoil.

In the lovely valley of the Tweed, the roof of Abbotsford House comes into view, built by Sir Walter Scott in 1771, and we are soon entering its front door. Scott came of a good family, his father was a professor of medicine in Edinburgh University. At the age of two he was permanently crippled by a disease that left him with a shortened right foot. At school he distinguished himself in classics and graduated in law. He wrote poetry first, then novels, and after the sale of his first novel, he started to build Abbotsford, and a direct descendant, a great-grandson, Sir Walter Maxwell Scott, lives there today.

Scott suffered financial reverses when a publishing firm in which he was partner failed. He found himself in debt to the extent of £120,000, which was a terrific debt in those days. He worked frantically to pay off this debt by writing, and at the time of his death in 1832 from paralysis of the brain due to overwork, he had paid off £80,000. Royalties on his books paid off the balance shortly after his death.

The estate comprises 1,000 acres. We walk down a steep gravelled path and into a beautiful garden square, containing flowers of every hue. Abbotsford House is patterned after a medieval castle of the 15th century and the entrance hall, with its walls covered with firing pieces, armor, shields, swords, etc., certainly take you back to that period. The coat of arms of all the border clans hang on the wall I was thrilled to see that of the Elliott clan, though I have to admit it wasn't particularly startling. Just a red nail on a gold background, mounted on a red shield.

Across from the entrance hall is his study, the most interesting room in the house, with his desk just as he left it. In 1935, a secret drawer was discovered in it containing many of Lady Scott's letters. In one corner a lovely wrought-iron staircase leads to an upper gallery and off that a door opens into Scott's bedroom where he often retreated when an unwelcome guests arrived. It is in this study that he worked slavishly to meet a tremendous debt and to me it is filled with Scotch personality of endurance.

The drawing-room contains museum pieces, a portrait of Scott by Raeburn, large writing cabinet of ebony given by George IV, etc. In a glass-topped case were priceless relics, among them Napoleon's writing case and pen, Bonnie Prince Charlie's drinking cup. Rob Roy's wallet, etc.

The estate comprises about 1,000 acres of land. It is a wonderful thing that the family of Sir Walter Scott threw open their home that all might see these priceless treasures and lose themselves for a time in the Scottish romance of the past.

Vogue says:
"new fur coats look newest stopped short"

Shorter than dress length, your new fur coat may be anything from waist length to seven-eighths. It must be very full in the skirt, four or five flares, but must be smooth fitting across the shoulders. Collars are small, sleeves are big with a cuff of some kind. These shorter-than-dress length fur coats are definitely smart.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

Corn on the cob 4,000 years ago wasn't the delicacy we now know.

An ear of corn found in the New Mexico Bat Cave, dated about 2,000 B.C., is still intact. The ear is about one quarter the size of the average ear today. But the mummified grains are the same kernels you would find on any ear of corn hanging over the fireplace today.

The old style corn meal of several decades ago did not have the keeping qualities of the "new process" article in which the germ, containing the corn oil, and the bran are removed. But anyone who has ever tasted the old-fashioned kind, delivered warm and fragrant from the nearby mill, knows how superior it was.

Fresh corn and fresh sweet peppers are a well known combination. Corn meal and pimientos are a variation on this theme. Use them to make light corn muffins. To keep the muffins delicate in texture, use cake flour instead of all purpose flour. Be sure the muffin pans are well greased, since muffins have a tendency to stick to the pan.

Corn Pimiento Muffins

Preheat oven at 425 degrees. Grease well a muffin pan.

Measure 1 1-2 cups sifted cake flour. Sift flour again with 3-4 cups yellow cornmeal, 1-4 cup sugar, 1 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon baking soda and 1 teaspoon salt.

Cut 1-3 cup canned pimientos into 1-4 inch squares.

Combine 1 cup buttermilk or sour milk with 1-4 cup melted butter or margarine. Add pimientos to the buttermilk mixture.

Beat 1 egg well and stir in with the liquid ingredients.

Add the liquid to the dry ingredients. Stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Batter should be lumpy looking.

Turn batter into prepared muffin pans, filling 2-3 full. If some sections of pan contain no batter, fill halfway with water.

Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until brown. Turn the pan during baking if necessary to brown evenly. Serve muffins warm. If muffins become cold before they are served, reheat a few minutes in a moderate oven or in the top part of a double boiler.

Women's Institute

WALLBRIDGE W.I.

The Wallbridge Women's Institute held their monthly meeting recently at the home of Mrs. F. Harris. Gathering there for a tour to Batawa shoe factory at Batawa, Twenty-six women and children registered for a tour with Mr. Arthur Duncan as guide from the ground flour to the fifth storey, giving ideas how the shoe and rubber factory carries on from raw material to the shipping department; from the shoe factory to their new mechanical plant, the best of its kind in Canada. Most of their machines are made there for their own use.

After the tour of the plants, Mr. Duncan took the members to the community hall, where he told them how pleased he was to show an organization such as the Women's Institute, through the plant. He offered the W.I. a free night's entertainment in the near future, with films of the factory, an orchestra and other entertainment.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Duncan.

From Batawa the members went back to Mrs. Harris' home for the regular meeting. Mrs. Fisher, president, was in charge. Topic of the meeting was "Canadian Industries" the tour covering the topic. The roll call was "An Ontario Industry and its Location".

A party was arranged at the Nite-Hawk Centre. Committees were appointed to look after the tickets and posters, Proceeds will be in support of the inspection of the school children's eyes and teeth of Wallbridge and lower fourth schools.

Refreshments were served by the lunch conveners bringing a very pleasant and educational meeting to a close.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W.I.

The September meeting of the Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. William Burkitt and Mrs. Grant Minaker with a large attendance. There were also several visitors present. They were Mrs. Frank Burkitt, Mrs. Ross Burr, Mrs. Ronald Burr, Mrs. James Way, Mrs. Eddy Lott and David, Mrs. Everett Minaker and Miss Eileen Minaker.

The president, Mrs. E. Hall, presided. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and a short business session was conducted.

A vote of thanks was tendered those who painted the cemetery fence, also Mr. J. G. Sprague and Mr. Roger Sprague for their help in painting the gates of cemetery.

Mr. Seymour Hamilton donated $5 to the Institute fund.

The roll call was answered by showing old pictures of local interest. The topic for the meeting was Historical Research and was under the leadership of Mrs. E. Wallbridge. Mrs. Wallbridge assisted by Mrs. L. Wallbridge, Mrs. C. Barber and Mrs. C. Sprung, gave interesting papers on the subject.

Miss Lillian Sprague gave Current Events which were much enjoyed.

The meeting was closed in the usual manner.

A contest was conducted by Mrs. Stanley Barber with Mrs. George Neal and Mrs. E. Hall, being the winners and receiving prizes.

The hostess assisted by several ladies served delicious refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

MELROSE W.I.

The Melrose Women's Institute held their August meeting at the home of Mrs. Grant McLaren with an attendance of 32 ladies and nine children.

Mrs. Newton Demille, 1st vice president, took charge of this meeting, after the opening, and a few items of business discussed, Mrs. Arnold Reilly gave her report of the district annual.

Mrs. Grant McLaren, convener of Historical Research and Current Events, then called on Mrs. Eugene Badgley who gave a paper on the history of Belleville and closed with a poem "Our United Empire Loyalists".

Mrs. Stratton gave a paper prepared by Mrs. Fred Jeffrey on Current Events, which mentioned the Korean war situation; the recent railroad strike and how it affected every Canadian citizen. She also spoke of the death of the Hon. Humphrey Mitchell; the birth of Princess Ann, and many other events, including the International Institute Convention held in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Mrs. McLaren then gave a very interesting account of her two weeks' motor trip to Halifax, which she enjoyed this summer along with her husband, daughter and sister. She told of visiting the oldest city in Canada, Quebec, and of the Plains of Abraham, and the monuments erected to two early Canadian heroes, Wolfe and Montcalm. They also passed through the town of Cabana which made the news earlier this year by its disastrous fire. They viewed Halifax harbor from its ancient citadel and said the citadel was in a very unkept condition. They were told that the city of Halifax spent its time and money on their beautiful public gardens. In these gardens she said were flowers, and trees from every nation. Under one oak tree was a plaque saying it had been planted by King George VI when he and Queen Elizabeth had visited Canada.

The roll call was answered by "My Grandfather's Birthplace". It was very interesting to note that England, Scotland, and Ireland were the most often mentioned. Some said their grandparents were U.E.L. Wales and Germany were also mentioned, while the younger members named some places in Hastings County.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem after which delicious refreshments were served.

Women's Activities

AIKENS' W.A.

The August meeting of Aikens' Woman's Association was held at the home of Mrs. E. Hubble on Thursday last.

With Mrs. W. Bush presiding the meeting opened with the theme song and prayer by the president. The roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture on "Love". Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

During the business period Mrs. Bush reminded the members of the meeting to be held at Scott's Church on September 13 to which this society is invited. Mrs. F. Moon offered her home for the September meeting with Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Moon, Mrs. Scrimshaw, Mrs. Bush to be program committee. Mrs. Hubble, hostess and program committee for August were thanked for their efforts. Several visitors were welcomed to the meeting.

Marilyn Jones read an interesting story on the origin of the hymn "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go", written by a blind Scotch preacher and poet, George Matheson. Following this Mrs. R. Marshall favored with the singing of this beautiful hymn, accompanied by Mrs. F. Moon at the piano.

Scripture reading was taken from Romans, Chapter 12 and read by Mrs. Moon. Meditation by Mrs. S. Spafford on the program theme "Love", was very interesting. She referred to the life of Robert Louis Stevenson, who was sickly during his boyhood and youth. As a pastime he began writing stories of adventure and was encouraged in this by his mother. Later on he went to a small island in the Pacific for his health. Kind natives learned to love and trust him and he continued his writing During civil war on the island several natives were imprisoned and Stevenson returned their love and kindness by seeing to it that they were freed. In gratitude they built a road through the jungle to a home Stevenson had built. In her closing remarks Mrs. Spafford compared love and hate. Hate is something that draws us away from someone we know. Hate has evil purposes and is responsible for evil doings. She stressed the fact that with love we may be certain of ultimate victory.

"Love" from a viewpoint of science was given by several members, Mrs. E. Hubble, Mrs. R. Marshall, Mrs. H. Kells, Mrs. F. Moon, Mrs. C. McMullen. This was very educational and proved to us that "love" is the greatest medicine of all for "mental ills" and is very important to everyone. Yes, the scientists are trying to catch up with Jesus, Who two thousand years ago, said "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another".

Readings were given by Mrs. C. Grills, and Mrs. G. Denike. Marilyn Jones received the offering. The singing of a hymn and prayer by Mrs. F. Scrimshaw brought the meeting to a close. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Hubble and committee.

BRIDGE STREET W.M.S.

The September meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church was held in the ladies' parlor. The president, Mrs. F. Houston, assisted by Mrs. K. Bird at the piano, was in charge of the opening exercises and conducted the business. Plans were made to hold a birthday tea at the home of Mrs. H. Ackerman, Mrs. Howard, convener. The program was under the leadership of Mrs. C. Massey and Mrs. H. Philipps' group. Mrs. C. Massey presided. Mrs. C. Hyde read, as the scripture lesson, a very fine interpretation of the 23rd Psalm. Mrs. Riedel sang a solo "Bless This House". Prayer by Mrs. W. H. Finkle closed the Worship service.

Miss Loretta McDougall was the guest speaker. She spoke on the world's convention on Christian Education held in Toronto in August. There were 2,000 delegates in attendance and Miss McDougall was chosen as one of 206 who made up the choir for these services.

Her talk was most interesting as she described the parade of nations, each, in native costume. She spoke of the wonderful fellowship among the delegates from sixty different countries and of the challange given to the youth of the world.

Mrs. Farnsworth, who attended this convention, spoke briefly.

Mrs. H. Phillips thanked the speakers and invited all to stay for tea and social half hour.

Lion Art Duncan To Fill Chair Balance of Term

Frankford — The opening fall meeting of the Frankford Lions Club was held in the Community Memorial Hall on Wednesday evening, with a good turnout. Following a fine banquet, ably prepared and served by the staff of Trent Lock Dairy Bar, a number of business items were discussed. President Mac McDonald expressed his regret that his posting to the Campbellford bank would make it impossible to carry on as president of the Club. Lion Mac then pinned the president's badge on Lion Art Duncan, 1st vice president of the club, and wished him success as the new president. Lion Art accepted the office and pledged his best in carrying on the fine work of the club. At the request of Lion Art, Lion Mac remained in the chair for the balance of the meeting.

Lions were informed that they would be in for an interesting meeting on September 20, as Lion Floyd Ketcheson would bring a report on the convention held in Gravenhurst this summer.

The Lions Club executive is going to look into the hockey situation immediately, and will give a report on their recommendations at the next meeting.

Lion Art Duncan gave a full explanation of his recent strange activities in North Frankford. Rumor had it that Lion Art was fishing in a well. It now appears that he was measuring the depth of the well, although it still seems a little unusual to do this with a casting rod.

As in any Lions' gatherings, sing songs and good natured fun were enjoyed by all.

Best wishes go out to Lion Art Duncan on his new position, and to Lion Mervin Dafoe, who has been elected to the vacant vice president's position.

"A GOOD PLACE TO DEAL"

"Fix it Daddy, please!"

MANY of the things "Daddy" must be prepared to "fix" for that son of his are so obvious that he expects to take them in his stride.

For instance—the comfort in which the boy is accustomed to live must be maintained. There must be sound home-training, too . . . a good education to fit the young man of the future for a highly competitive world.

Yet every father risks defeat of his plans until he can answer "yes" to one question . . . "Will there be a regular income to carry them through if I am no longer here to earn it?"

The one sure way to provide the right answer is through Life Insurance. It can be arranged in the form of a guaranteed monthly income to replace earnings should the breadwinner be taken away.

Crown Expected To Conclude Case Against McAuliffe

Simcoe, Sept. 11—(CP)— The crown is expected to conclude its case today against John Herbert McAuliffe, 32-year-old wartime arms expert, charged with murder in the machine gun slaying of two tobacco farmers June 21.

On Saturday—fourth day of the trial—the jury handled a machine gun identified earlier by four witnesses as one found 200 yards from where Arthur Lierman, 31, and William Goddyn, 24, were slain.

Both were cut down in the pursuit of a bandit fleeing with $23,000 from the Imperial Bank of Canada branch at nearby Langton, almost in the heart of southwestern Ontario's tobacco-growing country.

The auburn-haired McAuliffe of Windsor, and formerly of North Bay, fidgetted nervously in the prisoner's dock as the crown continued its parade of witnesses and exhibits.

His face twitched as the gun, exhibit No. 61, was passed to one juror after another.

Gun Identified

Among the witnesses who identified it was Robert Holmes, 13, who said he found it in a bush on his father's farm July 3, more than a week after McAuliffe's capture in a shack 23 miles west of here. The boy also told of finding $600 in small bills concealed among leaves and ferns.

Earlier, his 10-year-old brother, Larry, testified he found a blue pin-stripe suitcoat and a blue shirt at about the same spot in the bush the previous day. Preceding witnesses identified these garments as those worn by the lone gunman who held up the Langton bank.

Constable Len Chambers of the Norfolk detachment of provincial police, the crown's 47th witness, was on the stand when the court adjourned Saturday.

Defence counsel W. E. Ross cross-examined police witnesses at some length on the system they employed to identify McAuliffe as the bandit, charging police coached some persons who viewed the police lineup from which the accused was picked.

He also criticised police for allowing a photographer to take a picture of the accused shortly after his capture.

Gambled Life In Game of Russian Roulette

Toronto, Sept. 11—(CP)—Ernest Hutt, 17, gambled his life in a game of Russian roulette Saturday and lost. He died about four hours after being admitted to hospital with a bullet wound in the head.

The shooting occurred in the home of friends where the youth had been staying the last three weeks. Police said Hutt's friends reported he had expressed a fondness for the game in which a player places a revolver to his head, usually with only one chamber loaded and pulls the trigger.

Police said he had loaded two chambers of the revolver. The others were empty. No one in the house was able to say where Hutt had obtained the revolver. Police are continuing their investigation.

THIEF TAKES $1,000

St. Thomas, Sept. 11—(CP)—A thief entered an open apartment here Saturday, and calmly walked out with an estimated $1,000 in cash and jewels.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Flint, residents of the apartment, told police the theft must have occurred while they were in the garden chatting with neighbors.

Expect Main Swimming Pool Will be Completed End of Oct.

After many months of preliminary work by the local Kinsmen Club, an actual start on the construction of the proposed community swimming pool on Dundas street east was commenced this week with completion of the main pool expected by the end of October.

Earlier in the summer the site of the pool immediately east of the former tourist park was cleared of trees and brush and this week a bulldozer went to work levelling the property with excavation for the pool being started Friday.

The original plan of the Kinsmen Club was to construct the swimming pool with its length running east and west. In this way the pool would have projected onto the former tourist park.

Plans for the location of the pool have now been changed, however, and the length of the 45 x 135 foot main pool will be north and south on the property purchased from Trinidad Leaseholds. Enough room will be left north of the main pool for construction of the kiddies' wading pool.

Ultimately the bath houses will be built immediately east of the two pools, the building to project only about four feet onto the tourist park property.

In this way the tourist park property will remain completely as a park, the proposal being to fit it as a park where mothers or parents can wait for their children while swimming. Also children's swings and other playground equipment will be provided for the smaller children.

Kinsmen president E. Colebourne today stated that all equipment for the filtration plant in connection with the pool is now on the site and the contract for construction of the concrete pool has been let.

As soon as the ditch is complete a start will be made on the concrete and it is expected the main pool will be completed well before frost conditions commence. The children's wading pool and the dressing rooms will be completed at a later date.

Big Three Put 100,000 Troops In Manoeuvres

Heidelberg, Germany, Sept. 11 — (AP) — The Atlantic "Big Three" powers put nearly 100,000 troops into the field here today to test their skill at repelling a mock invasion from the east.

High-ranking military observers from all the Atlantic Pact countries are on hand to see how British, American and French troops would behave themselves in the week-long manoeuvres.

The test will involve tanks, planes and simulated paratroop drops behind the front lines. A U. S. cavalry regiment is representing a mythical enemy force of some six divisions, striking into Western Germany from the Russian zone and Czechoslovakia.

Officials say the manoeuvre was planned last winter "long before the Korean fighting began." They describe it as routine.

Simulating the actual comparative troop strength of the Western Powers and Russia in Germany, the Allies are outnumbered more than two to one by the "invading" force.

Manning the ground defences during the mock invasion are the U. S. 1st Infantry Division and the U. S. Constabulary's 1st and 2nd Brigades. They are being joined by France's 7th Algerian Regiment and Britain's 1st Royal Dragoons.

Britain and France each are sending a fighter plane squadron to support the all-jet 36th Fighter Wing and the 61st Troop Carrier Wing of the U. S. Air Force.

U. S. Army headquarters declined to reveal the exact number of troops involved in the exercise, but one officer estimated that it would be close to 100,000.

Fat People Need Sympathy to Help Them to Reduce

Toronto, Sept. 11 — (CP) —Fat people need sympathy and encouragement to help them reduce two Regina doctors and a dietitian claim.

The doctors D. E. Rodgers and J Grant McFetridge, and the dietitian, Eileen Price, say, too, that only a reduction in eating will eliminate weight. Pills and exercise alone won't do it.

They reported their findings, based on a study of 600 cases of obesity, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

They claim the diet doesn't have to be as severe as many of the prescribed diets. They suggest from 1,200 to 2,000 calories a day—most other courses of diet suggest a maximum of 1,200 calories.

The article also suggests:

1. Don't try to do it all in a couple of weeks. That's liable to increases the possibility of a heart attack.

2. The less you think about food the easier it is to stick to a diet.

WILL BUY HOME

Winnipeg, Sept. 11—(CP) — Don Gerrie's next client probably will be himself.

Mr. Gerrie, a real-estate man, won $20,000 in a Quebec Sweepstake when Vieux Manoir came in second Saturday in the St. Leger turf event at Doncaster, England.

To the 25-year-old Gerrie and his wife, the windfall means a home of their own, a car, a vacation trip—and a business.

"I don't know what business I want to go into, so I'm just going to sock the money away somewhere until I calm down and can think straight," said the elated winner.

German Soldier Ranks Among Best Fighters in History

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The average citizen of the democracies naturally feels misgivings over the probable rearmament of western Germany which so recently engaged in big-scale aggression against her neighbors.

Still, I believe this concern should be lessened by knowledge that she is essential to the successful defence of western Europe. Moreover (and this is the point I want to emphasize) the German soldier ranks among the foremost fighters of history.

There is an almost-fatalistic oriental cast to the manner in which the German rank and file accepts orders for suicidal attacks. This trait undoubtedly is associated with the fact that the German is susceptible to regimentation—and likes it. However, the essential thing is that he is a brave man.

I could cite a striking demonstration of these German characteristics which I observed while correspondend on the British front in France during the First World War. This was in an area where the Britons had fortified a small and precipitous hill overlooking the German trenches. The post became so dangerous that the Germans set out to capture it.

Several Waves Used

Several waves of troops were sent against this strong point with disastrous results to the attackers who were flung back by machine-gun fire. Finally the German command resorted to one of their characteristically-tough expedients.

A contingent of Prussian guards —pride of the Kaiser—happened to be stationed in this sector. These guardsmen were called on to sacrifice themselves as an example. They were sent marching shoulder to shoulder right into the teeth of those guns.

And the guards went in goose-stepping!

Of course they were mowed down to a man, but this display of courage and discipline turned the trick. The following wave of regulars swarmed up the hill and captured it.

This column doesn't applaud militaristic exhibitions, but I might mention another which I believe probably influenced Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement of Hitler at Munich and so played a part in bringing on the Second World War. This happened at Godesburg at the time of Chamberlain's second meeting with Hitler over the latter's demands on Czechoslovakia.

Chamberlain travelled by plane from London to Godesburg, and his arrival was attended by an incident which I feel sure was staged by Hitler for its psychological effect on the prime minister. The plane was awaited by a squad of the famous death's head guards—so-called because of the fearsome skull on the front of their helmets. They wore hob-nailed boots up to their knees, and were a tough-looking lot.

A Big Front

These guards stood at attention about 100 feet from where the plane landed. As Chamberlain, pale and worried, stepped down onto the runway the death's head guards goose-stepped towards him, their hob nails crashing against the concrete with a finality which was terrifying.

It was to me a devastating and brutal reminder of German might. Chamberlain must have felt it so strongly that he carried the impression with him a bit later in the Munich conference where the Allies sold little Czechoslovakia down the river to appease Hitler's raucous demands.

MAINTAIN PEAK PRODUCTION AND FULL EMPLOYMENT

The production of essential war materials to support the United Nations' fighting forces is reflected in increased activity by Ontario's Industries, resulting in a sharp upswing in the use of power which has been particularly evident in the past three weeks. In Southern Ontario on September 7th, the demand for primary energy reached an all-time high of 39,000,500 kilowatt-hours, exceeding that of the corresponding day a year ago by 4,530,282 kilowatt-hours, very severely taxing available resources.

The current rate of growth is both unseasonal and unprecedented and reflects the tremendous industrial development within the province; the increase in population; and the greater demands for electricity as a result of the high rate of new home construction.

Hydro's record-breaking expansion program has already added more than 600,000 horsepower to Ontario's power supply. By early in 1951, this will be progressively increased by 300,000 horsepower. Additions during the balance of 1951 and in 1952 will provide a further 720,000 horsepower. However, with the accelerated program to bring in new resources, the rate of growth in power demands indicates that it is necessary to avoid all waste in the use of electricity.

We urge all consumers to save power in every way possible: Please turn off lights and other electrical equipment when not required. Every kilowatt-hour that is saved will help our industries to maintain maximum production of essential materials.

Lots of Lop-Sided Football Scores Over the Weekend But Race for Trophy Wide Open

(By The Canadian Press)

There have been a lot of lop-sided football scores this season, but the race for the Grey Cup is still wide open.

Take the case of Ottawa Rough Riders. After dropping two straight, they were counted out by almost everyone but themselves. Then they came back and licked Hamilton Tiger-Cats 23-15 Saturday. And Tiger-Cats had appeared to be the team to beat.

Coach Frank Clair of Toronto Argonauts says that if his club can get past Tiger-Cats next Saturday "we'll win this league."

But he said that in the flush of a 43-12 victory over the Dominion champion Montreal Alouettes And his Argos still have the Rough Riders to meet.

In the west, it could be a neck-and-neck fight all the way to the wire. The first place three-way tie in the Western Interprovincial Football Union will be broken up tonight, however, when Saskatchewan Roughriders play the Eskimos in Edmonton and Calgary Stampeders play hosts to Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Saskatchewan, Winnipeg and Edmonton all share first place after Saturday's games. Winnipeg smashed Edmonton 20-6 and Calgary dropped its fifth straight as Roughriders rolled to a 16-11 triumph.

In the Ontario Rugby Football Union, Sarnia Imperials won their second successive game by a 39-0 score. This time it was over Windsor Rockets. Last week it was Toronto Balmy Beach, other club in the loop. In each game, halfback Johnny Chorestecki scored 23 points.

Only All-Canadian Team

If it weren't for the fact that Imperials already have been plastered by Tiger-Cats and Argos in exhibition games, they, too, could seem world-beaters. The only all-Canadian team in senior football, they pounded the Rockets while Chorestecki got three touchdowns, five converts and a placement. Veteran Gus Scheiers and Bill Weiss got the other touchdowns.

Argos proved their superiority over Montreal in the first quarter when they rolled for three converted touchdowns— Al Dekdebrun intercepted a pass and went 55 yards for one; Ulysses Curtis raced 75 yards for another; and a seven yard end run by Billy Bass accounted for the third after Joe Krol had picked up a fumble and gone for 23.

Bass and Curtis each scored another touchdown. Lorne Parkin and Jake Dunlop each got majors on recovered fumbles. Nick Volpe converted all seven touchdowns and Krol kicked a single.

Tommy Manastersky and Virgil Wagner went for Montreal's only touchdowns, both converted by Nick Scollard.

Ottawa fought from behind twice to trample the Tiger-Cats. Fast-stepping Edgar Jones put Hamilton ahead with a first-quarter touchdown and Bill Larochelle got it back on an extension run. Then Bill Gregus put Hamilton in front again. Andy Gordon snaked across early in the second half and then tossed a touchdown pass to Larochelle to put Riders ahead again.

A touchdown by Ottawa's Paul Gibson in the final quarter clinched the game.

Winnipeg's Tom Casey continued to burn up the Western Conference in the Bombers-Edmonton game. He ran for two touchdowns and was a constant threat with his kicking, pass interception and running. Joe Aquirre, former United States pro making his first appearance with Winnipeg, kicked a field goal and two converts.

Paffrath Scores

Andy Sokol, former Sarnia Imperial, got the third major for Bombers, who left Edmonton almost completely disorganized. The Esks came to life only in the last quarter when Bob Paffrath took a forward from Lindy Berry for a touchdown.

Quarterback Jack Hartman and veteran Ken Charlton did all the scoring as Saskatchewan swarmed over the ailing Stampeders. Hartman went over on a pass from Del Wardien, converted it and another major, and kicked a field goal. Charlton scored on a pass from Hartman in the second quarter and kicked a long single.

The famed Spaith-Strode Calgary pass team put Stampeders ahead briefly in the second quarter. Chuck Feneboch got the final Calgary touchdown on an end run in the fourth quarter.

RETAINS GOLF TITLE

French River Bungalow Camp, Sept. 11 (CP)—Ivan Miller, Hamilton Spectator Sports Editor, retained the golf championship of Ontario Sports Writers at their annual golf tournament here Sunday. He came in with a 73 gross to head the field for the seventh consecutive year.

Highlight of the tournament was the even par card of 66 posted by John Tyrrell, North Bay radio announcer (CFCH) giving him top visitor award. It is believed the first time regulation figures have been equalled in competitive golf over the course.

Gordon Campbell of the Toronto Daily Star was low net among the sports writers with a 67. Wes McKnight, Toronto sports announcer (CFRB) came in with a 70 gross. Forty sports writers, sports announcers and guests participated in the event, an annual tournament of the Ontario Sports Writers Association.

Waterloo Tigers And Brantford Tied for Lead

(By The Canadian Press)

Brantford Red Sox moved into a tie with Waterloo Tigers for the Intercounty senior round-robin playoff lead Saturday night by shading Tigers 9-8 in Waterloo and evening the series score at six won, two lost.

Stratford Nationals crimped St. Thomas Legion's chances by inflicting a 7-6 defeat and London Majors retained a mathematical chance by walloping Kitchener Legion 10-1.

The Waterloo game between the league leaders was played before the season's largest crowd—more than 3,500. Tommy Quest, who started for Brantford was credited with the win in the wide-open game that saw seven hurlers parade to the mound. Playing Manager Bob Whitcher of the Sox was tossed out of the game for arguing with officials, as was catcher Johnny Fornari of Tigers.

At Stratford the Nationals counted three runs in the eighth to take a two-run lead. When St. Thomas threatened in the ninth Nationals replaced lefty Allen with Vern Richardson. With one away and two on, Richardson forced Bill McCarthy to pop to third and gave up a single to Jack Randall who chased in Soddy Groat with St. Thomas's sixth marker. Jim Myers grounded to second to end the game.

Bobby Schnurr started for Kitchener in the London game but was pulled in the third after London had driven in eight runs. Wally Beggs took over from Schnurr, Duane Gottschall, London righthander, allowed six hits. The defeat ended any Kitchener hopes of ending in the top playoff posts.

In the Viaduct League Oshawa Merchants took the league title in Peterborough by blasting out an 18-3 victory over Peterborough Marines. The Merchants won the series four games to two.

Slammer Sam Wins Another Golf Tourney

Reading, Pa., Sept. 11—(CP)—Samuel Jackson Snead, the golfing west Virginia hillbilly headed for St. Louis today, his pocket jingling with cash.

It was an old feeling for Snead biggest money winner among North American golfers, but the jingle of the coin was louder than it has been since last May.

For Snead had won his first major tournament since he took the Colonial Invitation at Fort Worth, Tex.

It was quite a victory. In picking up top money of $2,600 at the Reading open, Snead shattered the competitive course record on the 6,456- yard Berkshire Country Club layout. And he set his record in a driving rainstorm.

Yesterday he fired his fourth straight sub-par round to come home with his record-breaking score of 268.

Jim Ferrier of San Francisco, Canadian open winner, was eight strokes behind in second place with a 72-hole of 276. He beat fastfinishing Glenn Teal of Jacksonville, Fla., for place money by a single stroke.

New York Yankees Still Right Up in Pennant Race Thanks to Resurgence of DiMag

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Yankees hopes of a second straight American League pennant have found a new stimulus in the booming bat of Joe DiMaggio.

The lean Yankee Clipper, a great "climax" performer who dramatically fired last year's "team of destiny" to the championship, is showing signs of doing it again in the nerve-jabbing stretch drive.

DiMaggio created Griffith Stadium history yesterday as he smashed three prodigious 400-foot-plus home runs into the left-field stands. His blows—the first time a player has planted three in the distant tiers in a single game—brought the Yankees an 8-1 victory over the Senators in the first half of a doubleheader.

Besides his homers, which raised his output to 27, DiMaggio socked a double and drew a walk batted in four runs, scored four and raised his batting average to .293.

The Clipper almost found the range twice in the nightcap which was halted in the fourth inning because of rain, with the Senators ahead 6-2. Leaping catches in front of the barrier deprived DiMaggio of two additional home runs.

DiMaggio's demonstration of his old-time power arrived on the eve of the Yankees' final and most important western trip of the season.

Within Half Game

By taking the opener, the Yankees edged to within half a game of the league-leading Detroit Tigers, who split a doubleheader with Chicago White Sox. The Yanks also retained their half-game edge over the third-place Boston Red Sox, who turned back their Philadelphia "cousins" 6-2.

Lefty Hal Newhouser pitched the Tigers to a 1-0 12 inning victory over Randy Gumpert in the opener at Chicago, winning out on a triple by Hoot Evers and single by Johnny Groth. The White Sox took the nightcap 5-4 behind Ray Scarborough, who gained his first victory in six decisions over the Tigers this year.

A three-run pinch-hit double by Tom Wright featured a four-run eighth inning rally that gave the Red Sox their 22nd consecutive victory over the Athletics at Fenway Park.

Walt Dropo smashed a two-run homer, his 33rd, to start the Red Sox scoring in the fourth.

Indians Practically Out

St. Louis Browns further dampened Cleveland's pennant hopes by nosing out the fourth-place Indians 2-1. It was the Browns' fourth straight victory over the tribe, who trail by seven games. Stubby Overmire scattered eight Cleveland hits in besting Bob Feller, who permitted only five.

In the National League, Boston Braves defeated the pace-setting Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 in a game that was called in the sixth inning because of rain. The score reverted back to the fifth and washed out a homer by rookie Johnny Mayo of the Phils. Johnny Sain gained his 18th victory for the Braves.

The Phils, however, retained their 6 1-2 game bulge over the runner-up Dodgers as Brooklyn dropped a 6-4 decision to New York Giants. Home runs by Monte Irvin, Bob Thomson and Wes Westrum featured the Giant drive that returned Larry Jansen his 16th victory.

St. Louis split a doubleheader with the Pirates, winning the opener 6-5 in 10 innings but losing the finale 6-2.

Maglie on Way To Make History In Major Loop

New York, Sept. 11—(AP)—Sal Maglie, curve-balling sensation of the New York Giants, is on his way to making baseball history but Ralph Kiner's big home-run bat stands in his path.

The ex-Mexican leaguer, with 39 straight scoreless innings in the books, needs only 7 2-3 more frames to break Carl Hubbell's National League record. Hubbell hurled 46 1-3 scoreless innings of 1933. The Major-league record is 56, set by Walter Johnson of Washington in 1913.

Maglie's next start is scheduled to be Wednesday, against Pittsburgh at the polo grounds.

"It's funny," says the hefty Italian who used to live in Welland, Ont., "but I've blanked those guys for 22 innings now. That Kiner, though. One swing and it's all over."

The six-foot-two righthander didn't seem too impressed with his four straight shutouts, a feat which placed him beside such mound immortals as Mordecai Brown, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Ed Ruelbach and Bill Lee.

"Sure, I've thought about Hubbell's record," he said, "and I'm going to try to break it. But the important thing is that I pitched, and we won."

Oshawa Generals Taken Under Wing Of Detroit Wings

(By The Canadian Press)

Detroit Red Wings now have two farm teams in the Ontario Hockey Association.

Reports from Windsor during the weekend were that Oshawa Generals have been taken under the wing of the champion Red Wings. Windsor Spitfires are already a Detroit farm club.

Larry Aurie, one-time Red Wing star and a Detroit scout last season, will be the Oshawa coach, replacing Tommy Anderson.

Lloyd Pollock, Spitfires manager who made the announcement, said that despite the dual sponsorship, Windsor will get first choice of new amateurs coming into the Detroit organization.

The dual sponsorship by the Red Wings in the nine-team OHA circuit brings the Detroit system up to par with Toronto Maple Leafs who also sponsor two teams, Toronto Marlboros and Toronto St. Michaels.

Under the 50-mile zoning rule Detroit had to obtain permission from Toronto to take over the Oshawa club, which finished in the cellar last year.

Big Jim Konstanty, the Philadelphia Phillies relief specialist, Saturday was elected Philadelphia's most-valuable major league baseball player.

Konstanty got 84,332 votes of a total of 190,884 cast in a contest conducted by the Sunday Bulletin. He polled twice as many as his closest rival, Del Ennis, the Phils slugging rightfielder.

The on-again-off-again Major Series for top-flight Canadian senior hockey clubs is on, says A. W. Pickard of Regina.

The past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association made the statement during the weekend, at the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan branch in Moose Jaw.

"The only thing that can throw a monkey-wrench into the series would be the failure of the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior 'A' group to operate," he told the meeting.

The Major Series was proposed by the C.A.H.A. as a new playoff for teams in the country's top senior circuits—the Western Canada, O.H.A., Quebec and Maritime leagues.

Before Pickard spoke, the latest report was that the series — born at the association's annual meeting in Banff, Alta., earlier this year—would be shelved because professional hockey interests hadn't approved it.

A two-day hockey clinic for New England coaches, players and fans will be held Sept. 26-27 at the Boston Arena, it was announced Saturday night.

Many top hockey figures have been invited to attend the clinic. Among them are:

Ted Lindsay of Detroit, the National Hockey League's top scorer last season; Chuck Rayner New York goalie and 1949-50 winner of the Hart Trophy as the national circuit's most valuable player; Kenny Reardon of Montreal Canadiens and Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins.

University of Toronto's senior football team will use the "T" formation in the Intercollegiate League this season.

When the Blues arrived at their Lake Couchiching preseason training camp last Saturday, coach Bob Masterson had not yet decided whether to switch from the single wing system he had used since taking over coaching the Blues two years ago.

After a week of seeing what talent he would have to work with he made up his mind to make the change, although he still has the problem of finding good quarterback who can get the quick-breaking plays from a "T" under way.

Walter McElroy, young Vancouver star, won 2 and 1 over Norman Wilkinson of Vancouver in the 36-hole final Saturday of the 21st annual Totem Pole golf tournament at Jasper, Alta.

Windsor, Ont. — (CP) — When police were called to investigate a "rowdy" party at a local roadhouse, they found the noise was coming from a group of teenagers having a last fling before school reopened. The proprietor said: "I guess they can get as noisy on soft drinks as most people can on hard drinks."

● Since the day B-A's new multi-million dollar refinery went "on stream," there has been a steadily increasing supply of the new 88 and 98 gasolines.

B-A knew these gasolines were better gasolines when they were introduced. And B-A is delighted that tens of thousands of Canadian motorists have since confirmed the fact—and continue to confirm it week after week.

Today, three months since the introduction of the new gasolines, the new refinery is at peak production.

Across Canada more and more motorists are stopping at the sign of the big B-A. They are discovering the power, economy and performance to be found in the new 88 and 98 gasolines.

Peak production will meet the continuing demand for the new gasolines. And the new gasolines will continue to demonstrate more power and greater economy from coast to coast.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

There is much to be told about an opening lead of a trump. You have recently read here of three situations in which a trump lead is considered favorable. There are several others.

Rule says a trump is led to show an ace or king in each unbid suit. Also a lead of a trump under certain conditions when holding four or more trumps. Also from any number to stop possible ruffs.

Hear of another case where a trump lead is favored by experts. It is when your partner has opened the bidding with one no-trump. If, of course, an opponent becomes the declarer at a trump contract.

Having shown a no-trump hand partner has a number of big cards. Most of them will take tricks only if they are not ruffed. So, help him push out the opponent trumps as fast as possible.

♥9 8
♦Q 6 4 3
♣10 6 4 2

The bidding went like this:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	2 H	Pass	3 H
Pass	4 H	All Pass

This is a good time for you to start with an opening lead of a heart. Your trump lead will start pushing out the opponent trumps. Your partner will return trumps every time he gets in.

It is possible that your trump lead may spoil a good trump in the hand of your partner. But you have this consolation. The same damage would be done when dummy led a trump through partner.

This danger is worth risking for the good it is likely to do your side. Even the loss of a trump trick by your side will be made up by the tricks in side suits your partner will take.

Trump leads handicap opponents who depend mostly on ruffs for their tricks. When they show their teeth start pulling their fangs.

Hollywood, Sept. 9 — (AP) — They had a press conference for Vivien Leigh and you'd be surprised at the things she discussed.

Such things as avocados, square dancing and nonshifting cars.

A number of the press were ushered into an extra fancy dining room near the set of "A Streetcar Named Desire." Miss Leigh's first American film in 10 years. She soon appeared, dressed in a faded dressing gown and a blonde wig for her role. She proved to be more down to earth than the classy surroundings.

"We discovered square dancing," she reported, speaking of herself and her husband, Sir Laurence Olivier, also here for a film role.

"It was the first we'd ever done and we found it great fun.

"We went to a party for children at Edna Best's, intending to stay a half-hour. We stayed all evening and had a wonderful time. Square dancing seems to be the best possible way to get one's exercise."

Someone asked if she is driving a car in California.

"Oh, no," she replied. "The traffic is too terrible. And I wouldn't want to try one of those cars that shifts itself, like the ones you have here. I like to shift gears and put in the clutch, not have the car drive itself. That frightens me."

What food is she enjoying most that she didn't get in England? There was no hesitation: "Avocados!"

Miss Leigh dropped one remark that set the reporters scribbling. Asked about Olivier's plans to film more Shakespeare, she replied:

"I don't think he'd reveal. If he did, Orson Welles might start filming the same thing immediately."

No-Hit, No-Run Game Hurled By Norm Bagnell

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—Norm Bagnell Saturday night hurled a no-hit, no-run game to lead Oshawa Pedlars to the Canadian National Exhibition softball championship.

Bagnell struck out 19 men and issued only a single walk as Oshawa defeated Hamilton Slaters 6-0 in the final game of a two-week series. Bill Barker hit a four-run homer in the seventh.

The spectacular mound performance came in the second half of an iron-man stunt by the slim Oshawa hurler. He tossed a four-hitter in an afternoon game as Pedlars downed Toronto Hustlers 3-1 in a semi-final match.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP) — The National Hockey League has more than $500,000 in its players pension fund with the fourth annual All-Star game, which provides the dough, scheduled Oct. 9 in Detroit…And there hasn't been any big TV dough, either… When Ray Famechon bounced back after appendix and nose operations to defend his European middleweight title, it inspired his brother, Andre, who had been badly hurt in an auto accident in Australia, to try fighting again. Andre found the opposition too tough.

DeFeetists

Bob and Bill Carey, Michigan State's footballing twins, showed up for the start of practice in a pickup truck, painted in the school colors (green and white) and lettered "The Carey-All."… Erick Kuykendall, Illinois soph fullback, may beat out the other four candidates, who are little guys weighing 190 or less… Abe Satterfield, assistant Louisiana State line coach, was one of the south's most promising designers of clothes before taking up footfall coaching. Brewers Downed For Second Time By Point Anne Point Anne Cementmen took a stranglehold on their Commercial League 'A' series with Brewers Warehouse Saturday night when they downed the sudsmen 6-4 at Alemite Field. The win gave the Cementmen a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five series.

The Cementmen struck early for five runs and then threw up an airtight defence to ward off a closing rally by the Brewers. Some sensational fielding by both sides in the later innings brought the crowd to its feet.

The Cementmen opened scoring in the first frame with Jack Hunter smashing a triple to right field with one away. Murney Green delivered a long fly to right field to plate Hunter. The Pointers poured in two more tallies in the second on a walk a single and two errors by the usually reliable Jim Barriage. They shoved across two more in the third on singles by Murney Green and Keith Baldwin, and a double by Perry Everett.

Big Jim Hunter doing the firing for the Cementmen was working on a four-hitter going into the sixth when Wood got a life on a error. Locke struck out and Goyer singled to centre field to push Locke to third. Goyer stole second and Halsey struck out. Harold Reid singled to right to drive in Wood and Goyer and Nolan lined out to short to end the inning.

A Circus Catch

Perry Everett came up with a circus catch in centrefield in the seventh inning to choke off a threatened rally. With two out, men on first and second base, Locke lifted a Texas Leaguer into short centrefield as the runners streaked for the plate. Everett, playing deep, charged the ball all the way taking it right off his shoetops with one hand on the full gallop. It was one of the most spectacular catches seen locally in some years and brought the fans to their feet in applause.

The Brewers finally cracked the Pointers defence in the eighth for two runs. Goyer singled to lead off and Vic Halsey slammed one into left field that might have gone for a home run but the ball rolled under a car parked in left field for a ground rule double.

When the rhubarb finally died down and the debators had dispersed Pat Maracle was in there dong the flinging for Point Anne. He got Harold Reid on a pop up to first with Goyer coming home on the play. Nolan fouled out to short and Jack Whiting singled to drive in Halsey. Green struck out to end the inning. The Brewers went down in order in the ninth.

Point Anne connected for an insurance run in the ninth on a walk and triple.

Jim Hunter started for Point Anne and in seven innings walked none, struck out five and gave up 10 hits for four runs, Pat Maracle threw a one hitter in two innings of relief.

Bob Green went down to defeat for the Brewers. He went the route walking three, striking out four and giving up 10 hits for six runs.

Jim Hunter and Leo Goyer led all batters with three safeties, in four trips.

Sports Shorts From Britain

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 9 (CP) — A five roomed apartment in London's Kensington district is being stripped of feminine fripperies and made ready for some tough guys from Canada.

The apartment belongs to Harry Sheppard of Montreal, a 50-year-old boxing manager, and the tough tenants-to-be are Canadian fighters who can't find anywhere else to stay in Britain.

Sheppard formerly shared the quarters with his wife and their 22-year-old actress daughter, Mary. When Mary decided to go to Ottawa for a show Mrs. Sheppard went along, and Sheppard was left on his lonesome.

But not for long. Harry had always had housing trouble with his fighters, so he decided to convert the apartment into London headquarters for visiting Canadian clouters. He expects to have as many as half a dozen sleeping there when the winter season really gets under way.

"I'll just put in a couple of beds, change the furniture around a little, and the boys should be pretty comfortable," Sheppard said in an interview.

It looks as though extra space will be needed. All signs are that the annual Canadian invasion of British rings is going to be bigger than ever. Promoters are looking for anybody who can lift a glove.

Canadians Popular

Among boxers booked for bouts in Britain are Lou Alter, Manny Spivack and Maxy Spoon all of Montreal; Earl Walls of Windsor, Ont., known to British fans as "The Hooded Terror"; Stan and Frankie Almond of Vancouver; and Tiger Warrington of Kentville, N.S.

Alter, first of the Canadian contingent to get here, arrived Aug. 18 on the liner Empress of Scotland. Next day he was signed for a match Sept. 26 in London's Albert Hall.

What makes Canadian punchers so popular? The grey-haired Sheppard, who has done as much as anybody to promote the trans-Atlantic traffic, says that confidentially, it's the money.

"The money's here," he said. "When I was in Canada, I used to pick up the paper and read about how well American fighters were doing in this country.

"Well, I said to myself, why not read Canadian for American? So I packed up and came over, and I've been busy ever since."

So busy that he hasn't had a chance to get back to Montreal, where he maintains a gymnasium for the some 20 boxers in whom he has "an interest." But he doesn't lose touch with them. He stays here, and the fighters come to him.

FELL FROM TREE

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 11 (AP) — A 23-year-old Norwegian seaman fell from a tree and was killed here yesterday, police said, while he tried to hide from officers to drink a bottle of wine with a shipmate. His companion was treated for possible fractures of the ribs.

16TH VICTIM OF CRASH

Utica, N.Y., Sept. 11 (AP) — Seaman Thomas Ochar, Jr. 21 of Little Falls, N.Y., died last night in hospital, the 16th victim of the Labor Day crash of a Robinson Airlines DC-3 near Utica airport.

Two crew members and 10 of the 20 passengers were killed in the wreck. Two passengers and the third crew member died later in Utica hospitals.

AT THE BELLE

"Stars in My Crown" Rich in Heart Appeal

"Stars in My Crown" new M.G.M. attraction at the Belle Theatre, is a tenderly-unfolded, heartwarming story of a small southern settlement at the close of the Civil War and of a two-fisted preacher who leads the way in making his community a better place to live in.

Joel McCrea enacts Josiah Gray, ex-cavalryman who comes to the little village of Walesburg, inspires the community to build its first church, marries the pretty organist, Harriet, and becomes a second father to their little ward, John. The parson's steadfast courage and honesty make themselves felt on almost every member of the village and he even wins the inconoclastic Doc Harris over to his side when he saves the life of the latter's fiancee, Faith, after all the doctor's medical knowledge has failed. Only one man proves stubborn in his resistance to Josiah's precepts of honor and humanity. He is Lon Backett, the town's richest man, who tries to exert his own authority over that of the law, but who in the picture's stirring climax, is forced to bow to the stronger will of the indomitable preacher.

Although "Stars in My Crown" has its share of rugged action it is the atmospheric details of a small, growing village, the homespun humor and the vivid naturalness of characterization which gives the picture its warmth and color.

The picture has been beautifully cast, with Joel McCrea's portrait of the parson, who can preach with his fists as well as with words, one of the most satisfying characterizations he has ever attempted. Ellen Drew is excellent as his industrious young wife, with Dean Stockwell winning many of the laughs in the role of little John who would like it always to be summer so that there would be no school. Standing out in the large supporting cast are Alan Hale and Lewis Stone.

"Stars in My Crown" emerges as one of the season's fine motion pictures. It will prove an entertainment treat for filmgoers of every age.

AT THE CAPITOL

The exciting story of romantic half-mad, half-genius James Addison Reavis, the man who almost stole Arizona from the United States in addition to stealing many a feminine heart, has been brought to the screen in Lippert Pictures lavish, sweeping "The Baron of Arizona" starring Vincent Price and Ellen Drew, which opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre.

Reavis, a one-time clerk in the Arizona land office, hatched a plan to swindle the whole 113,000 square miles of the Arizona Territory on the basis of a forged Spanish land grant. Using a beautiful woman as his dupe, he passed her off as a direct descendant of a non-existent Spanish nobleman who, according to his forged papers, owned the land. Then he married the girl, and set himself up as the "Baron" of Arizona.

Historically, the United States Government was so impressed with his documents and glib story that the Department of Interior offered him a cool $25 million for his interest in the disputed real estate. The "Baron" by this time so amazed of the success of his huge fraud that he probably believed it himself, held out for $300 million.

The shrewd traders in Washington—after all they made the Louisiana Purchase for a paltry $15 million and picked up Alaska at the bargain day price of $7,200,000—turned down the asking price and decided to see if they could prove Reavis a phony.

The rest is Arizona history. But what isn't well known is the skullduggery, bribery, sharp tongue and smooth ways practised by Reavis in getting all his papers forged and altering land grant books all over the world.

As the French say, "Look for the Woman", and that is exactly what Reavis did. The film picks up his romantic tracks as he makes love to everybody from a gypsy girl to Spanish royalty, always with the idea of getting his hands on Arizona. The more women who succumbed to his blandishments, the more forged documents he got.

Of course, it was a woman who led to his downfall at the end, which is poetic justice. But it has always seemed strange that when Reavis finally did fall in love, it was with his wife, and that led him straight to the federal prison in Santa Fe.

Tall, handsome and suave Vincent Price, a glib speaker and romantic figure off screen as well as on, plays the "Baron", while beautiful and capable Ellen Drew is the wife. Assisting are Beulah Bondi, Vladimir Sokoloff, Reed Hadley, Robert Barrat, Tina Rome, Margia Dean, Robin Short and hundreds more.

Samuel Fuller, movie writer-director, who has been fascinated by Arizona history and Reavis, wrote and directed the original screenplay based on the true facts of the gigantic land swindle. Carl K. Hittleman produced, and the film is being presented by Robert L. Lippert.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was late for supper again today after a special warning yesterday for being late two days in a row, and I started to sit down with a innocent expression like somebody acting naturel, and pop said, Just a moment, young man. Before you start to eat, you'd better come across with a pritty good alibi, he said.

Meening a perfect reason for being late, and I said, Well G, I couldn't help it, and Puds and Shorty were late for the same reason, so I'm not the only one.

You're the only one that happens to live here, pop said, and I said, Well okay, I'll tell you what happened, but I didn't want to tell you rite away because I thawt it mite spoil ma's appetite by reminding her of the time you took us to that German resterant for dinner and we had those grate big sausidges in sowerkrut, and afterwards ma didn't feel rite around the stummick for a week.

Goodness, let him pospone it, by all meens, ma said, and after dizzert I said, Now do you want to hear what made me late?

Tell your father, I'm not intristed, ma said.

And she quick got up and left, and I said to pop, Me and Puds and Shorty walked out to the Park, and the reason we were late starting home was because some man was selling balloons, and he had a grate big enormiss bunch of them, and we didn't know how long it would be before we had another chance to see a man selling balloons, so we just stood there and stood there, and naturelly of course it got later and later.

And where do sausidges enter the picture for Peet sake? pop said, and I said, That's the only kind he had, I meen balloons in the shape of big sausidges.

Not being quite the end of the subject.

ACHESON

He hinted on a television program that meanwhile the United States and its allies have a powerful balancing weapon in atomic superiority. Noting that the western powers have only about 12 divisions in Europe and the Russians have a grand total in Europe and Asia of 175 to 200, Acheson said "the gap (in relative strength) is not quite as great as the figures indicate."

Acheson also said that while a great variety of diplomatic problems cries out for attention, he thinks that "we must put our major effort at the present moment into creating strong North Atlantic defence forces."

Western military leaders now have under study the maximum buildup of armed forces which they can hope to achieve in a series of steps dependent mainly on the rate of weapons production and the speed of training.

Deadline Set

The key planning date, it was learned, is next July 1. The date in itself is described by authorities as having no special significance in relation to what Russia may do before or after that time.

A later date, however, has significance. That is July 1, 1952.

It is the date after which anything may happen, in the opinion of American officials. In other words, it is a date by which a maximum build-up of western strength should be in motion, on the theory that by then Russia will have such military power as to be willing to pursue a much more dangerous political policy than she would follow before then.

In addition to this basic military scheduling which provides the groundwork for Acheson's policy planning, Acheson himself believes that the west must put its rearmament program into high gear with the greatest possible speed so that when the period of maximum danger comes—whenever that may be—the effort will be so far advanced that new perils will serve to stimulate than to discourage it.

One of Several

Truman's troop decision, though the only one announced, was one of several policy recommendations shaped up by Acheson and defence secretary Louis Johnson during the last week in preparation for the meeting here.

The others are understood to cover:

1. Full-scale American participation in the organization of a great West European force against communism.

2. Partial, carefully-controlled rearmament of Western Germany

3. United States participation in a combined production authority. Responsible informants say Atlantic treaty defence leaders are already agreed that a combined military organization should be parallelled or even preceded by combined production headquarters.

Lightest Toll Of Any Weekend During Summer

(By The Canadian Press)

Eastern Canada today counted one of the lightest accidental-death tolls of any weekend this summer.

A Canadian Press compilation Saturday and Sunday showed 13 violent and accidental deaths—10 in Ontario, two in Quebec and one in Nova Scotia.

Ontario's total comprised five traffic fatalities, three drownings, a fall and an accidental shooting.

The Nova Scotia death was that of Avard Swindell, 13, af Hammond Plains, near Halifax, who was killed by a stray bullet from a target rifle. Pending further investigation, police withheld the name of the shooter.

There were two fatal traffic accidents in Quebec, Lisle Gagnon, 5, was killed on the outskirts of Quebec City when she was hit by a car. Jean Paul Dufor, 32, of Longueuil, lost his life when his car went out of control Saturday near the Caughnawaka Indian Reservation, not far from Montreal.

In Toronto, Bernard Hutt, 17, killed himself while playing "Russian roulette" with a revolver in an attempt to impress his girl friend. Alexander Groat, 70, was killed, when he tumbled down a flight of steps, striking his head against a concrete floor.

Washed Ashore

An unidentified man, believed to be about 70, was washed ashore in Lake Ontario near Cobourg. It was estimated the body had been in the water about a week.

On Centre Island in Toronto harbor, Charlie Oldshaw, 3, wandered away from his parents and fell into a lagoon. John Drenters, 20, was drowned near Guelph while swimming with a friend Saturday.

While crossing an Ottawa street, Mrs. Eva Whalen, 63, was struck by a car and died later in hospital. Michael Coules, 67, also was fatally injured by a car while crossing a street, in Marmora. A London truck driver, Archibald Clare, 21, lost control of his truck Sunday and was killed when it swerved into a parked car. In a three-car collision near Brampton, Albert Getty, 38, Toronto, was killed and six persons were injured. Albwas Vwas, 30, died in Hamilton from injuries received in a motorcycle accident.

Nine Soccer Players Killed on R.R. Crossing

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 11—(Reuters)—Nine soccer players on their way home after a match were killed last night when a truck and train collided at a crossing near Vryheid, Northern Natal.

SOFT DRINKS 6 CENTS

Toronto, Sept. 11—(CP)—Coca Cola and Orange Crush Saturday announced resumption of sales after suspending deliveries throughout Canada for 38 hours. The suspension followed announcement of a 30-per-cent tax in Ottawa's baby budget this week.

Spokesman for both manufacturers said sales resumed today at six cents a bottle compared with five cents before the tax announcement.

A spokesman for Orange Crush said the new price is only tentative and may change.

FRANKFORD

Canadian Legion Holds Successful Carnival, Dance

Frankford—The Canadian Legion street dance and carnival Friday night may not have been the largest attended but anyone who came out had a real evening of fun and entertainment. Bingo and games kept the adults entertained and the children were able to purchase novelties at a special children's booth, or try their luck in the fish pond. Sherwood Reid provided the music for dancing, round and square Big event of the evening was the draw for three fine prizes. Nelson Lawrence of Frankford was the winner of the first prize a television set. Wilson Rankin won the second prize a .22 repeating rifle, and E. Taylor of 54 Cannifton Road, Belleville was the third prize winner, this prize being a quilt.

The Ladies Auxiliary capably handled the booth, and kept busy all evening serving pie and pastry along with coffee, hot dogs and soft drinks.

A large number of Frankford citizens contributed generously in material and services to make this carnival a great success. These would be numerous too mention but the Legion would like to say a special thank you to Harry Wickson, for the use of his truck and for the many hours work he himself put in. A special thank you also to Mr. and Mrs. Babcock for their co-operation in withholding the sale soft drinks while the Legion booth was operating. The Legion is grateful to the organizations and private citizens who loaned tables and chairs.

The proceeds of the carnival will go to carry on with the new Legion building now under construction on King Street.

Prague, Sept. 11 (AP)— The Cominform Weekly, entitled "For a Lasting Peace, For a People's Democracy," is now being issued in Korean, said an advertisement published [illegible] today. That, the ad said, is one of 15 languages in which the newspaper is printed in Bucharest. The paper is the organ of the Information Bureau of the communist parties of the Soviet Union, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Bulgaria, France and Italy.

Terchelling, The Netherlands, Sept. 11 (Reuters) — The 7,230-ton Panamanian ship Sparto struck a mine early today off Aameland Island near the north Dutch coast. The ship was on her way from Hamburg to Amsterdam. A Dutch tug went to the Sparto's assistance.

Blood on the Stars

By Brett Halliday

"But they could tell," said Celia spiritedly. "Mr. Voorland said that anyone could instatly recognize a star ruby as the real thing... and professional jewel thieves certainly must know about prices ...and all that."

"Chief Painter is right," Mark told her wearily. "That job has all the earmarks of careful planning. Voorland knew you planned to wear it tonight," he went on slowly. "I told him on Monday when we bought it and then reminded him a couple of times afterwards. He knows how much it's worth too."

Peter Painter bristled. The detective chief appeared to strut while standing perfectly still in his polished shoes. He shook his head emphatically. "Not Walter Voorland. He woudn't be mixed up in anything like this. He has run that store for twenty years and has the most exclusive clientele on the Beach."

"Mark..."Celia timidly plucked at his sleeve and lowered her voice. "There was somebody else. Remember that friend of Mr. Voorland's who was in the store Monday He knew how much it cost, and he heard us say I wanted to wear it to the concert tonight."

Nonsense," said Dustin impatiently. "He's a detective, not a jewel thief."

"What's that?" Painter stepped closer inclining his head. "A detective? Who?"

"Celia just remembered there was another couple in the store when we bought the bracelet and told Mr. Voorland she wanted to wear it tonight," Dustin explained. "But the man was a private detective. The girl was his secretar. Beside, he was a good friend of Mr. Voorland's."

"Private detective." Painter's voice was sharp. "What was his name?"

"Michael Shayne. I imagine you've heard of him around town.'

"Shayne? Heard of him?" Painter whirled and strutted to the telephone.

• • •

Michael Shayne and his brown-haired secretary were playing a childish game. At least, Lucy Hamilton was playing a game and Shayne guessed what it was. He abetted it by pretending he didn't know what Lucy was pretending.

It was evening, and they were together in the downtown apartment on the bank or the Miami River which had been home to Shayne during his batchelor years. He had turned it into an office during the period when he was married to Phyllis. Returning to Miami after two years in New Orleans he had been fortunate enough to secure his old apartment again.

It was in New Orleans that he met Lucy Hamilton hired her as his secretary, and eventually found himsef making a confidante of her. Lucy was more like Phyllis than any girl he had ever met, and during the months in New Orleans he sensed that there was growing between them a feeling more intimate than that of employer and confidential secretary. He had gone to New Orleans thinking that getting away from the apartment might ease the sorrow of losing Phyllis. Six months ago he had returned to Miami, felling that in fairness to Lucy and himself a separation would give them a chance to objectively consider what their future relations should be.

Lucy had a single room down the hall, and this afternoon she had come in with a bag of groceries, competently taken over the kitchenette in his apartment, and cooked a dinner for two which she served charmingly on a small table in the living room.

She proved to be a splendid cook. She concocted what she called "Poor-girl steak" consisting of beef ground twice with a small piece of bacon. To complete the meal she served baked yams with garlic-flavored gravy and black coffee. She wore a frilly blue and white apron over a white skirt and blue blouse and was very domestic and matter-of-fact as she cleared the table and washed the dishes Shayne settled himself comfortably with a noggin of cognac and a cigarette in the shabbily furnished living room.

"In this case it wasn't difficult at all for the detective chief to think I stole the bracelet," said Shayne explosively. He held up his left hand with the five fingers extended and turned down one big knuckled finger as he made each point.

"Here's what he got: You wanted the bracelet for yourself. You said so right out loud and I admitted out loud I couldn't afford it. We were there and heard Voorland's sales talk and the price. We heard Dustin say his wife wanted it to wear tonight. Added to that, I'm an unscrupulous so-and-so who has been getting in Petey Painter's hair for the past seven years, and it's his theory that if you throw enough mud some of it is bound to stick."

"But everyone knows you here in Miami." Lucy looked at him, her brown eyes aghast.

"That's just it."

"But...I don't understand."

"Stick around, darling, and you will." Shayne grinned suddenly got up and pinched her cheek. "Wait until you read this story the way Painter hands it out to the papers. You'll discover that we've discovered some sort of orgy that requires star rubies dissolved in blood with which we drink a toast at the stroke of midnight under a full moon when Jupiter is in the ascendency."

Lucy's full red mouth quivered, uncertain whether to laugh or cry. "Michael! You're just..teasing." She moved closer to him. "They won't dare say things like that."

"They'll hint them." He put his arms around her. "Wait until I offer our cozy little home-cooked dinner in my apartment as an alibi. Painter can do a lot with that."

"But it wasn't anything: I just ...cooked dinner for you."

"That's what you think," he countered cheerfully. He was suddenly grave holding her away from him with his hands on her shoulders. "You can still stay clear of it, Lucy. Pack your stuff and move to another hotel. Then buy a ticket and get out of town."

"You know I won't do anything of the kind." Her eyes were moist and shining. "I'm not afraid."

He shook his red head somberly. "It won't be nice. You really don't know what you're walking into in Miami." His voice became harsh. "I've deliberately built up a reputation over the years that lays me wide open for a charge like this. I can take it, but I wonder if you can."

"Of course I can," she said stoutly.

Shayne chuckled and his hands tightened on her shoulders, then he opened them slowly placed his palms on her cheeks and pulled her to him and kissed her lips. He said, "You're swell, Lucy." He turned to stride across the room to get his hat from a rack.

Lucy stood where she was and watched him.

"You'd better go back to your own room. God knows when I'll be back," he said when he reached the door.

"I'll be here waiting for you," she said, "when you do come."

He nodded and went out, closing the door gently.

• • •

Celia Dustin opened the door of the hotel suite for Michael Shayne. Beyond her, he saw Peter Painter and Walter Voorland conferring together. Mark Dustin reclined on a couch, his right cheek and hand heavily bandaged.

Celia's eyes widened when she saw the tall, redheaded detective. "You're Mr. Shayne," she said.

"That's right, Mrs. Dustin. I heard about the robbery. Is your husband badly injured?"

"Mark's so impetuous. He didn't have a chance against all three of them...and they had guns." She stood aside to let them enter.

Voorland looked up, worried and disturbed and gave Shayne a friendly nod of greeting. Painter strutted forward like a fighting cock and stopped in front of him with his small feet planted widely apart, his hands clasped behind his back. "All right, Shayne," he snapped. "What do you know about this?"

"Very little," Shayne confessed. He looked over the detective chief's head at the jeweler.

Voorland wasn't chewing gum and he looked grave as he met the question in Shayne's gray eyes. "It's bad, Mike. First time Mrs. Dustin wore her new bracelet, and it's gone..like that." He snapped his fleshy fingers resoundingly.

Scout News

Late last week Scouts R. Moore, G. Putman, R. Gilham, R. Owen, T. Haire, J. Bedford, F. Mossman, M. Waite and K. Moore (T.L.) left for Wallbridge where they camped outdoors for the weekend. The boys arrived after dark and set up camp by firelight and starlight. Sleeping was light during the night due to the hard ground, a dance hall which was nearby and various other interuptions.

The next morning a Scouts Own was held, after which the boys were assigned projects to complete during their stay.

Rain threatened the Scouts more than once, but each time they only shrugged and added more boughs to water proof their bivouacs.

During their stay the Scouts built their own shelters, cooked their own individual meals, played wide games, explored, passed tests and had a wonderful time.

The boys wish to thank Mr. G. Ketcheson for the use of his land, a large feed of corn and his regular visits to see how they were progressing.

200 Million Dollar Diamond?

If a diamond as large as a baseball were ever found, it would probably be worth about 200 million dollars. But it would benefit only the person who owned it.

The amount of money which the life insurance companies in Canada invest each year on behalf of their policy-holders is large enough to buy such a diamond! But this money is invested in ways which benefit every Canadian.

It is put to work to help build new schools, new power plants, highways, industrial plants, homes and many other vitally important constructions. In all these ways it promotes progress and helps create jobs in communities throughout the nation.

Thus life insurance works for everyone two ways. It helps raise living standards. And it provides security by building income for old age and protection for families. Today nearly 5 million Canadians are creating this security for themselves and their families the life insurance way!

Purchases to Fill Contract For 60,000,000 lbs. Delayed

Ottawa, Sept. 12, (CP)—A bit of bad news for Britain: Canadians are eating so much pork that the export orders are going begging.

Agriculture officials said today that because of increased domestic demand for pork—it jumped 20 per cent last month—purchases to fill the United Kingdom bacon contract for 60,000,000 pounds this year are being delayed.

To the end of August, only 15,500,000 pounds had been purchased but the government hopes ot get the other 45,000,000 pounds in the last four months of the year.

Canadian hog marketings this year to the end of August are up 21.5 per cent over the same period in 1949. But domestic consumption to the end of last month increased 20.5 per cent.

Marketings jumped 12.5 per cent in August, compared with the corresponding month last year and eastern farms supplied most of the hogs. Marketings for the western provinces were up 14.8 per cent and from the eastern provinces 11.7 per cent but only 26.7 per cent of the total hogs originated in the west while 45 per cent came from Ontario and 25 per cent from Quebec.

Despite the increase in the number of hogs being marketed, purchases for export under the U.K. contract of 15,500,000 pounds to the end of August compared with 20,500,000 pounds purchased for Britain in the first eight months of last year. The British contract last year was for 160,000,000 pounds but only slightly less than 100,000,000 pounds were delivered.

Officials pointed out that 80,000,000 pounds of the contract last year was filled during the last four months. They again expect that an even bigger boost in marketings during the last four months of this year will permit the purchase of the outstanding 45,000,000 pounds on this year's contract.

The government buys bacon at 32 1-2 cents a pound in the domestic market for Britain and sells it to her at 29 cents, subsidizing the difference out of the federal treasury.

Reds at T.L.C. Administered Two Lusty Wallops

Montreal, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Suspected communists at the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada Convention had two strikes on them today.

Canada's oldest and biggest labor organization, somewhat timorous about dealing with reds up to last year, administered two lusty wallops in the opening stages of its annual meeting here.

The first saw the credentials committee bar 20 suspected communists from the convention floor — an unprecedented step for the 480,000-member Congress.

While the left-wingers were still trying to get around that, Congress president Percy Bengough gave them the other half of his one-two punch by forcing a floor vote on an anti-red resolution that revealed the leftist's to have their poorest representation at the convention in many years.

While they have been able in past years to sway the Congress into a lackadaisical tolerance of communism, this time they could only muster up about 25 votes against some 600.

Take Strong Stand

The resolution took the form of a statement fully backing United Nations policy in Korea, and it was perhaps the strongest anti-red stand in the 65-year history of the Congress.

Mr. Bengough threw it at the delegates right after they had got through the opening formalities. He got the solid expression of support on Korean policy — though not until after several of the small left-wing group had denounced the declaration as "red-baiting" and "war-mongering."

In a debate that became tumultuous at times, those against the resolution had occasional trouble making themselves heard over choruses of boos.

Meanwhile, 20 suspected communists remained off the convention floor, though it was expected their position would be made an issue by their supporters later in the meeting.

Their case was before the executive but it was not expected they would make much headway there. Obviously, the credentials committee had got its instructions from the executive.

However, there appeared to be a chance that some might later be admitted.

SLEPT THROUGH IT ALL

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 12 (CP)—A burglar alarm in an automobile worked perfectly early Monday, but the trouble was it woke everyone but the owner. Police, summoned by irate neighbors, made two trips to silence the horn which had been set off by some slight shock. The owner slept through it all.

CREW MEMBERS STRANDED

Prince Rupert, B.C., Sept. 12—(CP)—The cruiser Ontario received surprise sailing orders Monday night and left so hurriedly that nine seamen were left behind. Destination was not disclosed. Naval headquarters here said the stranded seamen will be shipped south by other means.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 12. (CP)—Synopsis: There isn't much change in the weather picture today. Easterly winds continue to dominate the province with dull skies and occasional rain reported from southern and western regions. Skies have cleared in northeastern Ontario and indications are that slow clearing will take place over most regions by late Wednesday.

Dogs are Taught How to Cross Streets in Safety

Purley, England, Sept. 12 — (Reuters) — Dogs are taught how to cross streets safely at this town near London.

A 10-day course is provided free by a road safety committee.

An official explains: "Sixteen thousand accidents were caused by dogs dashing across busy roads last year — they could have been avoided by training in road sense."

The effectiveness of the training was shown here when 43 dogs of all sorts and sizes bore down on a road, determined to cross it. A group of girls came along on bicycles.

The dogs sat down on the curb until the girls went by. Then they trotted across — and all after only two hours' training

Five Cops Handcuffed Man to Tree, Prisoner, Cuffs and Tree Disappear

Morristown, N.J. Sept. 12 (AP) — Five red-faced policemen would appreciate reports of the whereabouts of an escaped prisoner handcuffed to an uprooted tree.

Walbridge Vanderhoof, 25, charged with burglary and larceny, was taken from jail here yesterday to point out the location of a still.

Sheriff Arnold Ladd and four other officers accompanied the prisoner.

Arriving at a barn, the prisoner said it contained a still and possibly some stolen loot. But he feared to go inside, he said, because members of his former gang might be in the barn, ready to ambush him.

So the five officers handcuffed Vanderhoof to a small tree, and stealthily entered the barn.

They found nothing inside.

When they came out, Vanderhoof was gone, So were the handcuffs—and the tree.

SPECIAL SESSION OF PARLIAMENT NEARING END

Will Prorogue Or Adjourn This Week

Ottawa, Sept. 12 — (CP) — The emergency session of Parliament has just about completed its work.

Called Aug 28—earlier than expected—to deal with the railway strike crisis, it now is all but through with the government's combined defence and "anti-inflationary program," leaving only one major item—the budget debate—on the order paper.

Expectations now are that it will rise—either by prorogation or adjournment—late this week.

The chamber, stepping up its pace noticeably, yesterday gave quick passage to a bill providing for limitations—if necessary—on instalment buying and other forms of consumer credit. It gave the bill both second and third readings in one day.

It also gave second reading and completed clause-by-clause committee work on a second measure authorizing the government to control—again, if necessary—materials designated as essential to the country's defence program.

The essential materials-control bill encountered Pogressive Conservative charges that it gave too much power to Trade Minister Howe, its sponsor and head of Canada's full-scale, wartime industrial control program.

The chamber voted 137 to 33 against Progressive Conservative motion which would have forced the government to withdraw the bill and limit Mr. Howe's authority. Several opposition amendments also were rejected in committee stage.

Mr. Howe said the legislation would give the government power to impose price controls on certain materials and services in cases where prices were increased as a result of heavy defence purchasing.

Finance Minister Abbott piloted the credit limitation bill and said it would apply to instalment buying, charge accounts and repayment of loans made for the purchase of consumer goods.

SPECIAL SESSION—Page 8

40-Hour-Week Effects Are Felt Down on Farm

Toronto, Sept. 12 (CP)—Effects of the 40-hour week in some industries are being felt down on the farm.

That's what Donald MacDonnell, President of the Stormont Federation of Agriculture, told Agriculture Minister Kennedy of Ontario in a letter the minister received today. Mr. MacDonnell wrote that farmers in his eastern Ontario district are reducing herds because they cannot find experienced farm help.

"The situation is being reflected in the cheese industry," he added.

Mr. MacDonnell said the 40-hour week tends to keep costs high and is drawing experienced labor away from farms. He felt that the shorter work week was largely to blame for the high cost of living.

"How can you expect a young man to face the long hours and dangerous service in the armed forces with industry on a 40-hour week?" he asked.

Pearson Hints Arms and Men May be Needed For Europe's Defence Before Senate Group

Ottawa, Sept. 12. (CP)— A considerable gap exists in the defence forces needed to meet an attack in Europe, and Canada will help fill it with the weapons of war and may even be asked to make a contribution of manpower.

This was disclosed by External Affairs Minister Pearson before a Senate committee yesterday. He said Canada may be asked by Atlantic Pact partners to see what she can do in the way of an army contribution as well as the $300,000,000 earmarked in her rearmament budget for arms for Europe.

The minister did not indicate Canada's answer to such a request. But he pointed out that Europe can field armies much more cheaply than Canada.

The whole military organization of the Atlantic pact powers will be discussed at a meeting of their foreign ministers—including himself—in New York this week. The ministers will consider reports from subordinates and the past authorities will inform Canada what is needed most and production will be based on that.

Mr. Pearson made the disclosures in reply to a question during committee consideration of the government's $850,000,000 rearmament program.

The program calls for the raising, training and equipping of a special brigade of close to 9,000 men—including reinforcements—for Korea or elsewhere. It plans to boost Canada's standing army from its present figure of about 20,000 to about 35,000 and bring the reserve army—an integral part of the home defence forces—up to full strength of about 50,000 men.

Recruiting for the navy, army and air force will be boosted to a combined total of about 81,000 the biggest armed forces Canada ever has maintained in peacetime.

Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader, asked Mr. Pearson if he thought he would be asked in New York what Canada could do in the way of an army for Europe. Mr. Pearson said it was likely.

Mr. Pearson said that were he asked what Canada had already done, he would tell the council she had accepted certain continental obligations for coastal and northern defence, certain radar obligations, certain air commitments in the north and the obligation to help arm Europe.

Fireman Dead, Two Men Injured At Mimico Yards

Toronto, Sept. 12—(CP)— A fruit-train derailment that killed one man and injured two others last night at suburban Mimico yards was being investigated today by railway officials.

Fireman E. Ogilvie, 21, of Mimico, was killed and Engineer George Bailey and yard foreman George Lesnick were injured when the rear of a yard engine in which they were riding was struck by the 10-car fruit train from Niagara Falls which had turned off the Canadian National Railways main line and onto secondary tracks.

Both locomotives, their tenders and several cars were derailed.

Railway officials said after preliminary investigation that an open switch sent the fruit train onto a switching track in the yards. The smash came before Murray Davis, engineer of the fruit train, could jam on his emergency brake.

A gaping hole was torn in the boiler of the fruit train's engine. The back of the yard engine's tender was crumpled. Five derailed cars blocked main line traffic for several hours.

Owner of Ski Resort Dies in Death Plunge

New York, Sept. 12 (CP) — Joseph B. Ryan, 46, millionaire owner of ski empire at Mont Tremblant in Quebec's Laurentian Mountains, today was killed in a 22-storey plunge from a window of the Warwick hotel in mid-town New York.

He was a grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan multi-millionaire railroad builder and philanthropist, and a cousin of Clendennin J. Ryan, an independent candidate in New York city's special mayoralty election Nov. 7 and publisher of the American Mercury magazine.

The body was identified by Alex Stephenson, a friend of the family. Stephenson said Ryan complained recently of dizzy spells and insomnia.

Other sources acquainted with the family said he had suffered financial reverses in the last year.

The hotel said the man registered last night. Papers among his effects indicated he drove here yesterday from Quebec. An automobile licence listed his birthplace as Oak Ridge, Va.

The body landed on the sidewalk of the 54th Street hotel in mid-town Manhattan.

Attlee Says UK Will Send More Men to Germany

London, Sept. 12 (CP)—Prime Minister Attlee announced today Britain will send more troops to Germany as part of a vast defence build-up against communist aggression.

Opening an emergency session of parliament, Attlee also disclosed:

1. 250,000 workers will be channelled into arms production as part of a £3,600,000,000 defence program during the next three years.

2. New austerity measures — fewer radios, cars and other luxuries—will be necessary because of the drain on Britain's economy.

3. The government is reviewing its controls over export of goods of potential war value to Russia and her satellites.

4. If necessary to keep the arms program going at top speed, the government will take over the allocation of scarce raw materials.

Right after Attlee finished speaking, opposition leader Winston Churchill appealed for a "European army of at least 60 to 70 divisions" to make "some sort of a front in Europe."

Keays Will be Given Mental Examination

Ottawa, Sept. 12 — (CP)—Ernest Keays, former Ontario Provincial Police constable arrested after brandishing a .32 automatic in county court, will undergo mental examination before he goes on trial on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

Crown Attorney Raoul Mercier asked for the examination in Magistrate's Court today when Keays was arraigned on two charges: carrying a concealed weapon and of unlawfully impersonating a police officer.

Mr. Mercier asked that Keays be arraigned on the first charge only.

"In all fairness to this man," he told Magistrate Glenn Strike, "I would request an adjournment of one week for a mental examination. I think we owe it to him and to his defence."

Keays was arrested yesterday a few minutes after he brandished the automatic pistol during a Carleton county court sitting, shouted he was "subject to arrest" and struggled against the efforts of former Ontario Provincial buddies to overcome him.

WORLD MOURNS ELDER STATESMAN MARSHAL SMUTS

Leader in Three Wars, Two Peace Movements

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 12—(AP)— Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, South African leader in three wars and two world peace movements, died last night in his 81st year.

The end came as the cumulative result of pneumonia, influenza, and heart strain after a back ailment forced him to bed May 28, four days after his 80th birthday.

From around the world, expressions of sympathy poured in to the family of the field marshal—twice prime minister of the Union of South Africa, statesman, philosopher, counselor of kings, and an organizer of both the League of Nations and the United Nations.

The messages reflected the ironic contrast in Smuts' varied career, which started with his leading commando raids against British forces in the Boer War and ended with his being a bulwark of the British Commonwealth as apart from the Empire.

This, and British honors, helped earn him the resentment of some of his embittered, die-hard countrymen. Shattering political defeats in the last two years left their physical mark.

From Balmoral, Scotland, the King sent condolences to Mrs. Smuts, noting of the Field Marshal that "in peace or in war, his counsel and his friendship were of inestimable value both to my father and to myself. . ."

There were messages from Prime Minister Attlee of Britain, Winston Churchill and Prime Minister St. Laurent of Canada. Secretary - General Trygve Lie and other U.N. leaders at Lake Success paid tribute to Smuts as one of the founders of the World Peace Organization.

Formed League

After becoming a lieutenant-general in the British Army in the First World War and campaigning against German East Africa forces. Smuts published a League of Nations plan. It led to his participation in the formation of that ill-fated organization. A generation later, Smuts again led South Africa to the allied side, becoming a field marshal in the British Army in 1941. Following the German and Japanese surrenders, Smuts joined world leaders in San Francisco, where he was a spokesman for the smaller countries in forming the U.N. charter.

GENERAL BRIGHTNESS ON LONDON 'CHANGE'

London, Sept. 12 (Reuters) — Initial dullness and caution on the London Stock Exchange today was later replaced by a general brightness. Markets experienced another fairly active session that brought higher levels to many issues.

British government stocks were fractionally higher while a tentative inquiry assisted many leading industrials.

Oils and foreign bonds lost ground at the outset but soon recovered in sympathy with the general trend. German loans were particularly firm.

Prophesied Date of Own Death And Then Wrote His Obituary

Vancouver, Sept. 12 — (CP)— The story of a man who prophesied correctly the date of his death—then wrote his own obituary — was reported here yesterday by police.

The forecast came true Sunday for Ernest Hill, 64-year-old veteran of the First World War. He was ill with tuberculosis in Shaughnessy Military Hospital here.

The note was found in his effects. Written in a firm hand, it read:

"Hill, Ernest Joseph (Jeffrey.)

"Passed away in Shaughnessy Hospital on Sept. 10th, 1950. A native of Kildare, County Kildare, Eire. Served in Royal Navy prior to coming to Canada. During World War One, served overseas with 72nd Seaforth Highlanders of Canada . . ."

It went on to list survivors and gave funeral arrangements.

Nobody knows for certain when the note was written. Hill lost consciousness almost 36 hours before his death.

Cavalry Battalion Seizes Hill in Five Hours of Fighting

Capture Gives Defenders Anchor on Their Right Flank

By LEIF ERICKSON

Tokyo, Sept. 12—(AP)—An American cavalry battalion today stormed up a commanding hill held by north Koreans eight miles north of Taegu and seized two-thirds of it in five hours of bitter fighting.

Dug-in communists on the hill and nearby peak threw a storm of artillery and machine-gun fire at the advancing Americans.

Casualties were heavy.

"The main threat (to Taegu) is right here,' a regimental commander said.

Capture of the hill would give the American defenders of Taegu a vital anchor on their right flank.

The Americans attacked first seven miles north of Taegu. Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said they gained nearly one mile and secured high ground commanding the vital Taegu-Tabu road.

Forty thousand red Korean troops are massed north of the city for an expected fresh assault upon the allied northwest anchor. The dug-in hill force was a small red advance party.

Communist artillery roared a thunderous barrage for the third straight day, plastering the Taegu-Tabu road.

Heavy Toll Taken

Allied big guns and planes, striking earlier against this barrage, had counted a heavy toll of the booming red artillery.

Such an artillery barrage usually is the prelude to an attack.

Far to the east, in the wild hill sector somewhere west of Pohang port, a United Nations task force struck swiftly to trap red troops in a corridor deep within allied lines.

South Korean forces already had sealed the northern entrance. The task force, striking close to the southern gate, punched 2½ miles in bitter fighting against two red battalions.

On the southwest front, counter-attacking 25th division Americans recaptured a commanding ridge four miles south of the confluence of the Nam and Naktong Rivers in a bitter fight against numerically - superior reds. The communists had hurled three assault waves and won the peak Monday night.

Launched Before Dawn

The weary Americans launched their counter-attack before dawn on the hill commanding one of the best crossing points along the Nam.

United Nations planes, in close support of ground troops, flew a record number of sorties. By midnight Monday, they had gone out in 683 flights.

"We really kept his (the enemy's) head down," an air spokesman said.

Near Pohang, the secret task force in its 2 1-2-mile westward push reported 370 reds killed, 188 wounded, one prisoner taken and 80 South Korean prisoners liberated.

The task force's objective was to take high ground at the base of the corridor, where an estimated 3,000 red troops have punched a deep salient into the northeast line.

The reds were striking for the Allied air base six miles southeast of Pohang.

Associated Press correspondent Bem Price, reporting from this front, said the red Koreans were well dug in on bare and rocky terrain.

The task force seized the initial objective and pushed on toward the second. Some red units at the rear were slamming mortar and small-arms fire at the Americans and South Koreans. Price said casualties had been extraordinarily light, however.

Four Fishing Vessels Caught In Hurricane

Halifax, Sept. 12 (CP) —Four small swordfishing vessels were caught in a hurricane which struck off the southwest tip of Nova Scotia early today. Fifth vessel, the Debutante, made the port of Wood's Harbor minus her deck house, spars and dories, swept away by mountain seas and 75 mile an hour winds.

Each of the vessels carries a crew of five or six men. All are believed to be from the Wood's Harbor area on the southermost tip of Nova Scotia.

The Debutante's skipper in a radio message intercepted by the Marine Radio station at Yarmouth, N.S., said he managed once early today to get within sight of Seal Island. His deck house and dories had been carried away. The island is 20 miles off the province's southwest tip.

Oldest of Group Given 3 Years In Penitentiary

Held in custody since their arrest near Marmora nearly a month ago, four youths were sentenced today by Magistrate T. Y. Wills for attempted armed robbery at a Rossmore service station and on other charges.

Thomas Henry, 22, of Toronto, was given three years in the penitentiary on the attempted armed holdup and will serve concurrent sentences of one year and of six months on other charges.

Orville King of Toronto, John Deseno of Oshawa and William Bailey of Kingston, will serve two years less one day in the reformatory for their part in the attempted armed holdup. In addition King will serve an indeterminate sentence of one year, Deseno an indeterminate term of nine months, and Bailey a three-month indeterminate term.

Concurrent sentences ranging from six months to a year were also given the three youths on other charges.

The four youths in addition to the attempted holdup charge, pleaded guilty to theft of money from garages at Belleville, Picton and Madoc, as well as money from a Kingston dairy. Henry King and Deseno also faced charges of car theft and theft of auto licence plates.

Theft of money from the Rivers garage at Madoc proved the youths' downfall. Police were notified and a roadblock set up with result that the young men were forced to take to the woods near Marmora. Six hours later they emerged from the woods and gave themselves up.

Oiling Equipment Used Outside City Says Ald. Thomas

Use of city-owned street oiling equipment outside the corporation for the benefit of city residents at summer homes, came up for criticism in city council Monday evening, when Alderman Don Thomas charged that Mayor H. J. Allin had secured such services for the roadway at Peche Point on the Bay of Quinte.

The alderman said he had chanced to see the city oil truck at Peche Point in mid-August during the middle of the afternoon.

He admitted that Mayor Allin has paid the public works department something like $7.50 for the service, but claimed this did not "begin" to compensate the department for the service rendered.

"It is not right for any public official to have a city-owned vehicle go outside the city for private reasons," said Alderman Thomas. He claimed also that in any event he as chairman of public works should have been consulted in the matter. He had learned of the incident merely through chance.

Mayor Allin felt he had been within his rights, however, and said that if he, as mayor of the city, requested service from any city department which was paid for, there should be no objection. "All were city residents who had benefited by the use of the street oiler," he said.

Board of Health Authorized To Ask for Applications For Full Time Medical Officer

Following several months in which no action had been taken in the matter, city council Monday evening authorized the local Board of Health to proceed immediately to ask for applications for a full time medical officer of health for the city.

Early in the year council had considered the hiring of a full time M.O.H. and had included in their budget an amount to pay the officer's salary but there had been no official authorization for the Board of Health to hire the medical health officer.

Appearing before council to seek action in the matter Gus Porter, member of the Board of Health, pointed out that it was not the duty of the Board to hire a medical officer of health, and that they had no power to do so. "The board", he said, "were willing to assist council in the matter of appointment, however."

Should Consult Taxpayers

When the matter came up for discussion in council Mayor H. Jack Allin said that before council committed itself in setting up a health unit the taxpayers who ultimately would pay the shot, should be consulted.

"Next year," he said, "the city will in all probability take on recreation and this with a health unit would add four or five mills to the tax rate." The mayor pointed out that health units in Oshawa and Kingston were costing between $35,000 and $44,000 annually.

However, Alderman Dr. R. T. Potter pointed out that there had been no intention in Belleville to start off with a well organized health unit. Rather it had been decided to start with a full-time medical officer of health.

"I realize that this would not be the ideal set-up," he said, "but we could start with the M.O.H. and the unit could be improved."

The mayor complimented the Board of Health on the splendid job which it had done in the city and suggested that council authorize the board to advertise for a full time M.O.H.

Alderman Potter agreed with the mayor's suggestion and stated that with the appointment of an M.O.H. it would take a year at least for the doctor to survey the city so as to know just what was needed in the way of extra services.

The recommendation carried by council was for the Board to advertise for an M.O.H. and to report the applications to city council.

Chairman of Finance Requests Accounts of Travel Expenses For Members of Civic Bodies

Expense accounts for travelling by members of council, the Parks Board, Public Utilities, and the Hospital Board will be scrutinized by the chairman of finance for city council.

Figures relative to travelling expenses for the various members of city bodies from January 1st 1949, up until the present, were asked Monday evening by Alderman A. M. Haig who said that council this year had made an honest attempt to reduce such expenditures to the minimum. He said it was only right that other city committees should do the same.

Mayor Allin replied that he would make every effort to secure the information for the chairman of finance.

Comparatively Brief

The council session, which was the first regular meeting since the summer recess, was comparatively brief with little important business being transacted

J. L. Yome, Churchill Heights, was approved as member of the city fire department, for a six-months probationary term. Mr. Yome will replace Eddie Donnan, who has resigned from the department.

A committee of Aldermen Haig and Butler with Harold D. Bateman, Chief of Police Walter Probert and Mayor Allin was named to meet with a special committee from county council to discuss administration of justice costs.

A letter from Police Chief Probert regarding store closing by-laws saw some discussion by council members before it was referred to the next regular committee meeting. The Chief pointed out there is now a lack of consistency in closing hours and times for stores and businesses in the city.

In Precarious Position

He pointed out that some grocery stores close all day Monday and others on Wednesday afternoon, while barbers close all day Wednesday while the by-law says they must close at 12:30 noon on Wednesdays.

Alderman Allen said that the police department had not shown much co-operation in enforcing the grocery by-law saying that he had asked that this be enforced on several occasions.

"Council is in a precarious position," stated Mayor Allin. "As things are at present the police could close all these grocery stores remaining open on Wednesdays."

The matter was then referred back to the next committee meeting.

Work of re-surfacing Bridge Street, West, and Dundas Street, West, as approved by council at a special meeting some days ago, will not commence until late in September, according to Alderman Don Thomas, chairman of public works.

Work May be Delayed

Alderman Thomas said that the successful tenderer for the job, the McFarland Construction Company, had been called upon to do two emergency government jobs and it was unlikely that the resurfacing of Belleville streets would be done until these jobs were completed. However, he hoped that the work could be completed before colder weather sets in.

Mayor Allin told council that he had received word from the highways department that the provincial road grant for the city would be increased from $55,000 to $85,000 this year to assist in taking care of the resurfacing of the above streets as this was on the route of No. 2 highway. "The extra expenditure had been approved by the department," he said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 12—(CP)— Base Metal stocks chalked up a third successive session of advance on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Volume for the first three hours was 769,000 shares.

Gains more than tripled losses in Base Metal, as the list continued recent climbs to the highest average levels since 1937. Key issues, like Consolidated Smelters and Hudson Bay, were ahead fractions at new highs.

Leading industrial stocks added fractions in dull dealings. Utilities, liquors, agricultures and several refining oils and steels pushed higher. Papers were again under mild downward pressure and a few foods eased.

Western Oils continued dropping with Central Leduc leading the way. Anglo-Canadian, Calgary and Edmonton and Del Rio producers were also lower as losses ranged up to 15 cents.

Gold stocks eased as interest waned. Lack of demand allowed key producers to drop slightly.

Street Will be Named After Robert Bogle, Friend Of Veterans in World War 1

The report of the street naming committee which recommended a change in name for many local streets bearing duplicate names, was discussed in council with the committee being complimented on their report. One new name "Bogle" was added to the list, honoring a former Belleville resident, who had done much for veterans of World War I. Alderman Argue wanted something done to get rid of the weeds in Belleville harbor. He said the Parks Board had done an excellent job in rejuvenating Victoria Park but that the harbor was an eyesore. He admitted the responsibility of looking after the harbor was that of the government but suggested that if the attention of the local harbor commission and the Board of Health was drawn possibly something would be done.

Alderman Thomas noted that the retaining wall along the river bank some distance south of the lower bridge on the east side of the river had fallen in and presented a dangerous condition.

Dumped After Hours

Alderman Lattimer wanted to know why large quantities of tomato skins had been dumped at the entrance of the city dump causing annoyance to residents of the area. Mayor Allin replied the tomato skins had been dumped after hours when the dump attendant was not present, but the party responsible had promised there would be no recurrence.

"There should be no garbage dumped within the city limits at any time" interjected Alderman C. D. Tice, "and there would be no need of it if we had gone ahead and constructed the incinerator voted for by the people."

Asked regarding the present status of the incinerator Mayor Allin replied it was a "dead duck."

"But I think the city is still bound to pay a matter of $55,000 for incinerator equipment," rejoined Alderman Tice.

Third Reading Given

Third reading to the by-law providing the money for the Board of Education to build the new school in East Belleville was given with two aldermen dissenting. They were Alderman Haig and Alderman Butler, who said they opposed the by-law only on principle because the contract had not been awarded to the lowest tender.

Legion Wants Canada Put On Total Preparedness Footing

Winnipeg, Sept. 12 — (CP) — The Canadian Legion wants Canada on a "total preparedness footing." It wants compulsory enlistment of Canadians for armed forces' services.

At the Legion's 13th annual convention, delegates yesterday passed a resolution calling on the federal government to conscript manpower for service "anywhere in the world for defence of Canada and the United Nations."

Speaking on the resolution, Maj.-Gen. C. Basil Price, past president, said Canada is the only country in the Atlantic Pact with no form of manpower conscription.

"Korea is only a side-show," he said. "There is only one chance of avoiding a global war and that is to build up such military strength that Russia will think twice before she acts.

"We are desperately far behind in the race . . . and if Russia struck today it is common knowledge there would be nothing to stop her."

The resolution, passed unanimously by the nearly 1,000 delegates present, also asked immediate mobilization of all resources for production of essential foods and munitions; formation of a non-political advisory committee to consult with the defence minister and chiefs of staff on total-preparedness measures; immediate conscription for service in reserve forces; boosting of pay and allowances and war service pensions of armed services; that all defence measures be speeded up; that the government make every effort to ensure against war profiteering in connection with total-preparedness action.

The convention also passed resolutions asking:

The government to increase basic 100-per-cent pensions for unmarried veterans from $94 to $125 and raise all other pension awards by corresponding amounts.

The government to increase widows' pensions from $75 to $94 a month.

The government to amend the Old Age Pension Act so disability pensions will not be considered as income under any means test.

WORST IS OVER

Taegu Front, Korea, Sept. 12—(AP) — Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of allied ground forces in Korea, said tonight:

"The worst is over."

In a brief statement the general added, however, that the Korean reds still held the initiative and were "capable of hitting us anywhere on our 125-mile perimeter."

He concluded: "I am now sure we can stop him."

'Music-Hall' Type of Show

Out of his long and successful stage experience, George Formby, famous British singing comedian, has evolved his own formula and axiom for continued box - office popularity; a new edition of his "London Music Hall Varieties" must not be considered as only as good as the previous show but must exceed its predecessor in talent. On this premise, the gifted British stage and screen star has assembled a musical revue for his second trans-Canada tour that is earning the envious but good-natured approval of rival managers, as will be evidenced when George Formby brings his second edition of his famed "London Music Hall Varieties" to the Memorial Arena tomorrow night.

Fine Variety Revue

The American loves his musical comedy and legitimate stage shows. The Frenchman will "Ooo-la-la" over the Folies Bergere and the other Parisian "girl" shows, but the average Britisher loves his "music hall" type of entertainment, and that is what Formby is bringing here.

He has gathered a highly entertaining and variable type of production that is built solidly around the famous Music Hall type of production. It has played to sell-out houses thus far on its Canadian tour and has drawn fine notices from the critics.

Every act in this variety revue consistently plays the top music halls of Britain and the Continent; many, including George Formby, have given Royal Command performances. Included in this second edition of George Formby's "London Music Hall Varieties" are Mills and Belita, the ultimate in sophisticated dance rhythms; Harry Baley, Ireland's greatest singing comedian; the Carsony Brothers acknowledged as Europe's greatest acrobats; Hershel (Jizz) Henlere, the comedy king of the keyboard; Henri Vadden, Britain's foremost juggler, with his girl company; Roger Carne and his talking tomcat, the greatest ventriloquist act to be developed in Britain's music halls; Marion Sanders the lovely song-stylist of the British airwaves; and that peer for every entertainment medium — stage, screen, radio and television — George Formby, with his inimitable chatter and the songs that have made his phonograph recordings among the most popular with international record-collecctors.

Foster Ward Boys Will be Rewarded For Their Honesty

Due to the honesty of two young boys age 8 and 9 years a Parkwood Heights housewife has recovered $43 in cash which she never expected to see again.

And if the woman had not received her money back it would not have been any fault of the boys.

Early this morning the two lads, Ralph Sopha and Donald Jackson, both of Foster Ward, brought the money in to the desk sergeant at the police station. They said they had found the money in the street sweepings where they had been dumped in a pile by the city street sweeper.

They had found the money "in a watersoaked box" which they had thrown away, they said. So the officer sent the lads back for the "box" which turned out to be a bankbook and its case. From the number on the bankbook the owner was identified.

It seems the bankbook had been lost either on Pinnacle St. or on Dundas St. some time Sunday morning. It apparently had lain in the gutter until Monday when the street sweeper passed along and sucked it up. Then it was dumped out with other sweepings on a pile near the city barns only to be later found by the lads.

The happy owner of the money said she would contact the boys and reward them for their honesty.

No Further Sales Of Hot Dogs On Market Allowed

Acting on a recommendation from the city Board of Health, city council Monday evening voted to revoke licences for selling hot dogs on the city market and to issue no such licences in the future.

Reason given by the Board of Health in asking that such licences be revoked was because of the "health menace" in no washing facilities being available to the vendors in their market stands.

Alderman Potter agreed that it was the job of the Board of Health to make such recommendations and said it was the duty of council to carry them out.

"Just what is this 'health menace?' " asked Alderman Haig. "I think that the responsibility of council goes a bit further than that."

The health board member then referred to the lack of washing facilities and said that such facilities were required by restaurants and other persons handling food.

Alderman Everett Liddle asked what was to be done about vendors selling hot dogs at fall fairs. "They are in exactly the same category," he said.

A further recommendation from the Board of Health asking that a sanitary sewer be constructed on Dundas Street East from MacDonald Ave. to the city limits, was referred to the public works committee.

FIELD MARSHAL SMUTS

One of the most distinguished men of this age who set his stamp upon the world in this century has passed, Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts. In him the world saw one of the greatest figures of the time. Honors showered upon the man who gave his great gifts to the service of democracy and freedom.

He was one of the makers of modern history in a very trying age which brought problems of great importance for solution. He was a leader in the true spirit of the word and he has left a contribution to his time which will keep his name among those of the world's great. His influence in his own country and the Commonwealth was of value in the solution of the issues which came before the leaders of many nations.

A native of Cape Colony and of Dutch parentage he lived in an age in which he was able to make a vast contribution through his qualities as a leader and his training and scholarship. He had been destined for the church but he indicated a preference for law and at Cambridge University he was one of the most brilliant graduates in law and was admitted at the Middle Temple London in 1894.

He returned to Cape Town to practise his profession and developed an interest in politics which took him to Johannesburg, which was the centre of the lately discovered goldfields in the Transvaal. When only 39 years old he became state attorney to President Paul Kruger. In this post he developed his native talents in administration and leadership. He joined the Republican forces in the war of 1899-1902, wound up the affairs of the republic, and became a daring guerilla leader. At the peace conference at Vereeniging which closed the struggle he was already noted as an outstanding figure.

He backed the policy of Gen. Botha for reconciliation between British and Dutch and in 1905 was sent to England as delegate and secured responsible government for defeated Dutch Republics, the Transvaal and Orange Free State. He threw his time, his great experience and vision into the unification of the two former Republics and the British Colonies, the Cape and Natal. He became minister of defence in the first Union Parliament in 1910.

His career at this time seemed almost legendary, so great was his impression upon the world, especially in Britain where he rendered the greatest service in the air defence of London. He played an impressive role at the Paris conference and with President Wilson was a co-founder of the League of Nations. In the Second Great War Smuts led the South Africans into full participation with Britain. Britain made him a field marshal for his contribution to the war effort.

He was also one of the great thinkers of this age and made impressive contributions to the political thought of his time. His was a life of intense activity and a constructive contribution to the thought of problems of the day. His many gifts, his impressive leadership, sane outlook and administrative ability made him one of the world leaders of democracy. His service to the United Nations and to South Africa, in a time of many problems was one of devotion to the highest ideals of nationhood and world security.

His name will always remain as that of one of the great men of the twentieth century, one of the great builders for peace and security.

He was also one of the great thinkers of the age and made impressive contributions to philosophy. His life was one of tireless effort, marked by constructive thought, and administrative ability of highest rank among the democratic leaders of the age. His service to the United Nations, the British Commonwealth and especially to South Africa was that of devotion to the highest ideals of democracy.

Marshal Smuts' name will ever remain as that of one of the great figures of the twentieth century, one of the great builders for peace and security.

In Greenfield, Mass., it is reported, "foresighted buyers," fighting the last war all over again, had been stocking up on pepper. One grocer placed a sign on his pepper shelf reading. "Only one to a customer." Before long the sign fell down on the mustard. The mustard was cleaned out by nightfall.

Apparently, to the true hoarder, it makes no difference what it is. If it's limited, he (or she) wants it. — Christian Science Monitor.

Of all studies, the most delightful and useful is biography. The seeds of great events lie near the surface. Historians delve too deep for them. No history was ever true; but lives which I have read, if they were not, had the appearance, the interest, the utility of truth. — Landor.

Trust him little who praises all; him less who censures all; and him least who is indifferent to all. — Lavater.

TWO TABLES

The table that is neat and trim
With silver things aglow
And crystal glasses, tall and slim,
Is merely decked for show.
'Tis proper that our friends should share
The finest things we own,
For that way, when they're sitting there,
Our love for them is shown.

But when alone we meet to dine,
And needless is display,
The tableware is not so fine,
Being used for every day.
What Mrs. Post insists upon
For manners, we don't use.
Then, I may rest my elbows on
The table if I choose.

In summer, when the days are hot
And I am called for tea,
Should I appear in coat, or not,
No one will frown on me.
And should I be inclined to sop
The gravy with my bread,
No one will order me to stop
Or even shake a head.

At home with those I love the most
I'm happiest to dine.
Then, I can dunk my crust of toast
If such a wish be mine.
With loving hands the plates to pass,
Contented I can be Without the silver things and glass
We keep for company.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A profusion of funerals, weddings and christenings among my acquaintances of various denominations during the past year has afforded an opportunity to see the clergy of all the major sects at the close range these more intimate celebrations afford. And one impression sticks out above all the rest: few clergymen can speak in a normal manner, or pronounce their English in an unaffected accent.

It may be that the training colleges and seminaries deliberately teach the young clergy to employ a tone of voice and a manner of speech that will help to set them apart from the common man. Or it might be that the clergymen themselves, conscious of their holy office, feel that the normal mode of expression with which the Lord provided them is not quite up to the mark. It might be supposed that the ministers of a larger and more fashionable congregations could hardly be included in this group. But if you listen to the Sunday radio, you will hear preachers performing in a bawling, booming fashion that has always been associated with what the Shakespearian experts call ham.

It is true you will more commonly meet with a stilted, mincing and affected manner of delivery in smaller churches; and often in the country. Last Sunday, I attended a small-town church where the preacher was declaiming in behalf of respect for the Lord's Day.

"Remember," he boomed, "the Sabbath day to keep it hoolie."

If he had not repeated the monstrosity several times, it might have been supposed that his denture had slipped or he had suffered a slight lapse of the tongue. But no: four or five times he repeated the ancient commandment: and each time it came out hoolie.

The man was a Canadian: but by the way he spoke, it was evident that in the learned academy in which he was schooled, some old boomer from England, Scotland or Ireland had left an indelible impression on the young divine; and plain holy would never again for him be enough.

Judge Declines To Preside Over Court

Toronto, Sept. 12 (CP) — Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder declined to preside over a court of the Supreme Court of Ontario Monday and adjourned hearings indefinitely although litigants witnesses and counsel awaited trial of their cases.

No judge was named to preside over the No. 2 court today and court officials could not say whether the case would be heard.

Mr. Justice Schroeder's decision was reported to have arisen from a disagreement with Chief Justice James C. McRuer who arrived unexpectedly Monday from Peterborough. When Mr. Justice Schroeder arrived to hear criminal cases he was informed that the chief justice would preside over the court as he was assigned to civil cases in another court.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

PUPPY LOVE

For the benefit of the hordes who love dogs and the handfuls who love humans, I reproduce a letter which I received recently from a man who lives in a small town in New Jersey:

Dear Billy — On Wednesday, August 30, the following item appeared in a New York newspaper:

"Sympathetic neighbors began a door-to-door search in a 25-block area of Yorkville yesterday in a last desperate attempt to save 8-year-old Joseph Young from the perilous necessity of anti-rabies shots. That Friday evening the boy was bitten on the left leg by a small black-and-white fox terrier, and unless the dog is located and found to be free from rabies, Joseph will have to submit to a series of 14 injections. He suffers from a rheumatic heart condition, and the family doctor has warned that the reaction from the shots might be fatal."

Since this item appeared, several similar cases have been reported in the local press, and for the benefit of dog owners who are reluctant to turn over their pets to the authorities under such circumstances, I'd like to pass along the following true story.

A couple of years ago a city family named Myers bought a house in our neck of the woods opposite the Widow McMinn's farm. The Myers had a 9-year-old son named Billy, and Billy had a Scotch terrier named Whiskey—and three weeks after the family moved in, the widow hailed them into court on the charge of harboring a vicious animal.

It seems that Whiskey, unused to life in the country, had reduced one of the lady's white Leghorns to a disorderly pile of feathers, and under our local statutes a "killer" dog must be sent to the pound and asphyxiated.

Judge Allan Gedney, however, found two mitigating circumstances — (a) the chicken had committed the initial misdemeanor by trespassing on the Myers' property, and (b) this was Whiskey's first offense, and a city-trained dog could hardly be expected to know all the rural laws.

"Sentence suspended," the judge pronounced Billy, "but from now on the dog is to be muzzled and kept on a leash. And there will be no clemency in case of a second offense."

A week later, Billy was walking Whiskey through town — leashed but unmuzzled—when he bumped into Mrs. McMinn coming out of the supermarket, her arms full of bundles. Scared stiff that she would notice the uncaged nose of his pet, the kid turned and raced down the street — and ran smack-dab into even worse trouble.

The trouble was a local boy named Randy, several inches taller than Billy, who decided he didn't like the "fancy-pants" from the city and started to rough him up. That is, he did until Whiskey sized up the situation and nipped the bully neatly in the leg.

Billy took one look at the blood oozing from his adversary's stocking, and another at the Widow McMinn who was still standing in front of the store. Then he grabbed the leash, dashed into the nearest alley and didn't stop running until he was home.

That evening our local paper carried the story about Randy being bitten by an unidentified dog, and at the dinner table Billy's father read it aloud. When he came to the part about the 14 painful injections which Randy would have to take if the dog wasn't located, Billy asked to be excused and went to his room.

Later that evening, knowing full well that it meant the death of his pet, he confessed to his parents that the culprit they were looking for was Whiskey.

Next morning the terrier was found free of rabies, but the parents of Randy filed a complaint against the Myers family. At the trial the same judge presided, and to make matters worst the Widow McMinn stepped forward and asked permission to address the Court.

"Your Honor," she began, "it so happens that I witnessed the whole thing, and although, as the Court knows, I ain't overfond of this p'tickler dog, I want to see justice done. I've always heard tell that self-defense, with or without a weapon, is a good defense in a court of law. Well, seeing as how this small boy was attacked by the bigger boy — and the only weapon he had to defend himself with was his dog — I say that this dog acted not as a dog in this p'tickler case but as a weapon.

"I of course intended to report the matter to the police, but the little fella beat me to it, and seeing as how Your Honor warned him what would happen to his dog in case of a second offense, I think he deserves a whale of credit for bringing the critter forward voluntarily."

The prosecuting parties quickly saw the justice of the widow's plea, as did the court, and the case against Whiskey was dismissed. And the last I heard of him, the terrier seemed to be adjusting himself fine to country life.

In other words, if Billy's case is any criterion, a dog owner who is honorable enough to take responsibility for the actions of his pet stands a good chance of getting fair-minded and sympathetic treatment in court. And I think you'll grant that I'm in a pretty good position to know about such things.

Very truly yours,
Allan J. Gedney,
Justice of the Peace.

Mackenzie's Column:

United Nations Must Finish Task in Korea

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Gen. MacArthur's recently-renewed appeal for more United Nations ground troops in Korea is spotlighted by Washington's decision that American forces in Europe must be substantially increased.

That is to say there's a limit to the number of trained fighting men even the United States can produce at short notice. It's too much to expect her to start from scratch and carry out two major assignments such as this simultaneously.

The Korean action is a United Nations sanction. It's up to the other member countries, which agreed with the sanction, to contribute materially.

Ten countries have offered material aid. Two actually have contingents in Korea. British troops and Australian planes are in action. Some others are expected to arrive in the immediate future. Canada's Korea force of 15,000 will leave the Dominion after mid-November.

That leaves MacArthur far short of the quota of fighting men he requires to withstand the weight of attack by North Korean forces which apparently have an unlimited reservoir of fighting men upon which to draw. He needs substantial reinforcements — and quickly.

Must Finish Task

Having undertaken the job of protecting a small country against aggression, the United Nations must finish the task. This column recently ventured the view that a successful U. N. application of the sanction in the Korean case would strengthen the peace organization immeasurably. By the same token, a failure might be disastrous. It is a crucial test.

Now, of course, it would be absurd to overlook the difficulties which the Asiatic countries in particular face in the matter of applying sanctions to Moscow's North Korean protege. Take the case of India, with her huge population of 300,000,000 and some of the world's finest fighting men. She is offering MacArthur a field ambulance and a small surgical unit.

India's Role

It would be unfair not to concede that India is in a difficult position. Not only is she in a dangerous dispute with neighboring Pakistan over control of the rich state of Kashmir, but she lies in an area where Moscow's influence is vast. She must look twice before getting involved in a war which finds communism and democracy ranged against each other.

However, that's not the whole story. India has given signs that she might be aiming at leadership of Asia — and Asia as a whole fiercely opposes western interference in Far Eastern affairs. On that basis many Orientals resent the role which the United States is taking in Korea.

But this is a time when members of the U. N., in both Eastern and Western Hemispheres, should make really substantial contributions toward shortening a Korean conflict which, if dragged out, could produce another general war.

THE DENTIST IN VAUDEVILLE

An English comedian gave a performance of his vaudeville act on television the other night and I dare say no one laughed more than I did at the fellow's antics. Old stuff—man visiting dentist to have tooth pulled—but still funny.

But even while I was holding my sides I was reminded of my last encounter with the dentist—and of my next. Probably a million other viewers were similarly reminded of theirs.

I do hope that most of them had as pleasant encounters with their dentists as I had with mine. My dentist first just touched the hypersensitive spot, saw me wince and reached for his syringe. A painful prick or two of the gum or other tissues around the tooth, an injection of local anesthetic—probably novocaine or some modification, who cares? — left me to doze in the chair for ten or fifteen minutes, then returned and proceeded with the necessary drilling to prepare the cavity for an inlay. Not a wee bit of pain or discomfort.

On another occasion when I had to sacrifice a thousand dollar tooth—every one of my teeth is worth at least $1000 and so is yours, in my judgment—the dentist injected local anesthetic and ten or fifteen minutes later extracted the tooth without pain or discomfort, in fact I thought he was kidding when he told me he had finished the operation, until he showed me the tooth.

Such experiences as mine are familiar to thousands of patients every day. Old time practitioners of dentistry may have been pretty rugged to encounter. They had no local anesthetics worthy of the name, or if they survived the introduction of local anesthesia few acquired the technique of using it skillfully.

The technique of local anesthesia as employed by our modern dentists—and here in America we have the world's best dentists—is an admirable skill to watch. In this field of surgery the family dentist, the general practitioner of dentistry commands the respect of every physician. Even I call him Doctor.

I say I enjoyed a great laugh at the vaudeville act of the English comedian, despite the mold or whiskers on the situation he used. I imagine it may not have seemed so funny to a viewer who happened to be facing an appointment with his or her dentist, particularly if the viewer were misinformed or uninformed about dental anesthesia.

From time to time I have mentioned here that one's physician or dentist may prescribe or administer a sedative (a layman can't purchase it without his own physician's or dentist's order) hours prior to the operation or treatment, to relieve undue dread of the encounter. This is mainly for the unteachable—people who prefer to cling to all the funny old ideas exploited by the vaudeville comedian. People who know from experience the modern dentist's complete mastery over pain and discomfort, feel no more "nervous" or anxious about a visit to the dentist's than they do about walking boldly into a bank and presenting a check for a sum in excess of $2.88 payable to self—that, I imagine takes a lot of courage.

What is Medicine?

The definition of food you gave a while ago is the best I have found. Please give a definition of medicine. (R. J.)

Hardened Ear Wax

Thanks for the pamphlet on head noises, deadness and hardened ear wax. Am I too old (67) to have hardened ear wax removed? (B. L.)

Answer—No.

Food Combinations

Somehow, I don't know where I got the notion, I have the notion that soups, meats or other greasy foods and tomatoes make indigestible or harmful combinations. (J. L. G.)

Answer—Any combination that pleases your taste is digestible. No combination is harmful if the foods in the combination are not individually harmful. Send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope for the red book What to Eat and Why.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SECOND LIFE PLEASURES

From an article by Sheldon Cheney, in his book "The Story of Modern Art," I came across this interesting statement about the great French artist Renoir: "When he went to the museum he sought out the artists who had painted radiantly, glowingly, voluptuously; he came away praising Valazquez and Giorgione and Titian—and he said that he had lived a second life in the pleasure he experienced from the works of the masters."

I believe we all have had such an experience. I have felt this way time and again after visiting a gallery or library. And I have had the same experience after listening to a great production on the stage, or after having read a great book for the first time.

Talk to a person like John Kiernan or Edwin Way Teale, as he unfolds many of the secrets of bird life, and you will live this second life of pleasure from every statement he makes, so deeply is he in love with the beauty and grandeur of Nature.

I sat on a stone at the edge of the lake at my summer retreat and beckoned to a little chipmunk. He seemed unusually tame and friendly, and came within two feet of me. I broke a peanut from its shell and tossed it to him. He fiddled with it for a few seconds, then turned around and came to me again. I thought he was going to eat the peanut, but he didn't. He took it into his mouth and lodged it in his cheek, like the small boy with his hard ball of candy. Then my friend apparently meant to tease me for a whole nut in its shell, which I gave him, and this he scampered away with for future hunger!

These second-life pleasures, gathered from most any interesting place, or through some unusual experience, are what salt life, give to it zest and sparkle. Listen to the talk of a couple of golf enthusiasts, or a group of expert fishermen, and you will be looking upon those who are unconsciously experiencing their second life in the pleasure of the moment.

Cameras have played a big part in giving to thousands a second life of pleasure. Photography is also one of the most fascinating hobbies anyone can have, because it can give pleasure to so many others.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SUPERSTITIONS

The word augury, meaning foretelling the future by signs, comes from the Latin word for bird. The Romans used birds to predict future events, interpreting favorably or unfavorably the number and kind, the direction of their flight, and their appearance.

Silly as such practices seem, they continue today. Many modern Americans attempt to foresee or alter the future in terms of black cats, rabbits' feet, or walking under ladders.

But if we want genuine signs of future calamities, there are plenty without resorting to superstition. Drinking drivers are much surer signs of auto accidents than black cats. Selfishness and infidelity wreck a home more quickly than walking under fifty ladders.

There are dependable signs of good fortune, too, which have nothing to do with pins, white horses or redheaded women. Kindness and unselfishness have an infallible connection with success in friendship. Industry, patience and intelligence are worth a carload of rabbits' feet for business success. Clean living and faith in God are the surest omens of personal happiness.

Look around you in life and see which one of these types of signs is a real guarantee of the future.

Appeal Made to Rotarians To Assist in Placing D.P. Specialists in the Dominion

An urgent appeal to assist in placing displaced person specialists in Canada was made to the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon yesterday.

In issuing the appeal Mr. Hector Allard, of the International Refugee Replacement Association told the clubmen that approximately 25,000 doctors, engineers, scientists, etc., were available.

"These men," he said, "would not replace Canadians or Canadian graduates. All that is necessary for the first year is a personal or organizational sponsor which would provide living accommodations, a salary and the opportunity to work in line with their professions.

The only categories which can come into Canada and accept positions of all out responsibilities are college professors or ministers.

"His organization," Mr. Allard said, "has a guarantee from the Canadian government for 500 specialists of all professions. He felt that if each of the Rotary Clubs in Canada would sponsor two of these, it would be of great help to the IRRO."

Contacts Several Club

Declaring that he had already contacted several service clubs, Mr. Allard said he was disappointed in the larger centres. Smaller clubs, however, such as Sarnia and Sherbrooke Que. have done a fine job in assisting to place some of these people. He felt that Belleville could place one or more of them.

The IRRO does not want to displace Canadians, but the actions of Sarnia, Sherbrooke and other places have shown that it is possible to solve the problem which is the duty of all free countries.

"Canada," he said, "is high on the list of countries in which displaced persons want to live. I suggest that this club set up a committee to make a survey of the district along these lines."

Picture Shown

Mr. Allard showed the clubmen a motion picture film "Home of the Homeless" which depicted the every day life of displaced persons in a German camp.

"Following the war," he said, "the Allied Armies liberated some 8 millions of people. A large number of these returned to their homelands but a great number had no place to go.

The International Refugee Replacement Organization which came in to being in July 1947 was faced with the problem of replacing 1½ millions of these people, and given three years in which to do it. "It was impossible to do this," the speaker said, "and the IRRO has been given until March 1951 to accomplish its purpose."

The IRRO was given a budget of 155 millions of dollars when it started, but since this has been reduced to 55 millions. People have to be housed, fed and clothed.

Since replacement started, Mr. Allard pointed out, Canada has absorbed 86,000; the United States, 194,000; Austria, 145,000; United Kingdom, 83,000; Israel, 118,000 and France 37,000. The reason for the low figure of France, he added, because thousands of refugees seeped across the borders of Western Germany, and also following the Spanish Civil War, it absorbed 2 millions of refugees from that country.

Difficult to Place

"One of the most difficult problems of the IRRO," he said, "was the placement of people over 45 years of age, widows with children and unmarried mothers with children, all of whom are not wanted by outside countries. There are also a large number of institutional patients, most of them T.B. sufferers needing care."

Some countries have taken about 20 per cent of these people. In Canada the cost of living is so high that the country cannot take this type of D.P. They are admitted for treatment and cure only.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Harold Mott, with club appreciation expressed by Rotarian Fred Deacon. Rotarian George Campbell occupied the chair in the absence of President Ken Griffith.

'Mothball Fleet' Idle Freighters Soon Memory

By H. R. HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, Sept. 12. (CP)—This port's "Mothball Fleet" of idle freighters, which reached a peak of 23 during the winter, will soon be an unpleasant memory.

Last of the vessels, the Victoria County, is being reconditioned and undergoing inspection before transfer to Honduran registry.

Ship operators blamed competition from foreign ships, devaluation of the pound sterling and labor troubles brought on by the Canadian Seamen's Union for most of the tie-ups.

But slowly, during the late Winter months, the ships sailed—some still under Canadian registry but most with foreign flags.

The 12-ship fleet of Acadia overseas freighters of Halifax has been reduced to three. The others now fly foreign flags. Three were sold to Israel, two to Liberia and three are under Panamanian registry. The ninth is the Victoria County.

The three remaining are operating under a $3,000,000 federal government subsidy granted to keep at least 40 ships of Canada's wartime merchant fleet under Dominion registry.

Four others tied up have been transferred to British registry, although still owned in Canada, in a move to cut operating costs.

Three Canadian National Steamship vessels, left idle for several months, have resumed runs to the West Indies.

But even with the Mothball fleet gone, not all is rosy for the fleet operators.

Harry Mathers, youthful president of Acadia overseas freighters, said: "We have three ships left. But it's doubtful that we can operate them next year unless the government subsidy is renewed."

HOT ABRASIVE BLAMED

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 12—(CP)—Hot abrasive, spilling on the damp floor, was blamed for a steam explosion which wrecked the concrete wall of the transformer room at the Lionite Abrasive Company early today. Angelo Brusitti, 35-year-old employee, was struck by a piece of flying concrete and burned from the molten liquid abrasive. He suffered possible fractured ribs and burns on his eyes, face and chest.

CAPITAL NOTES

Some final notes on the Ottawa scene:

• • •

One of the most amusing of Ottawa's subterfuges might be called "Hiding the Officer."

Story is that there are so many chairborne troops here at headquarters that an order was issued "encouraging" the commissioned gents to wear their civilian duds to work rather than their uniforms. Ottawa folks were getting a little alarmed about the number of soldiers, sailors and airmen on the government's payroll.

Military cars, too, are often camouflaged to look like civilian automobiles.

But now some of the brass is beginning to wonder if they hadn't oughta make the double switch. "Mustn't let the people think we aren't prepared for the next war," one told me.

• • •

Lots of World War Three talk in these parts, particularly among the militia. I haven't met any servicemen yet who expect that Canada's special brigade will fight in Korea. All expect it to fight "elsewhere".

And a great many permanent force officers think this brigade is a disgrace as Canada's contribution to the United Nations. They will tell you so in a straightforward whisper and after your assurance that you aren't quoting anyone, really.

• • •

All the glamour of cocktail bars has now worn away and Ottawa slips in for its Manhattan or after-dinner liqueur with none of the self-consciousness observed in the beginning.

Some of the places are in outrageously bad taste in decor, notably the Chateau's weird Jasper Room, but it is certainly a nice, civilized way of having a drink after the by-the-bottle method of the west.

• • •

One of the most interesting subjects for speculation in Ottawa is the fate of the National Film Board. Some of the officials of the board very kindly arranged a screening of some recent subjects for Brown Eyes and me yesterday. Sorry to say it was a sharp disappointment.

Seemed to me these pictures lacked a hard-headed objectiveness that the documentary film requires.

One on welfare problems in British Columbia, for example, was mainly interesting for its scenic shots. The "problem cases" all worked out as patly as a Hollywood movie, and as unrealistically: Saw also a film on the Winnipeg flood taking the same old line of men in siege against the water and nary a word of why the flood came or what's to prevent another.

The much-touted Science-versus-Cancer film seemed to us a confusing montage of too-clever animation technique and symbolic effects when a simple, straightforward presentation was called for. The gorgeous, actor's voice of Raymond Massey, still playing Abe Lincoln, was typical of the mannered approach to a subject that cries out for a quiet, sincere treatment.

Seems to me the basic trouble with the film board is that, unlike the CBC, it comes too closely under direct government control. Needs complete independence to be effective in picturing this country honestly. For example, if you make a film on B.C. welfare problems that you hope will please the people in charge you accomplish nothing.

It's evident, too, that the commercial film companies have been giving the old squeeze to NFB's products so that they get limited urban distribution. Thus haven't enough of the loyalty that keeps the CBC alive and still splendidly honest.

• • •

Ottawa is a rewarding place for a fellow who likes to look at pretty girls. The theory is generally held that the capital, in attracting gals from all over the country to the civil service, gets venturesome chicks and, consequently, the lookers. Whatever it is, it's nice to sit out in the sun and watch 'em go by.

Prettiest gals of all are in Winnipeg. No theories on that.

• • •

Had lunch three times this week with Ottawa friends in the famous Rideau Club. Once more and I'm looking for an invitation to join the cabinet. The prime minister was at a table adjoining ours the other day. Looked a lot less frail than I'd pictured him. Got a wonderful smile.

• • •

Ottawa's market never looks lovelier than in early fall. It's held three times a week in a square just behind the Chateau Laurier and a mouth-watering place, with its luscious field tomatoes, corn, apples, cucumbers, onions and the rest.

The flowers are eye-filling, too, and it makes a pretty picture to see the folks strolling down past the Parliament buildings with their arms full of blooms. Part of the charm of a truly beautiful city.

I hope they keep it right there if—or when—the plans for a model capital materialize.

• • •

And now, after much too long in Ottawa, we're off to the east again. Skipping Montreal because we haven't time to do a proper job with it and we might not get out before freeze-up. So it's on to old Quebec City, land of romance.

Shaw's Condition Showing Progress After Operation

Luton, England, Sept. 12 (CP)—George Bernard Shaw amazed his nurses today by sitting up in bed less than 24 hours after a bone-setting operation.

The 94-year-old playwright is described by his nurses as a "very good patient."

The operation was performed last night, and a mid-afternoon bulletin today said Shaw's condition continues to be satisfactory.

R. E. Lingard, secretary of Luton and Unstable Hospital, said the playwright is doing fine and probably will be sent home within 10 days.

Lingard said the old man was "quite perky" and talking a blue streak. His pulse, temperature and blood pressure were normal, the secretary said, and doctors were "happy" about his general condition.

Shaw woke up early this morning, ate a light breakfast and listened with obvious satisfaction to a newscast about his operation.

Doctors later issued this bulletin: "Mr. Shaw has had a very comfortable night following his operation and his general condition is considered satisfactory."

After his doctors had examined Shaw this morning, a nurse brought him the daily newspapers.

The Irish playwright and wit fractured his left thigh bone Sunday when he fell in the garden of his home at nearby Ayot St. Lawrence. He was brought to the hospital yesterday for the operation.

Following the operation a hospital bulletin had said his condition was "satisfactory" but noted that "a fracture of this nature in a man of Mr. Shaw's age must be regarded as serious."

LAD RESCUED FROM POND

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 12—(CP)—Three-year-old Gary Lockhart was rescued from a shallow pond last night by volunteer fireman George Caswell. The lad had tumbled off a platform erected for a memorial service last Sunday into 3½ feet of water and was lying face down.

"I enjoyed my shopping today!"

Yes, I really enjoyed my shopping trip—I bought all the things I saved for!

That's the way I plan my bigger purchases. They seem to come easier, and more quickly, when I put something into the bank regularly. I like the comforting feeling of watching my account grow.

I hate keeping too much cash around the house. It's so convenient to have the bank take care of it. And my bank book tells me where I stand.

I guess most women are much like me—housewives with modest savings who find their neighborhood bank handy, useful . . . always obliging.

Friends Honor Sidney Couple On Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bush, who were married 25 years last Saturday, were honored by about 50 friends at a party Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Bush were taken out to dinner by Ray Scott, and when they returned to the house at 9:30 p.m., their friends were waiting for them with a silver tea service and tray to match.

Women's Activities

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The September meeting of Cannifton W.M.S., was held at the home of Mrs. Roy Pound with a large attendance.

The president, Mrs. J. Williams opened the meeting by extending a hearty welcome to all members and guests.

Excellent reports were given by the various secretaries. Many thank-you letters were read from sick people in the hospital and homes.

Plans were made for the October meeting to be held at Cannifton Church with a guest speaker and invited neighboring societies.

The program was in charge of Mrs. H. Farnham and her group. Mrs. Farnham opened with a poem "Live and Let Live", then conducted the worship service taken from the Missionary Monthly, the theme "The Spirit of the Cross".

Mrs. Farnham read a poem by Kagawa, of Japan, who is one of the world's most devoted Christians.

The Study Book, "The United Church Re-enters Japan" written by Miss Sybil Courtice, who is one of the W.M.S. missionaries for 40 years in Japan.

"Japan Begins Again" by Dr. W. C. Kerr, who has spent his life in fellowship with the Japanese. He is their pastor in Tokyo, and wrote his book there where he could watch the brave but troubled lives of the Japanese.

"Why study Japan?" Mrs. Holgate said because there is in Japan at present such receptiveness to Christian teaching as has not been seen for many years. The Japanese people are struggling to rebuild their lives among the charred ruins of their homes, churches and school. The Christian church in Japan needs sympathetic understanding and support now more than ever to assist in anyway possible during these critical years.

Mrs. Philip gave the report on "Japan Surrenders" and "Destruction Reigns in Japan"; Mrs. Mills on "Tokyo Broadcasts to American Christians", "American Christians Respond", and "United Church Missionary Director of Lara", (which means licensed agencies for relief in Asia). Mrs. H. Brenton's report of "Dr. Bott Reports on Lara".

Mrs. Farnham told how Canada sends relief to Japan and the Japanese thank the Lara. Mrs. Farnham gave a selection with her record player, "Ere You Left Your Room this Morning, Did You Think to Pray", which was very impressive.

Mrs. G. Brenton gave a report on "The World Convention on Christian Education", held at Toronto, where 5,000 delegates came from 62 countries besides about 1,000 more from Toronto and vicinity. The procession of nationalities thrilled that vast audience which stood in silence as the representatives of 62 countries, many in colorful native costume walked up the aisle to the platform.

The theme for this convention was "Jesus Christ, Teacher and Lord".

A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Pound and those assisting with the program and refreshments.

Abroad With Me

By Dorothy E. Futcher

Edinburgh, Scotland

We leave Scott's home with a greater respect for the man, and a greater appreciation of his works.

Famed Melrose Abbey is next in our sight-seeing. Melrose on the Tweed, is a royal burgh (given its charter by the King). The burghs have in the centre of the village or the square a market cross (really a stone monument with a cross on top) where proclamations were made in olden days. Melrose Abbey was founded in 1136 and in the beginning was just a whitewashed shed. The monks were agriculturally minded and prospered and the stone walls of Melrose Abbey arose. It has three times been destroyed by the English. Around 1800 it was taken over by the Presbyterians as it was of special interest to them—John Knox's nephew having preached here. It is now owned by the government and pillaging has ceased. Prior to this farmers and townspeople carried away the stones for their personal use.

We stop at Dryburgh Abbey Hotel for lunch, and were disappointed that we weren't served the famed Tweed salmon. The meat course was minced steak which proved to be fresh hash and the dessert, apple custard, a very popular dish in England and Scotland, just apple sauce and a thick custard served together. Here again the profusion of flowers is more pleasing than the food—gladioli reign supreme this time of year.

Dryburgh Abbey is just ahead, about five miles from Scott's home. It is also a mass of ruins—was much more pretentious than Melrose and the habits and customs of the early monks can be recaptured from ruins. The monks here were adept at medicinal cures and the abbey is surrounded by trees of many species which they used in their cures. Some of the finest trees in Scotland are on these grounds—a yew tree 1,000 years old, protected by a high fence from inquisitive fingers, a cedar of Lebanon, 800 years old, limes, copper beeches, and even a perfect example of our famed blue spruce.

The ruins show how austere, how simple, how comfortless was the life of the early monk. A "warming room" can be recognized where they came for warmth when the cold of the stone rooms became unbearable. Sir Walter Scott and his wife, Dorothy, are buried here inside the Abbey walls. It is the burial place also of Sir Douglas Haig, hero of the First World War. His home, Bernersyde, is a few miles away. It was presented to him by the government at the close of the war and his son is living there.

Tri Montium (three mountains) is now etched against the skyline. In 80 A.D. these three mountains were the site of a camp of the Roman Conqueror, Julius Agricola, until he was driven from the country by the stalwart Picts. Now Ayrshire cattle graze contentedly in the valleys and field after field of sugar-beets thrive where Roman feet used to tread. Sugar beets are grown in great quantities in England and Scotland to help out the slender sugar ration.

In the gardens, sweetpeas grow luxuriantly. I notice for a trellis some use a small tree which they stick in the ground, lop off the branches, leaving just about a foot near the trunk, twine these around with cord and the result is lovely—a sweetpeas tree.

We do our best to freshen up in the close confines of the bus, at least we can powder our noses, for we are now to be guests at Merton House, the home of Lord and Lady Ellesmere. Lord and Lady Ellesmere are at Balmoral Castle paying respects to the newly arrived royal babe, but Lady Fairfax-Lucy, a friend and neighbor and an officer of the Roxburgh Institute, gives us a royal welcome at the imposing entrance. A visit to this palatial home would just be second to that of Buckingham Palace. Lady Ellesmere's brother is the Duke of Northumberland, and her mother is the Duchess of Northumberland, Mistress of the Robes to the Queen.

It is not the ancestral home of Lord Ellesmere but was purchased around 1913 from an impoverished Scottish family for the necessary dollars. It is impossible to describe its dignity, its beauty and its priceless furnishings, but its chief interest is the famous Bridgewater collection of original Dutch masters which adorn the walls of the drawing rooms. It is our privilege to see the original of the famous Dutch painters, whose prints we have admired and loved all our lives. In the beautiful dining-room the portraits are family ones. Over the long fire-place is a masterly painting by Landseer, of a former Lord and Lady Ellesmere and their young family returning from the hunt on horse-back. It is called "Return from the Hawking" and the gorgeous colorings and detail of the painting are amazing.

We have a few minutes in the formal gardens, overlooking the valley of the Tweed and beautiful in color, before we go on to the afternoon tea with the members of Roxburgh Institute in their Institute Hall.

Women's Institute

TYENDINAGA EAST W.I.

The Tyendinaga East Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Jack McRae, Lonsdale, on Sept. 8, with an attendance of 21 members and six visitors. The president was in the chair and the meeting opened in the usual way. The roll call was answered by "Current Events". It was decided that $5. would be sent to Canadian Child Health Association.

Mrs. G. Provins gave a splendid paper on the motto and said that progress came from not being satisfied with precedent. "We cannot stand still, we must either progress or decay. Our past mistakes can be used as stepping stones to our advantage."

Mrs. Harry Sills, district president, was guest of honor, and brought with her a friend, Mrs. Roy Sills. Mrs. Sills spoke on "Publicity" and stressed that the Institute always receives publicity and it is either good or bad. Each member makes it either one or the other. Remember those who are sick, and when you go to a meeting, be an active member, for it is when you take part that you receive the most enjoyment. Mrs. Sills also gave a very interesting demonstration on finishing an edge in needlework. A very hearty vote of thanks was given to show the appreciation of everyone for Mrs. Sills' talk and demonstration.

Mrs. W. Bell was in charge of the program and as it was "Historical Research and Current Events" she chose this as her theme. Mrs. Bell asked four ladies to present four letters written by the provincial president, Mrs. Futcher, on her trip to Copenhagen: "Leaving Montreal", Mrs. L. Gaylord; "First Day on Board" Mrs. B. Kimmerley; "Abroad With Me", Mrs. Roy Stafford; "On Board the Empress of France", Mrs. G. Provins. These letters were so interesting it was almost like going on a trip.

Mrs. Bell read the account from the Napanee Beaver, of the anniversary held at the U.E.L. Church at Hay Bay.

A contest on geography was won by Mrs. R. Harvey and Mrs. C. Akey.

A vote of thanks was expressed to the district president, to the hostess, Mrs. Jack McRae and Mrs. Claude McRae and to all who had helped to make a very pleasant and instructive meeting.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . . What's Cooking ?

One of these days you may be drinking egg nogs made from codfish.

A new process developed in Norway produces artificial egg whites from codfish. A pound of this new synthetic substance is equal to 150 egg whites. The plant which is now turning out the artificial albumen can produce more than 100,000 hens each day.

Although the process was started in Germany during the war, it wasn't successful because the artificial whites still retained some of the aroma of dried cod—a fragrance which is stimulating but not exactly in a pleasant way.

The new substance, if developed commercially, may be used in the manufacture of mayonnaise and other commercial products.

Housewives are sometimes faced with the problem of what to do with leftover egg whites. Babies are often put on a diet including egg yolk. In such homes there is an abundance of egg whites. They may be used in baking cakes, in clarifying soups, or, as in the recipe today, they may be used instead of whole eggs for breading food to be fried.

Fried Sweetbreads, Parsley Sauce.—4 Servings.

Buy 1 pound of calf's sweetbreads. If frozen, thaw in the refrigerator.

Place the sweetbreads in cold water overnight. Drain. Cover them with cold water, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon vinegar. Bring to a boil. Reduce flame and simmer 10 minutes.

Drain. When cool enough to handle, remove outer skin and tubes.

If sweetbreads are not to be used at once, cover with fresh cold water and return to refrigerator.

Split each pair of sweetbreads by carefully cutting in half lengthwise. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Beat 2 egg whites slightly. Do into beat into a froth.

Dip sweetbreads in egg whites. Then dip in sifted bread crumbs. Heat a kettle of deep fat to 370 degrees. Fry the sweetbreads until brown.

Serve with parsley sauce. To 1 cup cream sauce add 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley and 1-4 cup light cream.

Women's Activities

ST. PAUL'S W.A.

The September monthly meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association, Stirling, was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. J. B. Thompson was hostess.

Mrs. A. Wells and Mrs. R. A. Patterson will act as the visiting committee for September.

A special vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. H. Beatty, Mrs. R. B. Duffin, Mrs. P. Utman and Mr. George Carlisle for flowers, church flower conveners and taking flowers to the sick members of the congregation, also special thanks to Mrs. Don Donohoe, wedding convener, and all who helped her. The September flower conveners will be Mrs. R. B. Duffin and Mrs. P. Utman. The September church hostesses will be Mrs. S. Demorest, Mrs. M. Bell, Mrs. Oliver Stapley and Mrs. H. C. Martin. The invitation to Scott's church to attend their 25th anniversary church union service and supper on Wednesday, September 13, was accepted. The invitation was also accepted to attend Springbrook W.A. bazaar and afternoon tea on Friday, September 29. All plans for the banquet to be held on October 17, were left with the executive.

The entire program of the afternoon centred along the Labor Day theme and was in charge of Mrs. O. Stapley. After the singing of a hymn, Mrs. G. White led in prayer. The responsive scripture lesson was the reading of a Psalm. Mrs. W. Wilkins favored the W.A. with a very pleasing solo, "Gentle Lord, O Gently Lead Us". Mrs. S. Demorest read a collection of short poems.

The guest speaker of the afternoon was Rev. Morley Clarke, of Thomasburg, who was introduced in a very gracious manner by the president. The speaker spoke on the Labor Day theme "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord, and not unto man". God has a great love for the common man, and God's plan was for a man to be a laborer, as ye work so shall ye reap. This is the century of common man, he is coming into his own. We should work with the gifts God has given us, so we should all be laborers. The church has a great responsibility which embraces all mankind. Labor is a Christian concern. God himself was a Laborer as revealed in the Bible which draws all closer to Him in a common bond. God has a task for everyone, fitted all to bear his burden. We all should make our job serve Jesus Christ not great things required just work well done. To them is said, "Well done thou good and faithful servants enter into the joy of the Lord. This timely address left a stirring message of real interest with all listeners.

The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn, and the Mizpah benediction. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge. Mrs. C. Tucker moved a hearty vote of thanks to the guest speaker, the soloist and to all responsible for the program and refreshments.

FOXBORO W.M.S.

The September meeting of the W.M.S., was held in the S.S. rooms on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Walter Wickett was leader and gave the theme "The Spirit of the Cross" and asked that all think together of the people of Japan. A poem from the Missionary Monthly was read by Mrs. E. Tummon and silent prayers were offered. A Japanese hymn "Holy Spirit, We Humbly Pray", was contributed by Mrs. H. Shetler and Mrs. G. Hicks gave the scripture lessons. Prayer for "Japanese people who suffered loss of home and loved ones during the war", was offered by Mrs. J. G. Sills and Mrs. S. C. Gay prayed that minds might be kept open to the needs of a changing world, that all may have good will toward the Japanese people.

Mrs. George Priest then introduced in an interesting manner, the new study book "The United Church Re-enters Japan". She said "Why study Japan" and she described some of the conditions in Japan and quoted "We are neighbors of Japan". She also said "The measure of destruction in Japan is the measure of their need. Three beautiful large 'mums were placed on the table by Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Wickett explained their significance—namely the tallest one represented Heaven; a shorter one, the earth and the shortest one, a beautiful bronze 'mum, represented man.

The president, Mrs. W. Scott, then took charge and Mrs. S. C. Gay reported on Christian stewardship and Mrs. C. Wilson reported over $154 sent to the treasurer.

BEAUTY

Fingernails and their care

With all the care in the world, many women are lamenting about brittle fingernails. They have a maddening way of breaking at the wrong moment. You are togged up in your grandest dry goods, waiting for the Best Beau to ring the doorbell and a nail snaps or snags. No use overlooking it. The damage will ruin your evening. You must get out the emery board; maybe you'll have to file down to the flesh.

Don't blame the polish, which probably has nothing to do with the misbehavior of the pink sheaths at your fingertips. Nails often reflect the condition of field of dermatology hazard the guess that sub-acidity in the system may make an unfavorable impression on the nails, causing them to break or to develop ridges. This condition may be due —so they say—to poor digestion, need of dental attention, or sluggish blood streams. We hand the information along for what it may be worth.

It is definitely known that some chronic disorders are reflected in your nails. Some diseases may even change the shape and size of the nails, or cause them to become thin and tissue-like so that the ends curl, spoon-fashion. A nerve injury may cause disfigurement of one kind or another. Pressure at the base of the nail can so injure the matrix — that little machine that produces the overlapping cells that form the new nail fabric—that a deformed nail will emerge.

Care of the fingernails requires the use of a bland soap when washing the hands, protection against grime and dust that roughen the delicate pink surface, and the frequent use of a nourishing cream. After creaming your complexion at night, apply the cosmetic leavings to your nails. Use friction when applying it. The tinting of the nails—they are white and transparent—is given by the blood streams in the underlying flesh. Like every cell of the body, they depend upon good circulation.

Treat the surrounding tissues to lubrication. If they are kept soft and pliable, the cuticle will not creep up on the nail itself—drying out there, breaking and causing hangnails. While the cream is on, lift the flesh gently with an orangewood stick.

When filing the eaves, work from sides to centre. If you saw down into the flesh at the sides, it will harden there, build a protective barrier. Nature is on the watch.

Don't fancy that lubricants will cause the polish to become spotty. It won't.

GETS GOOD ADVICE

After I was married, my grandmother said, "Everyone's giving you lots of advice, but they may not have told you how to keep a man's shirt sparkling white. All that is needed is a swish of Reckitt's Blue in the rinse—and that goes for all white clothes. Reckitt's Blue prevents clothes turning yellow—gives a snowy white wash every time without using anything that may damage fabric." Trust Granny to give me advice worth remembering.

SPECIAL SESSION

Installed As Necessary

He did not elaborate, but government sources said the controls will be installed on a piece-meal basis, as they become necessary. They likely will call for larger down payments, large monthly or weekly payments and a time limit for repayment.

Opposition speakers generally expressed approval of the legislation.

In the Commons, Mr. Abbott said the need for regulation of consumer credit depends to some extent on the actions of sellers and buyers themselves. Attempts to "high-pressure" customers would add to inflationary pressures and make restrictions "inevitable and urgent." Consumers, for their part, should think twice.

The bill would give the government authority, to be used "when required without delay," to restrain spending by limiting the amount of credit available to consumers for the purchase of goods. It would be part of the program to curb inflation created by rising defence expenditures.

Restricts Volume

Since the legislation is designed only to restrict the volume of consumer credit, the authority would be limited "to regulation of the financing of goods purchased on credit either under an instalment plan or under a charge account and to regulation of the repayment of loans related to the purchase of goods."

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, suggested there was need for permanent legislation to protect the public in the instalment-buying system. Many furniture firms selling on the instalment plan were "not so interested in selling furniture as they are in making loans."

Victor Quelch (SC-Acadia) approved the legislation, but said he hoped its provisions would not reduce expenditures necessary for a high standard of living. If it did, it would be harmful to the country and to the war effort.

Tried to Amend

A. L. Smith (PC-Calgary West) said he was in agreement "with restraint on crooks in any walk of life," but added: "Don't let us get to running away with ourselves and damning everybody who lends money to those who need it."

As the materials control bill moved through its final stages, three Progressive Conservative members tried unsuccessfully to amend and modify provisions.

John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) moved to assure the individual the right of recourse to the courts if he felt aggrieved by the legislation, while Howard Green (PC-Vancouver-Quadra) sought to force publication of all orders made under the act.

Donald Fleming (PC-Toronto Eglinton) moved to change the expiry date of the act from July 31 1952 to March 31, 1951.

All three amendments were defeated by voice votes.

Piloting the bill through clause-by-clause study Mr. Howe said the test as to "whether the price controls should be used would be whether the particular article is being bought in quantity for defence, and whether the defence purchases create a scarcity."

This would apply to food as well as other articles.

However, he could not visualize a situation where prices would be affected by defence purchasing. In any event, the bill did not give the government power to fix wages, which must be part of any over-all price control scheme.

He told Mr. Green there were no materials which needed control at this time—not even steel—which was being effectively rationed by the producers themselves.

As Progressive Conservative members urged that the powers of the minister be defined and limited, Mr. Howe suggested they had "vigorously" opposed every measure the government had brought down to put Canada on a war footing and yet, in the same breath had called for greater defence measures.

WORLD MOURNS

His parents were of Dutch and French Huguenot stock. Born May 24, 1870, on a farm near Capetown, Smuts quit law studies to become a guerrilla leader in the Boer Rebellion in 1899-1902.

Started in 1922

Smut's first tenure as prime minister after the First World War foundered when public dissatisfaction with his severe handling of 1922 labor problems cost him his parliamentary majority. Seventeen years later, in 1939, he returned to power when the government of J. B. M. Hertzog fell on the neutrality issue. Smuts' regime lasted until 1948.

His united party lost to the nationalists, led by Daniel F. Malan, on the issue of apartheid—race segregation—which the Field Marshal opposed.

Even Smuts was defeated for parliament, but a colleague gave up his seat so that "The Boss" could continue to head the opposition in the Lower Chamber.

Funeral services will be held Friday in Pretoria leading Dutch Reformed Church, The Grote Kerk. Burial probably will be at Smuts' farm. Doornkoof, where he died. It is 10 miles from Pretoria.

A military funeral is being arranged at the request of Smuts' family.

SENT TO MUSEUM

Port Colborne, Sept. 12 (CP)—An animal resembling a mole or anteater, unknown in this area, was captured Sunday in the home of John Gooder. The furry creature, with a body about six inches long, had a pointed head ending in a suction-like mouth. The animal died an hour later. It was sent to the Royal Ontario Museum for identification.

MADOC

Madoc—Mr. and Mrs. McKinley Rankin are spending a pleasant holiday motoring through Western Canada, returning home by way of the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sills and son Ivan spent a few days visiting relatives and friends before returning to their home at Trout River.

Miss Ann Nickle of Huntsville spent a few days at her home in Madoc.

St. Peter's W.M.S.

the W.M.S. September meeting which was held at her home on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance.

An "extra" from the address of the Rev. C. Ritchie Bell given at the pre-assembly congress in Montreal was used to open the meeting. Several "thank-you" letters and cards were read and preparations were made for the thank offering meeting and for the supper to be served by the W.M.S. at the Sunday school convention to be held in the church. Twenty-four visits were made and thirteen cards sent.

Mrs. Alvey had charge of the program. She read an article from the record which showed the growth of the work among Koreans in Japan. An article on the "Four Majesties" through the Bible House was read by Mrs. Walden. It showed the interest royalty has always taken in the work through the Bible Society.

Mrs. Johnston gave extracts from the Glad Tidings showing the great work being done among students in universities in foreign countries through Christian literature, and the starting of a new magazine.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Donahue in serving refreshments during the social half-hour.

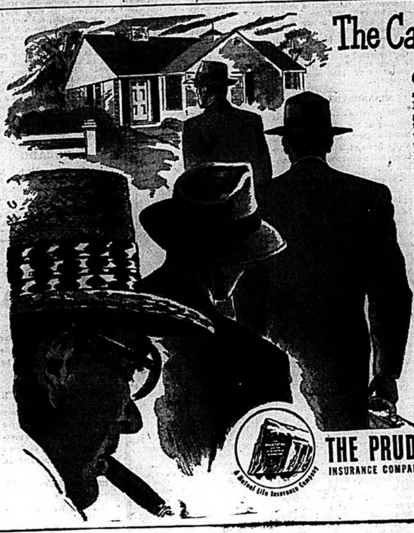
PLANE CREW RESCUED

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 12 (AP) — A navy transport plane, her fuel tanks empty, was ditched in the Pacific near Midway Island Sunday but within three hours all seven men aboard were rescued. The Hawaiian sea frontier reported a naval patrol boat picked up the seven men from a life raft tossed about by 12 foot waves. None of the men required medical assistance.



The Case of the 4 Strangers

One morning four men met on the front steps of big Fred Johnson's home. They had never met one another before—and none of them had ever met Fred. Inside the quiet house, Fred Johnson's wife held her little girl's shoulder tightly. She wondered what she could tell these men. For an instant she imagined how easily Fred would have satisfied them. But Fred was no longer there to help her.

He had always lived for today, laughing at her worries about tomorrow. But now tomorrow had come—and with it the four strangers—the four men who knew that the most tragic event in May Johnson's life, the event that had brought their unpaid bills, had brought no money to meet them.

Think. Could this happen to your wife?

Ken. McNaught is the new BHA president with Jack Yanover in the past-prexy's chair. The vice president is Fred Reid and the secretary treasurer Dick Beare. The majority of the 1949-50 executive was re-elected and consists of Messrs. Malcolm Robb, Charlie Cawker, Fred Rawson, Fred Elgie, Don Stanton, Dr. Austen Walters, Orliff Lloyd, Jack McNab, Al. Reynolds, "Toots" Holway and Bill Cook.

* * *

* * *

In keeping with the policy adopted last year, the Association will sponsor midget and bantam hockey as well as one juvenile squad, and of course the Junior "B" team. The perennial Bill Cook will master-mind the juniors while the bantams will again be under the expert supervision of "Boiler" Lloyd and Don Stanton. Fred Elgie will again assume the destinies of the juveniles while "Toots" Holway will have the midgets under his capable wing.

* * *

The Association took a firm stand on various angles of minor hockey. It was unanimous in endorsing a suggestion that all youngsters desirous of playing in the midget, bantam and juvenile groups, must have the permission of parents or guardians to play. It also endorsed a motion that it would in no way be responsible for accidents which may occur during practice or play. In addition it decided that each boy who plays must present to the Association prior to practice or play his birth certificate.

* * *

All efforts will be made to bring the strongest junior "B" players possible here to wear the Belleville colors. While nothing absolutely definite has been arrived at regarding players, it is understood negotiations are under way for youngsters who are rated highly in "B" circles. More about the player angle later on. With such a strong hardworking organization already at work, the BHA should enjoy one of its best seasons. And it is to be hoped that the hockey faithful will get behind it one hundred per cent. A few willing "horses" should not carry the entire brunt of the operation, and if the fans want to see good hockey they should get behind this organization to the limit.

ONE EACH!

Tonight at the Alemite Field Cy Barriage's Howe and Hagerman Plumbers and the Stewart Warner squad clash in the third game of their Commercial Softball League semi-finals series. To date the teams are all even-stephen with one victory each. In the first tilt the Stewarners defeated the Plumbers by a 5-3 count but the Barriage boys roared right back to cop the second game by a 12-4 score. Both teams are in the pink and tonight's tussle should be another hard-fought fray.

DO OR DIE!

Tomorrow night Herbie Henn's Brewers Buckaroos have their backs to the wall but plenty. The rampaging Point Anners have set the proud Sudsmen back on their haunches two games in a row and will go all out to sweep the three-of-five series in straight games. However, the Brewers are desperate and they will have to go all out if they want to snatch a further chance at the league gonfalon. Manager Henn will likely toss Lum Carson at the victory-hungry Ox Pointers with Manager Mike Whalen nodding at Pat Maracle to take over the mound chore for the cement villagers. Perry Everett has been the hero of the series thus far for the Cementmen. He poled out a couple of sturdy hits that paved the way for the first win while his offensive work in the second tilt was one of the features of the battle. It could be the Brewers' swan song Wednesday night, but not if Herbie Henn's proteges can help it.

The Masked Marvel who is rapidly building himself the reputation of being the biggest toughie to come down the wrestling highways since Fred Atkins, returns to the mat wars here on Friday night when he "takes on" that broth of a bhoy, Timmy Geohagen, Irish strong man and as nate a hunk of mat personality as has been seen here for many a moon. Sure and it is not, bejapers, the first time the pair has clashed. In their former meeting, Timmy m'lad, had the Mask in a bad way but he stood on the wrong side of the ropes to do it. Friday he says, with a twinkle in his eye, matters will be different. The Mask roughed up the Yukon champion, Eric of Fairbanks last Friday while taking a bit of a mauling himself. But he fears no man, so he says, and Friday night should see more fireworks.

Main Action in American League Scramble Moves West With Schedule Favoring Tigers

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The see-saw American League pennant race roars into the west today with the pressure heavier on the invading New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox than on Detroit Tigers.

Casey Stengel's Yanks, leading by half a game, begin a nine-game tour of the west with a two-game series in Cleveland tonight. The third-place Red Sox, 1 1-2 games out, open an eight-game road trip in Chicago. The second-place Tigers begin a 10-game home stand with Washington Senators.

The Yanks, who forged to the front yesterday by sweeping a doubleheader from Washington 5-1 and 6-2 in the only activity in either league, face no easy task.

So far the Yanks have won 21 and lost 14 in the west, with Cleveland their best stop and Detroit their poorest. The Yanks have taken seven out of nine in Cleveland but only two out of eight in Detroit.

However, the Indians, virtually knocked out of contention during the weekend when they dropped four straight games to the lowly St. Louis Browns, are out for blood. The Indians, blasted by their general manager, Hank Greenberg, for "not hustling and playing stupid ball" have next year's contracts to worry about.

The Red Sox, installed by New York odd makers as 7 1-2- or 8-1-2-5 favorites to win the pennant, are the hottest team in the business at the moment. The Sox have won 23 out of their last 26 games, but are known as a poor road club.

Have Advantage

The Tigers appear to have the advantage over the Yanks and Red Sox. The Bengals have 17 games remaining at home where they have won 44 and lost 19 for an impressive .698 pace. The Tigers enjoy an advantage over all of their rivals at home except Washington.

Ed Lopat and young Ed Ford were the winning pitchers for the Yanks yesterday in the doubleheader at Washington.

Ford pitched a brilliant three-hitter in the opener to post his sixth victory without a setback. The young lefty held the Senators hitless over the last five innings.

Lopat relieved erratic Tommy Byrne in the fifth inning of the second game and allowed only two hits the rest of the way to gain his 16th victory.

In the National League the situation is more stabilized. The question there is not who will win the pennant but when will the Philadelphia Phillies clinch it?

The Phils, leading the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers by 6 1-2 games, begin a 10-game home stand tonight with the stumbling St. Louis Cardinals as the opposition. The Dodgers engage Cincinnati Reds at Ebbets Field.

The only scheduled game in the National League yesterday, a night affair between Brooklyn and New York was rained out.

Ken McNaught, former star hockey player and coach, has been named president of the Belleville Hockey Association, for the ensuing year. Ken brings a lot of experience to his new position and under his guidance the Association which now embraces minor as well as Junior "B" hockey activities, should have a good season.

Playoffs Begin In International Wings Favored

(By the Associated Press)

The semi-final round of the International League playoffs begin tonight with the pennant-winning Rochester Red Wings favored to win their series from Jersey City while the Montreal-Baltimore series is rated an even-money affair.

Rochester has been installed a 3-2 favorite to win the series and 10-7 for tonight's game.

The first two games of best-of-seven affair will be played in Rochester and the next three in Jersey City. The sixth and seventh games if necessary will be played in Rochester.

Tom Poholsky, (18-6) 21-year-old righthander and the league's most valuable player, is expected to start for the Red Wings tonight against Jersey City's Roger Bowman (16-10).

The first three games of the Montreal-Baltimore clash will be played in Baltimore, with the fourth and any remaining games in Montreal.

Turk Lown (13-9) is expected to pitch for Montreal tonight against veteran Russ Bauers (13-6). Tonight's game is rated even money, same as the series.

The winners of the semi-final round series will meet in another best-of-seven set to determine the opponent of the American Association's playoff winner in the Little World Series.

PETES DOWNED AGAIN

Peterborough, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Owen Sound Crescents pulled into a commanding lead in their Ontario Lacrosse Association senior playoff series with Peterborough Petes Monday night by downing Petes 9-5 before a crowd of 1,800. The win gives Crescents a 3-1 lead in games, with the next in Owen Sound Wednesday.

Arn Smith and Jack Mason paced the winners with two goals apiece. Russ Slater, Don McWhirter, Don Campbell, Yorky Jordan and Bill Allum each scored singletons. Lou Vitarelli notched a pair for Petes, singles going to Arn. Dugan, Bobby Thorpe and Don Crowe.

Brantford Sox In Finals For League Title

(By The Canadian Press)

The hard-hitting Brantford Red Sox today are waiting for a crack at the Intercounty Senior Baseball League title.

They established themselves as odds-on favorite last night by moving into the finals with a 7-6 decision over London Majors at Brantford. The victory gave them a string of seven wins against two losses in their 10-game round-robin series — and dropped the Majors out of the series.

At St. Thomas, the Legionnaires stayed in the title hunt by shading Waterloo Tigers 6-4, giving them four victories and four losses in eight games. The Legionnaires now will meet Kitchener and Waterloo.

At Brantford pitcher Alf Gavey came up with a terrific display of hurling and batting to pace the Red Sox to victory. He clouted in the winning run in the ninth inning with one man out and earned himself the winning pitcher's role.

Not until the ninth frame did the Red Sox catch fire. They were trailing 5-3 but belted across four quick runs for the decision. Gottschall was charged with the loss.

At St. Thomas the Legionnaires bunched five of their six runs on three hits, two walks and an error in the sixth inning. They added an insurance point in the eighth.

Hurler Dick Long won his second playoff game for the Legionnaires by pitching an eight-hitter. Losing pitcher Al Dumouchelle also tossed eight-hit ball.

The Tigers appeared to have the game well in hand before the fateful sixth frame. They scored four runs in the third inning — three of them on a home-run clout by Augie Herchenratter. A single by Jim Muldoon and a double by Larry Archambault accounted for the other run.

Edmonton Eskimos in Front In West Conference, Stamps Finally Manage to Win Game

(By The Canadian Press)

Coach Annis Stukus finally got his Edmonton Eskimos in front in the Western Football Conference—all by themselves. And burly Les Lear dented the win column, a trick that his once-powerful Calgary Stampeders failed to do in five previous attempts.

The Eskimos went to the top of the heap with a 24-12 victory last night over the stubborn Saskatchewan Roughriders before 8,000 Edmonton fans. The Stamps put on their winning show before a similar-sized hometown crowd with a 13-6 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Although Bombers and Riders both are tied in second place two points back of Edmonton both teams have a game in hand over Esks and the last-place Calgarians.

Homebrew talent kicked in with the payoff punch in the Edmonton triumph. After a see-saw battle into the third quarter the teams were tied 12-12. Former Toronto Argo Mike King clicked for two Edmonton touchdowns to keep pace with two majors provided by Riders' Al Bodine, chunky import from the University of Georgia. Then the two Edmonton high school graduates—Jimmy MacRae and teen aged Don Simon—salted away the game.

MacRae picked up a Rider fumble on their 25 and scooted for the winning touchdown. Simon did an expert job of swivel-hipping in the fourth quarter for 32 yards and the insurance major.

Coach Stukus trotted out on the field for the kicking chores and converted the Esks four touchdowns.

In Calgary the Stampeders and Bombers played a scoreless first quarter and then Stamps coddled a one-point margin, from Keith Spaith's kick, until the fourth quarter.

Looked Like Old Stamps

They looked like the Stamps of old in that final quarter when Sugarfoot Anderson and Royal Copeland went over for major scores. Bombers, playing without their ace quarterback Jack Jacobs, were held pointless until the last play of the game. Ron Vaccher scored Bombers' lone touchdown when he took a pass over the Calgary goal-line from second-string quarterback Pete Petrow.

The Stamps appeared a rejuvenated outfit behind their fast-charging line. For the first time in six games they dominated play for most of the route.

Quarterback Lindy Berry again demonstrated that he has a great pitching arm. The former Texas Christian University heaver flung 18 passes, completing 13 for 204 yards.

Field General Jack Hartman of the Riders completed seven of 18 pass attempts for 147 yards. Both the Saskatchewan touchdowns resulted from his throws to Bodine.

Balmy Beachers Will Carry On, Tuttle New Coach

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Balmy Beach will carry on in the Ontario Rugby Football Union with quarterback Gerry Tuttle as coach, manager Paul McGarry said Monday.

In announcing Tuttle's appointment as playing coach and that of snapback Dwight Follin as line coach, McGarry confirmed rumors they would get the jobs which opened up after Teddy Morris resigned suddenly last Friday as Beaches' mentor.

Both Tuttle and Follin, American imports, were cut last week from Toronto Argonauts after failing to make the Big Four team. They turned out with Beaches, which became a farm club of Argos this year in an arrangement that calls for Argos to help the O.R.F.U. club pay its bills.

Morris' resignation came a few days after Tuttle and Follin joined the Beaches and less than a week after the team was crushed 39-0 by Sarnia Imperials in its league game.

Morris, who coached Argos to three straight Dominion football championships in 1945-46-47, said he resigned because "I was just fed up to the teeth, sick of the whole business and wanted out."

A last-minute conference Monday between the Waterloo rink commission and prospective sponsors of a senior A hockey team paved the way for possible representation in the Ontario Hockey Association.

Rink officials met with Bobby Bauer and Walter (Punch) Scherer, to head the proposed entry, and said ice facilities will be arranged. The new entry, yet to be named, will take up where Kitchener - Waterloo Flying Dutchmen left off last year.

If it continues, the league will include Toronto Marlboros and Hamilton Tigers.

Ray Robinson will get the next shot at the world middleweight title if the National Boxing Association has its way.

The N.B.A. convention notified champion Jake LaMotta and challenger Laurent Dauthuille of France Monday that the winner of their Wednesday night championship bout at Detroit's Olympia must face Robinson within six months.

Both fighters were told they must "disregard any previous contracts" that might call for a return match. As such a contract is supposed to exist, there may be a hitch in the Robinson match.

Bill Gregus, 22-year-old halfback with Hamilton's powerful Tiger-Cat football club, has been drafted by the United States Army. Officials of the Big Four club said he left late Monday for Toledo, O., for a medical test.

Coach Carl Voyles said it would be "a big loss" if Gregus was drafted. "They sometimes give them 90 days before they have to go," he said.

Joe Louis and Ezzard Charles signed "the papers" Monday for their world heavyweight title fight Sept. 27 at Yankee Stadium.

The two fighters motored in to New York from their respective training camps to appear before chairman Eddie Eagan of the State Athletic Commission, apply their names to the contracts and undergo physical examinations.

Jake Mintz, voluble little manager of Charles, enlivened the occasion somewhat by remarking to Louis: "Joe, Ezzard is the heavyweight champion now and he still will be after he fights you." Joe only smiled.

Brockville Memos Tie Smiths Falls In Second Game

Brockville, Sept. 12 (CP)—Ronnie Trushell's ninth-inning triple, his second of the evening, gave Brockville Memos a 5-5 tie with Smiths Falls Royals here Monday night in the second game of the best-of-seven Central Ontario Baseball League finals.

The third game is being played in Smiths Falls Wednesday.

Trushell, hit three-for-five including his two triples and was the night's big batter. Joe Levandoski, Memos' second baseman, hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

Kingston Ponies Win First One Over Nationals

Kingston, Sept. 12 —(CP) — Kingston Ponies opened their best-of-seven semi-final series against Ottawa Nationals with a hard-fought 5-3 Border League victory Monday night.

Both starting pitchers, Don Bryant of Ottawa and Roger Higgins of Ponies, went all the way on about equal terms, but a couple of lapses were costly to Nats, who finished the regular season at the top of the heap.

Playing in a chill wind, Nationals pounded out four safeties for a commanding 2-0 lead in the third. Kingston responded with three in the fifth and Ottawa tied it with another in the seventh.

The important eighth inning saw Len Riley, Kingston outfielder, single to right field to score Bob McLean and scored himself on Mike Christopher's high fly.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 12 — (AP)—Story currently kicking around the mid-west is that Lou Boudreau will become baseball coach at his alma mater, Illinois, when he winds up his Cleveland career. . Lou, himself, has taken pretty good care of winding up the playing part and you know what happens to managers, however popular, when they don't win enough pennants. . .

While watching Willie Pep make Sandy Saddler look silly during first few rounds the other night, George Barton, veteran Minneapolis writer, recalled taking Mike Gibbons to see Pep fight for the first time. . . Mike watched a few minutes, then sighed: "I'd pay two bucks just to see that boy shadow box." . . . Hialeah has installed an automatic electrical fire warning system in the stable area. . . Now if they could provide similar warnings at the mutuel windows for guys who were about to get burned. . .

Dot's All, Brothers

California story is that a southern Cal. Alumnus invaded coach Jeff Cravath's office a few years ago to praise a certain service footballer. Jeff turned to Jim Hardy, just out of uniform then, and asked if he'd ever heard of Charley Justice. . . "Sure," said Jim, "Just a flash in the pan." . . Jim merely said three words too many. . . Then there's the sad case of Neil Colville, the Rangers coach. He already is suffering from ulcers and his hockey team doesn't start training until next week.

Southpaw Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Game to Win 2-0

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Sept. 12—(AP)—Southpaw Bob Smith twirled a no-hit, no-run game in the Border Baseball League Monday night as his Ogdensburg Maples took the second semi-final playoff game in a row from Watertown 2-0.

Smith struck out four and walked three in the nine-inning contest. His record is 11-9. The Maples lead Watertown 2-0 in the best-of-seven semi-final playoff.

It was the first no-hit, no-run playoff game in the history of the six-club league. Ottawa pitcher Don Bryant hurled one during the regular season when he blanked Geneva 4-0 in a seven-inning game last Thursday.

St. Catharines All-Stars Game Away From Title

Vancouver, Sept. 12 (CP)—St. Catharines All-Stars to date are travelling an easy path toward the Dominion junior lacrosse championship and the Minto Cup, British Columbia property for two years.

The eastern invaders moved within one game of the championship last night by outgunning Vancouver Burrard juniors 14-9 in the second game of a best-of-five series. They won the opener 18-9.

Third game of the cleanly-fought series is scheduled Wednesday night and the eastern team is favored to sweep the playoffs.

Fazed by Burrard's zone defence in the first period last night, St. Catharines infiltrated in the second period for five unanswered goals to take a 6-2 half-time lead.

Goals by Max Wooley, Doug Smith and Derry Davies offset counters by Vancouver's Gordy Vance and Dave Redline in the third period. St. Catharines held a 9-4 margin at the start of the final period, during which both teams staged a down-the-line fight, notching five goals apiece.

Ted Howe with three goals and one assist and Tom Moore with two goals and two assists topped St. Catharines scoring.

Goalies gave outstanding performances. St. Catharines' Ted Brocuk stopped 30 shots, while Vic Grover halted 36 to compensate for Vancouver's weak defence.

Other outstanding players for the winners were Emil Uhyrnuk, Wooley, Davies and Bradshaw.

St. Catharines players tonight will be guests at the final game of the North Shore Indians-Victoria Shamrocks inter-city lacrosse semi-final.

Bateman Motors Spring Surprise On Mercuries

Everybody's doing it, and last evening Bateman Motors came up with one of the biggest surprises of the season as they upset the favored Belleville Mercuries 1-0 in the tightest game this year. The win gives Bateman's a one-game jump in their best-of-five series with the league flag winners.

This upset was in the tradition of the Commercial League playoffs this year where upsets have been the rule rather than the exception.

Slender Jack Holmes was the big man in Bateman's surprising victory. The slowballing artist stood the Mercuries on their heads with a neat one-hitter. He mixed his fast and slow balls in such a juicy blend that the Mercuries were off balance throughout the game. He struck out nine and walked only two in an impressive display.

Bob Emmerson, doing the firing for the Mercuries turned in a sterling effort in defeat. He limited Batemans to three scattered safeties. He walked six and struck out five. An error in the second inning was his undoing. O'Brien, leading off the second frame belted a long ball to left field which the leftfielder muffed for four bases and that was the ball game.

Batemans went on to load the bases on a single and two errors with no one out in the second but failed to connect for a run. With this one exception neither pitcher was ever in trouble.

It was Mercury pitcher Emmerson who spoiled Holmes' bid for a no-hit game. As first man up in the bottom of the first inning he belted a single to centrefield for all the offensive power of the Mercury attack.

Two other men reached first on walks, and three got there via errors.

Callaghan doubled, and Graham and Wright singled for Batemans.

Research Plant Fire Loss $40,000

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 12 —(CP)—Fire Chief Cliff Matheson today reported that the Chromium Mining and Smelting Corporation had set the loss of Saturday's blaze in the research building at $40,000.

He said he believed the fire, which burned for half an hour and for a time threatened the whole plant, was caused by a cigaret tossed on the floor.

H. O. Brown, plant manager, said that although the building was completely gutted and experimental work delayed, production was unhindered.

Apple Crop Quality Exceptional, Lighter Yield Says Kennedy

Toronto, Sept. 12 (CP)— Although the Ontario apple crop is down 15 or 20 percent this year, the quality has never been better in the province's history Agriculture Minister Kennedy said today.

"While there has been a drop in quantity I never saw such apples," said the minister. "The Northern Spy is down but the McIntosh bore heavily."

He said that there was enough apples for all Ontario consumers and no one should fear a shortage.

Pears, down about a third, are good in quality and in sufficient quantity to take care of the Ontario market.

Mr. Kennedy expressed himself as pleased with the marketing of the peach crop. He felt that prices were good and that waste was avoided.

Tributes Pour In From All Parts of World

(By The Canadian Press)

The King expressed a feeling of "great sorrow and personal loss" over the death Monday of South Africa's Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts.

In a telegram to Smuts' widow in Pretoria, sent from the Royal summer residence in Balmoral, Scotland, the King said:

"The Queen and I have heard the news of the death of Field Marshal Smuts with great sorrow and a deep sense of personal loss.

"We send our heartiest sympathy to you and your family. In peace or in war his counsel and his friendship were of inestimable value both to my father and to myself while the force of his intellect has enriched the wisdom of the whole human race."

Tributes came to the great statesman and soldier from all parts of the world.

In London, Prime Minister Attlee said: "The world will mourn, for he was not only a devoted lover of his country and a friend of estimable value to Britain and to the Commonwealth but in his large heart there was a place for all humanity."

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill, who had been closely associated with Smuts, said:

"The departure of this great spirit leaves all the world poorer. His memory will long be cherished in many lands besides his own."

In Ottawa, Prime Minister St. Laurent said Smuts "had adopted the world as his nation."

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Monday night that Field Marshal Smuts of South Africa was "truly one of the giants of our generation."

External Affairs Minister Pearson of Canada sent a message saying "the people of Canada will share sincerely in the general sorrow at his passing, and we extend to the people of South Africa our deep sympathy in their loss."

The BBC observed a minute's silence to honor Smuts.

Pouring Rains, Heavy Winds In Essex County

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 12 — (CP) —Pouring rains and heavy winds struck across the eastern part of Essex County Monday in a freak storm, stalling highway traffic, damaging several farm buildings and uprooting trees.

Many autos were stopped by the brief, blinding rain, and engines of some of the cars were flooded.

Police blame the storm for a head-on collision on No. 2 Highway about 25 miles east of here in which three women were injured. They were taken to hospital here where their condition is reported as good.

The injured women are Elizabeth Edgar, 55, of (269 North Water Street) Galt, with facial lacerations and injured chest; Mrs. Josephine McFarlane, 67, of Windsor, with a fractured ankle and possible fractured wrist; and Mrs. Violet Rhodes, 62, of Detroit, with knee and hand injuries.

They were injured in the crash of two cars which police said were driven by Thomas Edgar, 63, of Detroit, and William McFarlane, of Windsor. Police said apparently one of the cars strayed onto the wrong side of the road in the blinding rain.

Escaped Killer Believed Hiding Near Orangeville

Orangeville, Sept. 12 —(CP)— A hunt for Melville Wilkie, 40-year-old convicted killer who escaped from a mental hospital two months ago, continued today in Caledon township a few miles southeast of here.

Police and farmers took up the search again this morning after spending the night tramping through the bush in the rain.

An Owen Sound woman told police yesterday she had seen Wilkie on a street here. Later, other district residents reported seeing a hitch - hiker resembling Wilkie.

The fugitive, who burned his wife and child to death in their home near Owen Sound 16 years ago, fled from the Ontario Hospital for the criminally-insane at Penetanguishene with another patient, Herman Woodcock, who was later recaptured.

Peters of Gazette Elected Director Canadian Press

Banff, Alta., Sept. 12 (CP)—C. H. Peters of the Montreal Gazette Monday was elected a director of The Canadian Press to fill the unexpired term of John Bassett, President of the Gazette and for many years active in CP affairs, who is retiring from the CP board.

Fellow-members of the board, in passing a resolution of regret at Mr. Bassett's resignation, referred to him as one of the news co-operative's soundest advisors.

F. I. Ker, of the Hamilton Spectator, said Mr. Bassett's career from his press gallery days to his directorship in CP had been one of honor and devoted service. The resolution moved by Mr. Ker, was seconded by Arthur R. Ford, London Free Press, one-time press gallery colleague of Mr. Bassett.

Directors of The Canadian Press Monday opened their fall meeting to discuss affairs of the National News Co-operative. Herve Major of Montreal La Presse, C.P.'s President, presided.

The following transfers of membership were reported: Montreal Gazette from John Bassett to C. H. Peters; St. Catharines Standard from the late H. B. Burgoyne to W.B.C. Burgoyne; Moose Jaw Times-Herald from Allan Holmes to Roy H. Robichaud; Prince Albert Herald from W. L. Davis to Allan Holmes.

The CP board meeting continues today, when committees of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association also meet, followed by the C.D.N.A. board meeting Wednesday.

Penicillin Doses Taken by Month May be Safeguard

Toronto, Sept. 12 (CP)—Heavy doses of penicillin taken by mouth may be a useful safeguard against epidemics and severe throat ailments, it is reported in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

A team of five doctors said tests conducted at the Hospital for Sick Children here revealed that such treatment protected patients from recurring throat ailment, which frequently lead to attacks of rheumatic fever.

Tests were made on 76 children suffering rheumatic fever. They were divided into two groups. The first group was given daily doses of 100,000 units of penicillin taken in two tablets of 50,000 units each.

In the non-treatment group 52 of 576 swabs showed signs of throat infection, while only three of 570 patients showed positive in the other.

Merchants Move Into Fifth Round OASA Playdowns

(By Staff Reporter)

Frankford — Frankford Merchants battered their way into the fifth round of the O.A.S.A. Intermediate 'C' playdowns last evening with a 5-1 victory over Brooklin under the lights at Frankford.

The win gave the Merchants a two-game sweep of their best in three series and the zone 4 championship.

Don Boyle held the Brooklin batters to three scattered hits, as his mates drilled out seven safeties, including two home runs and two doubles.

Frankford opened the scoring in the bottom of the second frame with lead-off man Murphy singling to right centre field. He took second on a passed ball and reached third as Boyle grounded out third to first. Appleby hoisted to left field with the leftfielder dropping the ball as Murphy scored. Bill Rankin counted the Merchants second run in the third frame with a home run to left field. With two away Harry Wickson clubbed a mighty home run to left field, that shrank to a double and an out, when he failed to touch third base in his rush to pay dirt.

Shortstop Misses Catch

A disastrous fumble by the Brooklin short stop in the bottom of the seventn inning gave Frankford two runs to put them out of range of any Brooklin attack. With two out and men on third and second, Rogers hoisted a high one to short. The runners were off with the bat and were crossing home plate when the shortstop missed the catch.

Boyle crashed out a solid home run in the eighth inning to make the verdict legitimate.

Brooklin counted their only run in the eighth inning. Gibson and Martin walked to lead off. D. Mitchell lifted an infield fly for the automatic out but the runners moved up when the relay to third hit the runner in the back. B. Mitchell then clubbed a single into left field to plate Gibson but Martin was thrown out sliding at the plate. Graham went down short to first to retire the side.

Boyle Went Route

Boyle went the route for the winners. Although he kept himself in hot water with nine walks he was tough in the clutch, striking out eight and giving up but three hits. Martin toiled the distance for Brooklin, walking three striking out five and giving up seven hits for five runs as his mates committed costly errors afield.

Rankin led all batters with a home run and a double in four trips.

Line Up:

Brooklin: Foster 2b; McKinnon 1b; Gibson lf; Martin p; D. Mitchell cf; B. Mitchell c; Graham rf; Nesbitt 3b; Davidson ss, replaced by Hooker in 8th.

Frankford. Gilmour lf; Rankin cf; Rogers 2b; Wickson 3b; Murphy c; Boyle p; Appleby rf; Morglan ss; Consaul 1b.

AT THE BELLE

Mr. Gable Started Joel McCrea on Stardom Road

Joel McCrea, currently starring at the Belle Theatre in "Stars in My Crown," credits Clark Gable with having started him on his successful acting career.

It was back in 1928 when Gable was working as an extra in "The Fair Co-Ed," a silent picture starring Marion Davies, with many of its scenes filmed on the Pomona College campus. McCrea, then a Pomona student, was watching the filming when Gable urged him to mix with the extras on the theory that it was a better job than the newspaper route which McCrea was then running to help pay his college expenses.

McCrea took the advice, became an extra, and within a short time graduated to leading roles and stardom. With "Stars in My Crown" he celebrates his twenty-first anniversary in motion pictures.

Ellen Drew and little Dean Stockwell are other principals in the action-filled story of a two-fisted parson, with Alan Hale, Lewis Stone, James Mitchell and Amanda Blake in the supporting cast.

"Stars in My Crown", showing tonight and Wednesday, matinee daily, emerges as one of the season's fine motion pictures. It will prove an entertainment treat for filmgoers of every age.

A very funny M.G.M. color Cartoon ads to the happiness of the program.

Miss Mary Vivian, who spent her vacation with her parents Mr. and Mrs. K. R. Vivian, has entered the Kingston General Hospital School of Nursing.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Arbuckle and Archie, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Morrison, Belleville and visited Mrs. Morrison's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald at their cottage near Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Whitehead and Faith of Belleville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil McCarthy.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins were sitting on Mary Watkins's frunt steps talking to her and trying to think of funny things to say to make her laff, and I said, It'll be a nice day tomorrow if it dont rain.

Not being exter funny but the best thing I could think of just then, and Puds said, Ha ha dont make me laff. If I couldn't be any funnier than that I'd go and jump in the lake and forget to come up for air, he said.

Sutch a meen thing to say, I'm ashamed of you, Puds Simkins, Mary Watkins said, and I said, I'm ashamed of him too for making sutch a dum crack. If I was and change my name, I said.

Benny Potts, you're just as meen as he is, and if you 2 dont apologize this minute by giving each other a nice compliment, I'm going rite in the house, Mary said, and Puds said, Well, okay, if he apologizes ferst, I'll 2nd the motion to him.

Nuthing doing, you insulted me first, so you got to give the ferst compliment according to law, I said, and Puds said, Oh, okay, you'd seem like a pritty good looking guy on a dark nite if you had an intirely diffrent face and another shape to go with it.

Thanks for the compliment, you mite be almost as good looking as me if you didn't look like a combination of a fried fish and a stewed tomato, I said, and Mary Watkins said, Now I think you're both awful, I think you're both terrible and if you think [illegible] only ones that think so, and even then you're mistaken, and I'm going rite in.

Which she did, and Puds said. [illegible] us like that, and I said, Sure, who does she think she is, who does she think we are?

And we walked away independ-

Prairie Frost Chilling Hopes Of Big Harvest

Ottawa, Sept. 12 (CP)—Prairie frost is chilling Canada's hopes of reaping an unusually-rich wheat harvest.

Government officials, now in the process of compiling an estimate of the damage, say 75,000,000 bushels of wheat may have fallen prey to the August frost siege.

If the Bureau of Statistics report to be issued Thursday bears that out, it would mean that prairie farmers, shippers and the Canadian Wheat Board would stand to lose, combined, an estimated $140,000,000 or more at current wheat prices.

It would reduce Canada's previous estimate of 544,000,000 bushels—third largest in history—to 469,000,000.

A crop of 469,000,000 bushels is not to be sneezed at. It is better than the long-range average of 400,000,000 bushels, but frost, combined with wind damage, is expected to turn a chunk of it into poor-class wheat —the kind of wheat that is fit for livestock feed, but not human consumption.

At current prices, No. 1 Northern wheat would provide farmers with an initial payment of $1.40 a bushel for wheat delivered at Fort William, Port Arthur, Vancouver or Churchill. But the poorer grades of wheat—such as grades No. 4, 5 and 6—would bring the farmer less than $1.

Extent of this poor wheat turnout is not known. Some reports reaching Ottawa say it may total 100,880,000 bushels. This could mean another heavy loss of revenue to the western farmer and reduce his exportable wheat crop from the estimate of a bumper 544,000,000 to 369,000,000— just about what it was a year ago.

There are bright and dark sides to this wheat picture. On the gloomy side is the fact that anything that blights the hopes of big revenues by the western farmer also hits the easterner. The less revenue the western farmer has the less taxes he pays, and that puts a heavier burden on the eastern.

It means too, that the less money the western farmer has, the more difficult he will find buying the goods the east produces.

On the bright side is the expectation that the smaller wheat harvest will have a tendency to boost the international price market and therefore the farmer may get more for a bushel of wheat than he had previously anticipated.

R.C.N. Chaplains Join Flotilla In Korean Waters

Ottawa, Sept. 12 (CP)—Two R.C.N. chaplains' chaplains have arrived in Japan and have joined the Canadian flotilla of three destroyers which is operating in Korean waters, it was announced at headquarters today.

The two men are Horatio Todd of Ottawa and Halifax, Protestant chaplain, and Richard M. Ward of Toronto, Roman Catholic chaplain.

Padre Todd was a resident of Ottawa before joining the navy in July, 1943. During the war he served on both coasts and spent a period at sea in the frigate Antigonish. He was demobilized in 1946, but re-entered the navy two years later, serving at Cornwallis, N.S., and Halifax, where his family now lives.

Father Ward, a native of Toronto, joined the navy in July, 1944, has served on both coasts and at headquarters, as well as in the aircraft carriers Warrior and Magnificent. He was in the latter as staff chaplain to the senior naval officer afloat before being appointed to the Far East.

DO NOT EXAGGERATE

Dublin, Sept. 12 (Reuters) — More than 200 delegates from 37 countries urged at the inter-parliamentary union conference here yesterday that the part played by military operations and so-called "religious war" should not be exaggerated in teaching history. They unanimously passed a resolution which said greater attention should be paid to the history of civilization, of philosophical ideas, art, technical progress and culture in general.

MAY MAKE FORTUNE

Hayle, Cornwall, England, Sept. 12 (Reuters)—John Christopher c Lissadel hopes to make a fortune from a consignment of earthworms eggs he imported from the United States. He plans to distribute stocks to farmers throughout Britain to improve their soil. "I aim to get millions and millions of eggs," he said "and shall offer them for sale at a penny each."

Blood on the Stars

By Brett Halliday

"A perfectly planned and beautifully executed job," Painter put in aggressively. "By someone who knew exactly what he wanted and where it was going to be at a certain time."

Shayne disregarded him and continued to look over his head at Voorland. "I'm surprised that you were able to deliver the bracelet today," he said. "Not much time for a check to have cleared through a Denver bank."

Voorland nodded in response to the unspoken question in the detective's voice. "My bank rushed it through by airmail. The full purchase price was paid before the bracelet left my store."

Shayne shrugged and moved around Painter to ask Dustin, "Mind telling me how it happened?"

"See here," Painter exploded, following Shayne across the carpeted floor. "You're here to answer questions, not to ask them. I'd like to know..."

"You'd always like to know lots of things," Shayne said over his shoulder. "Looks like they really cracked you up, Dustin."

The westerner nodded. "I went crazy mad and stuck my neck out a mile. Your boys down here play for keeps."

"Now look here Shayne." Painter moved around in front of him again. "That bracelet was delivered to Mr. Dusctin late this evening. No one else knew the value if it or that his wife planned to wear it tonight except you and that girl..."

Shayne put the palm or his hand in Painter's face and pushed. Painter rocked back on his heels and swung up a furious hand to knock Shayne's hand aside.

"You'll keep your big yap shut." Shayne told him with cold anger, "if you expect any help from me."

"But you certainly can't deny."

"I'm not going to waste time denying anything," Shayne broke in harshly. "How did it happen Dustin?"

Painter stepped back bristling with fury, while Mark Dustin gave the detective a brief account of the robbery. "I didn't see the license number nor any of their faces," he ended helplessly.

"There were three of them, you say."

"I'm not even certain whether a fourth man stayed in the car behind the wheel or not. But they knew exactly what they wanted. They told Celia to stick her arm out the very first thing."

"But they did take your money too," Shayne pointed out. "That looks as though they were just out for anything they could pick up."

Shayne had curious feeling deep inside him that the episode with his secretary was more than a game. He had a fair idea of the way Lucy felt and he respected her for it. Tonight for the first time since Phyllis' death it didn't seem wrong to have a woman in his apartment. He had tried to run away from Lucy but it hadn't worked; and she had tried to run away from him by quitting her job and closing the New Orleans office in a fit of rage but that hadn't worked either. He had persuaded her, by long distance telephone to come to Miami for a vacation and now they were here together.

Shayne took a sip of cognac and reflected upon the situation. A feeling of contentment and inertia possessed him. He had, no cases on hand because he hadn't yet decided whether to re-establish himself in Miami or return to New Orleans. He was thinking of calling to Lucy and telling her to hurry up and finish the dishes and come in to sit beside him when the phone rang. It was an old-fashioned wall phone and its ringing had disrupted his plans so often in the past that he decided not to answer it. He slumped deeper in his chair his angular face relaxed his eyes half-closed, meditatively sipping Monnet and consigning all telephones to the lower regions.

He wasn't conscious of Lucy's presence in the room until the phone stopped ringing. He looked up to see her putting the receiver to her ear. She said, crisply "Michael Shayne's office."

She listened for a moment turning her head sideways to look at Shayne. He looked back at her and tried not to scowl. She was still playing the game and getting such a kick out of it he hadn't the heart to scold her.

"Yes," she said, "he's right here." She held out the receiver. "He says it's Chief Will Gentry."

Shayne growled, got up and lounged across the room took the receiver from her and said "Hello Will."

"Did I interrupt something important " Gentry voice betrayed a lively and friendly interest in the feminine voice that had answered the telephone.

"Oh no," Shayne assured him. "That was just my maiden aunt from Peoria. You've heard me speak of Aunt Minnie."

"Oh." Chief Gentry hesitated a moment then added, "Yeh. Rourke was telling me a couple of days ago about that pretty secretary of yours who just blew in from New Orleans."

"Tim probably has her out tonight." Shayne said cheerfully. "What's on your mind, Will?"

"What have you been doing all evening?" asked Gentry cautiously.

"Eating dinner right here. Aunt Minnie's a good cook. She can do things you never guessed with a dozen eggs tomato ketchup and a couple of bottles of beer."

"Keep the recipe to yourself," groaned Gentry. "I just finished dinner and it isn't setting too well as it is. Sure you've been in all evening, Mike?"

"You can ask Aunt Minnie. I'll call her to the phone and she'll tell you..."

"That's okay," Gentry said hastily. "Then you haven't been on the Beach lifting a couple of hundred grand in rubies?"

"Rubies?" Shayne scowled at the wall. "What's up?"

"Some bird got beaten up and robbed of a bracelet about an hour ago. Painter just called up and he thinks you engineered the deal."

"A ruby bracelet? Wait a minute, Will. Is his name...? Lucy," he called, "what was the name of that cowherder we met in Voorland's place buying a ruby bracelet last Monday?"

"Dustin?" Lucy appeared in the kitchen doorway with a plate and dishcloth in her hands.

"I thought," said Gentry over the wire, "you said her name was Aunt Minnie."

"Dustin," Shayne growled. "Mark Dustin. It that the bird?"

"So you do know about it," said Gentry gravely. "Painter figures you're the only one who knew about the bracelet and that Mrs. Dustin planned to wear it for the first time tonight."

"So he puts the finger on me for snatching it?"

"You know Peter Painter" Gentry said. "Even if he doesn't actually think you pulled the job, you'll do for a suspect until a better one comes along."

"What does he want with me?"

"I think he'd appreciate it if you'd return the bracelet. I think you could make a deal with him if you played nice."

Shayne said, "Nuts."

"Sure it's nuts," Gentry agreed pleasantly, "but you'd better go over to the Sunlux and let Painter shake you down."

"Let him come over here if he wants to ask me fool questions."

"Wait a minute, Mike. He's ready to swear out a warrant for you if you don't lope over there pronto."

"So what?"

"I told him you were always glad to co-operate and I didn't believe that would be necessary."

Gentry chuckled and added, "Is Aunt Minnie afraid to stay alone at night? Tim Rourke is hanging around the pressroom and I'll get hold of him if you like and..."

"Leave Tim ut of this," said Shayne shortly. "I'll go over and tell the heel I gave up snatching rocks last week. The Sunlux?"

"Mark Dustin's suite. Is there a bracelet worth a hundred and eighty grand, Mike?"

"That's what Walter Voorland charged the sucker for it. It looked like junk to me but if Earl Randolph okayed a policy on it, I could be wrong."

Gentry said, "Give my regards to Aunt Minnie," and hung up.

Shayne replaced the receiver and walked back to his chair rubbing his angular chin thoughtfully. He poured couple of ounces of cognac in his glass and held it up to the light.

ALLIES READY FOR OFFENSIVE IN SHORT TIME

Defence Secretary Johnson Resigns, Marshall Recalled

Strengthens Acheson's Hand For Speeding West Defence

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—The resignation of Louis Johnson, United States Defence Secretary is seen by American and foreign diplomats at the big three meeting here as a move strengthening State Secretary Dean Acheson in his drive to speed up the organization of a strong Atlantic alliance defence force in western Europe.

President Truman's decision to name his former State Secretary, George Marshall, to succeed Johnson, reinforce the view that Acheson's policies now will have full and vigorous support of the Truman cabinet without the frictions and delays which have been attributed to the so-called Johnson-Acheson feud.

News of Johnson's resignation and Marshall's impending appointment hit the big three conference like a bombshell yesterday.

The sessions, which opened yesterday, went into their second day amid evidence that Acheson, Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Schuman of France are coming to grips with the key problem of the meeting—whether, when and how to fit German military units into the developing western defence system in Europe.

Yesterday's meetings, totalling about 3½ hours, were largely devoted to a presentation by Acheson of the American proposals for Europe's defences—a unified military force, centralized command staff and eventual supreme commander, and a maximum effort by the Atlantic treaty countries to get the whole arms production program in high gear.

This led into questions of how to finance the costs of arms output—with heavy American assistance—and of how to ease the impact of increasing military production on the European recovery program. Special committees were assigned to these problems. Likewise, a detailed study of German problems, particularly the problem of ending the state of war with the west German government and giving it more authority, was turned over to subordinates.

CONFERS OVER D.S. TIME

Toronto Sept. 13 — (CP) — Mayor Hiram McCallum said today he will confer with Ontario Hydro authorities to determine whether Daylight Saving Time, scheduled to end here Sept. 24, should be extended.

Robert H. Saunders, Ontario Hydro chairman, recently appealed for power conservation throughout Southern Ontario to curb the growing demand and thereby avert shortages.

Butter Output Declines In 1st Eight Months

Ottawa, Sept. 13—(CP)—Canada's margarine production so far this year has topped last year's figure by more than 15,000,000 pounds. The Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday. At the same time butter output declined three per cent in the first eight months of the year.

A total of 189,190,000 pounds of butter was produced in the first eight months compared with 195,745,000 in the corresponding period a year ago.

On the other hand 61,639,000 pounds of margarine were manufactured as against 46,043,000 in the first eight months of 1949.

Output of cncentrated milk products advanced in the same period from 267,540,000 pounds to 273,660,000. Cheddar Cheese production dropped 12 per cent to 68,607,000.

The Bureau reported creamery butter stocks at 67,713,000 pounds Sept. 1, well above the 60,638,000 Aug. 1, but below the 70,493,000 on the corresponding date last year.

Canada's Motor Vehicle Industry Maintaining Lead

Ottawa, Sept. 13—(CP)—Canada's motor vehicle industry is maintaining a hefty lead over production a year ago.

The bureau of statistics reported Tuesday that factory shipments during July totalled 40,131, a slight dip from the 41,383 units moved during June, but well ahead of the 25,383 units shipped in July, 1949.

During the first seven months of 1950 shipments swept to 231,896 units—a big advance over last year's 165,498.

Shipments of vehicles imported from the United States totalled 1,475 units in July, and in the seven-month period 11,825. Sales of British-made vehicles totalled 6,882 units, and in the seven-month period, 43,267.

Shipments of vehicles for sale in Canada increased to 36,857 units in July from 22,849 in July, 1949 and in the seven months to 213,357 units from 148,111. Vehicles for export increased to 3,274 from 2,534, but in the seven months declined to 5,388 units from 8,721.

PRICES EQUALIZED

Paris, Sept. 13 (AP) —Prices of coal will be equalized over a four-month period and prices of steel over an eight-month period under an agreement being worked out here by the six western European countries participating in the pool plan proposed by foreign Minister Robert Schuman, French officials said yesterday. France, Western Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg, and The Netherlands are taking part in the talks. Britain has not joined, but is being kept informed of the work.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP) —Synopsis: There was still no change on the weather map this morning. Grey skies continue to cover most of the province with rain falling in southwestern Ontario and at scattered points north of Lake Superior. Skies cleared in northeastern Ontario yesterday but indications are that cloud will return to all regions as the rain area moves slowly northeastward today and Thursday.

COMMONS DRIVES FOR PROROGATION OR ADJOURNMENT

Two Non-Confidence Votes to Hurdle

Ottawa, Sept. 13. (CP)—The Commons, driving towards a prorogation or adjournment which may come tomorrow, is expected to vote today on two motions of non-confidence in the government.

They were introduced yesterday by the Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. parties as the Chamber opened debate on the stop-gap "baby" budget introduced last week to provide interim financing for Canada's expanding defence program.

The Progressive Conservative motion came from J. M. Macdonnell, opposition financial critic, and charged that the government had "failed to take effective steps to curtail non-essential expenditures and improve the general efficiency of government."

The C.C.F. amendment, introduced by Alistair Stewart (CCF—Winnipeg North), added an expression of regret that the government had "failed to protect the people of this country from profiteering by the imposition of an excess profits tax."

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, was prevented by House rules from introducing a third such motion, but he called on the government to introduce a compulsory savings plan, place subsidies under essential goods, remove taxes which cause inflation and bring the country's exports and imports into balance.

James Sinclair (L—Coast-Capilano), parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, defended the budget and said it was obvious the opposition faced the task of criticizing an accounting which was highly acceptable to the Canadian people.

Gives Final Reading

Earlier, the Chamber gave third and final reading to the government bill authorizing the use of controls on essential materials and services needed for the defence program.

FIVE MINERS KILLED

Prague, Sept. 13 (Reuters) — Five Czech miners were killed in an explosion in a coal mine at Handlova in Central Slovakia Sept. 6, it was reported today.

Canada Under Present Circumstances Will Not Send Army Units to Europe

Ottawa, Sept. 13—(CP)— Defence Minister Claxton returned to Ottawa by air from the west today, ahead of his planned schedule, as Canada's delegates prepared to leave for New York and a vital Aid-for-Europe meeting of the Atlantic Pact's foreign ministers.

Mr. Claxton's arrival came as Winston Churchill's call for two or three Canadian divisions in Europe was talked about in parliamentary corridors and as reports continued that Washington would like Canada to send at least a division to that theatre.

Cabinet sources said, however, that Canada under present circumstances has no intention of sending army units to Europe and that the government feels the defence program already mapped out is about all Canadians will take unless the world situation darkens.

Mr. Claxton had intended to go to Vancouver and Victoria from Winnipeg and Banff but flew back to Ottawa this morning with Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, chief of the general staff, who left shortly after for New York and the vital meeting of the pact's council.

External Affairs Minister Pearson will leave this afternoon to lead a top-line delegation that includes his deputy, Arnold Heeney as well as Dana Wilgress, Canada's envoy in London and the man who laid the groundwork in Europe for Canada's $300,000,000 arms-for-Europe program.

Mr. Claxton's return stirred speculation about the possibilities of a meeting that, Mr. Pearson has said, will tackle the question of defining specific military obligations of the pact nations. Mr. Pearson has also said Canada may have to do more in the military field than present war plans call for.

Despite a call from Gordon Higgins (PC—St. John's East) last night for parliament to continue sitting until the troops-for-Europe question is carried, there was no sign that the government intends to do so. But Prime Minister St. Laurent gave notice that the house will merely be adjourned—probably tomorrow or Friday—and that it can be recalled at any time.

James Fosbraey of Napanee Condemned to be Hanged Has Been Granted New Trial

Toronto, Sept. 13—(CP) — The Ontario court of appeal today ordered a new trial for James Fosbraey of Napanee, who had been convicted and sentenced to be hanged Sept. 21 on a charge of murder in the knife-slaying of his wife.

Mr. Justice W. T. Henderson, who gave the decision of the five-man court which heard the appeal last week, said that in his opinion the trial judge erred in withholding from the jury the question of provocation in the slaying.

Fosbraey, 29-year-old R.A.F. veteran who comes from Sittingbourne, Kent, England, was convicted June 17.

He surrendered to authorities the night of last Nov. 28, a few minutes after pretty Mrs. June Fosbraey was fatally stabbed in a Napanee street. Fosbraey, estranged from his wife, had returned from a visit to England two days previously.

Accusation Denied

In letters read at his trial, Fosbraey accused his wife of having an affair with Stanislaw Steinbach, a Polish army veteran who came to Canada after the war. Steinbach, a crown witness, denied the accusation.

The crown called Mrs. Fosbraey's death premeditated murder and said the letters Fosbraey wrote from England were filled with hate for her. Chief Justice J. C. McRuer, the trial judge, ruled out a defence contention that an alleged confession of adultery by the slain woman might be regarded as provocation enough to warrant reduction of the charge from murder to manslaughter.

The Fosbraeys were married during the war. They met when he was taking air force training at Kingston.

McAuliffe's Fate in Hands Of Trial Jury at Simcoe

Simcoe, Sept. 13 —(CP)— The fate of Joseph Herbert McAuliffe, accused slayer of two men, was placed in the hands of his murder trial jury at 12:50 p.m. today.

A few minutes later, Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven recalled the jurors to instruct them on a point raised by Defence Counsel W. E. Ross after the judge had concluded his charge.

Mr. Ross claimed it was left open to the jury to determine whether self-defence entered the case even though excessive force was used by the accused. He quoted a law report case to support his claim that a verdict of manslaughter in such a case was possible.

Mr. Ross also claimed there was a "conflict of opinion as a matter of law" as to whether one of the citizens slain had authority to pursue and arrest a bandit which held up the Imperial Bank of Canada at nearby Langton June 21.

When the jury filed back into the courtroom, Mr. Justice Treleaven told them Arthur Lierman, one of the slain men, was justified in attempting to effect the arrest of the robber but was not entitled to "kill or harm" him.

"Is there any evidence that Arthur Lierman was trying to kill the robber?" he asked. "If it was in the robber's mind to do bodily injury, then (the argument of) self-defence is not available."

In his charge, he told the jury he found no evidence in the case to justify a manslaughter verdict.

He said "it is safe to act on your judgment" where circumstantial evidence was consistent and pointed to the guilt of the accused.

"When you find such a series of unjustified and unexplained coincidences, then it is safe to act on your judgment," he said.

"I do not see on the circumstances in this case how there is any evidence that justifies a verdict of manslaughter."

Arthur Lierman, 31, and William Goddyn, 24, were killed by a bank bandit, armed with a machine gun, who had just robbed the Imperial Bank of Canada at Langton of $23,000.

The Crown's case has been built on the testimony of 53 witnesses, many of them experts in various fields, and some 90 exhibits. A fingerprint expert told of finding the fingerprints of McAuliffe, a former army arms expert, on the windshield of the bandit's getaway car.

Early in the trial four bank employees and three bank customers identified auburn-haired McAuliffe, a resident of Windsor who formerly lived in North Bay, as the holdup man.

An identification card, found in a Windsor garage with a number of machine gun parts and bearing McAuliffe's name and finger print, was introduced as evidence over the protests of defence counsel W. E. Ross. Mr. Ross argued that the card was issued in wartime and was never intended to be used in a criminal court.

34 OPP Officers And Constables Receive Medals

Toronto, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Marking the first occasion in the history of Ontario that such service has been honored, 34 officers and constables of the provincial police force will be decorated with long service medals today.

The presentations, made by Attorney-General Porter, also will mark the official opening of the new Police College on Sherbourne Street, the former home of the late John Ross Robertson.

Formerly located at Ajax, the College trains police officers for both provincial and municipal police forces. It was established by legislation to provide adequate training in all branches of police work under provincial - municipal agreement.

STUDENTS SURRENDER

La Paz, Bolivia, Sept. 13 (AP) —A group of 179 students and others who barricaded themselves inside the 14-storey San Andres University for four days surrendered to police yesterday. A surrender ultimatum was sent to the besieged students after gunfire from the building gravely wounded Senator Waldo Belmonte Pool, president of Congress, and four other persons last night.

Bernard Shaw Gets Out of Bed, Condition Good

Luton, England, Sept. 13 (AP) —George Bernard Shaw got out of bed briefly today only three days after he fractured his left thigh.

The 94-year-old playwright's doctors issued this bulletin:

"Mr. Shaw had a good night and his condition this morning is satisfactory. He is able to move his injured leg freely and stood for a few seconds taking his weight on the sound leg."

Shaw fractured his leg when he slipped while prunning fruit trees.

FAVOR ACCEPTANCE

Cobourg, Sept. 13. (CP)— Employees of the Canadian General Electric plant here favor acceptance of a conciliation board recommendations for settlement of their contract dispute, officials of the International Union of Electric Workers (C.I.O.-C.C.L.) announced today.

The board recently recommended a reduction in the work week from 45 to 42 hours and a general 12-cents-an-hour wage increase.

The union said contract talks are expected to begin shortly with management. About 200 workers are affected.

FEDERAL CIVIL SERVANTS PLEAD FOR WAGE HIKES

Ask For General Increase of 23.5 P.C.

Ottawa, Sept. 13 (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott today said he proposed to recommend an immediate study of salaries within the civil service with a view to granting general pay boosts to meet the rising cost of essentials.

At the same time he told a civil service federation delegation that ways of increasing the efficiency of the civil service also will be studied.

He intimated there was the possibility of a cut in staff in prospect for some departments.

In a half-hour conference with the 17-man delegation, Mr. Abbott agreed living costs have climbed since April—the last time he was approached on the subject of increases.

He felt that when living costs increased government workers should not find themselves in poorer positions than persons working for private employees.

The federation, representing 60,000 of Canada's 108,000 government workers, asked a pay increase of 23.5 per cent.

Headed by Fred Whitehouse, president of the federation, some 20 delegates called on the cabinet.

They presented an 800-word brief saying civil servants are considerably worse off than they were in 1939, and calling for increases in the average salary of $360 a year. They sought the increases retroactively, but did not specify to what date.

"Extreme difficulty is being experienced by federal civil servants," the brief stated, "in obtaining even the bare necessities of life."

Federal civil servants last got an increase in October, 1948. The federation sought further increases in a brief last December, and finally was told by Finance Minister Abbott that circumstances since October, 1948, had not changed enough to warrant further increases.

At that time, the federation brief said, Mr. Abbott said it was fully expected that prices would level off and that there might even be a slight recession. The finance minister had said that if these circumstances were not fulfilled, "further consideration would have to be given."

High Cost-of-Living

The brief said the cost of living since then had risen to "such an alarming extent that large industrial concerns and others have found it necessary to raise wages materially, and in many instances with retroactive effect." It noted that the official cost-of-living index at Aug. 1 was 168.5, or 6.8 points higher than nine months before, when the last request for an increase was made.

Average salary of a civil servant in 1939, the brief said, was $1,056, since which time the cost-of-living index had risen 68.5 per cent. This meant civil servants then were getting the equivalent of $2,537 a year now.

The average salary for all classified civil servants in 1949-50, as shown in Bureau of Statistics reports, was only $2,184. This left a discrepancy of nearly $360 a year or 23.5 per cent, which the federation is asking be made up.

'Indefatigable' May be Withdrawn From Exercises as 5 Men Have Polio

London, Sept. 13—(CP)—The possibility that Britain's 32,000-ton aircraft carrier Indefatigable may be withdrawn from autumn exercises of the home fleet was raised today after discovery that five crew members have been stricken with infantile paralysis.

The men, all ratings, were removed to hospital with another suspected case. They had just returned from leave in various parts of the country.

Although none was dangerously ill, doctors and sick-bay attendants were conducting routine examinations to ascertain if any others among the ship's company of 1,400 had been infected.

The carrier was due to leave Portland Friday for Gibraltar.

In all, more than 20 ships will take part in the autumn cruise, including a squadron from the Royal Canadian Navy. It is not thought likely plans involving any of the other ships will be altered.

The Canadian squadron comprises the light carrier Magnificent and the destroyers Huron and Micmac. They will join the fleet in the Mediterranean early in November.

Canadian ships at present are carrying out exercises at the joint anti-submarine training school at Londonderry in northern Ireland. Before sailing for Gibraltar they will visit ports of several north Atlantic treaty countries.

Gen. Walker Tells Front-Line Troops Enemy Weakening

Needed Weeks of Stalling, Retreat to Build Up Power

At U.S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, Sept. 13 — (AP) — Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker today told his Eighth Army it will "take the offensive in a very short period of time."

In a fighting talk to his front-line troops, Walker said:

"Soon we are going to give up the attitude of defence which the delaying action has forced on us. As soon as we start forward and break the crust in front of us, the enemy will fold.

"We can feel a weakening of the enemy now.

"And in some positions they actually are pulling out."

The commander said there have been weeks of "agony and suffering" for the army in the long — but necessary — stalling and holding while power was built up to take the offensive.

By LEIF ERICKSON

Tokyo, Sept. 13 (AP)—A swift-striking United Nations task force rammed shut a trap today on 3,000 North Koreans on the northeast front.

The secret sweep by a composite force of Americans and South Koreans was led by Brig.-Gen. Gar Davidson, former West Point football star.

Davidson's speedy end run across what he called "Billygoat" terrain — or worse—sealed the southern gate of a mountain corridor northwest of Kyongju. It lifted a major communist threat to important Pohang airfield on the Korean East coast.

It was the highlight of the day's action on the whole 125-mile front, which was whipped by the fringes of a typhoon.

To the west, the South Korean 8th Division punched several miles ahead in their drive east of Yongchon. It has thrust 12 miles in three days.

Units of the division wheeled as much as nine miles north of the Yongchon-Kyongju road.

Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said the Allies still do not hold a solid line along the northeast front. It was breached last week by the reds. But United Nations forces can throw fire on any point, MacArthur's spokesman added.

North and northwest of Taegu, the situation was described as "continuously fluid."

Rushed Off Hill

Red Koreans pushed U.S. 1st Cavalry division troops off a hill nine miles northwest of Taegu near the Waegwan-Taegu Road. 1st Cavalry elements, MacArthur's communique reported, seized high ground "north of the Waegwan area" Tuesday night.

"They make gains and we make gains," a spokesman said. "They push us and then we push them."

The Naktong river and southwest front were relatively quiet.

In the northeast sector, the red thrust last weekend threatened Pohang airstrip. The communists drove a wedge five miles deep and three miles wide into the Allied line between Pohang and Angang, nine miles southwest.

"We watched the penetration and it gradually grew worse," said Davidson.

Maj.-Gen. John H. Church, commander of the trail-blazing U.S. 24th division, sent Davidson into the battle. Davidson led a flying column of South Koreans and Americans. They struck west from the Pohang area in a sweeping "end run."

Seal Northern Gate

A column of South Koreans already had sealed the northern gate of the mountain corridor northwest of Kyongju in which the regiment of red troops was massed.

A series of three ridges dominated the southern pass.

When the task force arrived, South Koreans already had taken the first ridge.

The task force rolled on and seized the second, but then found two red battalions dug in on the bare and flinty slopes of the third.

The terrain, said Davidson, "was strictly something a billygoat would have trouble climbing."

20 Persons Die, 2 Plane Crashes In Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 13 — (Reuters) — At least 20 persons died today in two plane crashes in widely-separated parts of Brazil.

On the northeast coast, near Fortaleza in Ceara State, a B-25 transport crashed in the mountains killing 13 athletes returning from contests in Pernambuco, Brazil.

There was no immediate word as to how many athletes were aboard the plane or how many crew members there were.

The second crash was near Nictheory, capital of Rio de Janeiro State on the southeast coast. Seven air force men died in this crash when their B-25 transport exploded in mid-air.

New Industrial Booklet Likely For East Ontario

Promotion of the Industrial life of Eastern Ontario was discussed at a meeting of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce Monday night. H. D. Callan, trades and industrial branch of the Ontario Department of Planning and Development addressed the meeting.

Callan said that people in Eastern Ontario were definitely interested in securing more industries, and his department was assisting. The tendency has been for industries coming to Canada to locate in larger centres, but many industries would locate in smaller centres if given the proper information.

According to Mr. Callan, plans are now under way, through the auspices of the Eastern Ontario Associated Boards of Trade to issue an industrial brochure. He said most of the boards of trade and county councils had been interviewed and had expressed willingness to enter into the scheme.

Callan stated that it was estimated between $8,000 and $9,000 would be required to carry on this program. Of this amount $5,000 would be spent on publication of the booklet.

The city of Belleville, through Mayor Jack Allin, the speaker said, had informed the Eastern Ontario Boards of Trade Association that it would like to be included in the Eastern Ontario area. It is proposed to have the area include Belleville on the west, Cornwall on the east and Pembroke on the north.

Music Hall Revue, Formby Here Tonight

The formula for George Formby's success, and he will give this away to any fellow professional, is that the next show must be better than the preceding one. This will be manifest when he presents his second edition of his "London Music Hall Varieties" in a trans-Canada tour during which this musical revue will be presented at Memorial Arena tonight.

Included are Mills and Belita, acknowledged today as Britain's leading dance team; Hershel (Jizz) Henlere, internationally - famous piano-playing comedian; Henri Vadden, Royal Command performer and Britain's foremost juggler; Harry Bailey, world famous Irish comedian and star of British films and the B.B.C.; the Carsony Brothers, top acrobatic act that have played every leading music hall in Europe; Roger Carne and his talking tom-cat, one of the world's greatest ventriloquist acts; Marion Sanders, lovely personality song-stylist and B.B.C. favorite. And for the terrific climax, George Formby, star of stage, screen, radio and television.

Prompt Action By Inspector Hayes Saves Child's Life

Prompt action on the part of Police Inspector J. C. Hayes when he discovered the infant in distress in all probability saved a three - months - old girl from choking to death in her father's car Tuesday afternoon.

The police inspector was walking up Front Street when he heard what sounded like an infant choking. He glanced into several cars and then found the infant lying on the front seat in a choking spasm and its face already blue from lack of air. He picked the infant up and cleared its mouth and throat with his finger after which it resumed its normal breathing.

By this time several women crowded around and offered advice but the officer held the baby for half an hour until the arrival of the father, Richard Anghelescu of Kingston.

The father said that he and his wife had left the infant sleeping on the front seat of the car thinking it would be all right until their return.

"If someone had not happened along and heard the infant undoubtedly it would have choked to death," stated the inspector.

Certain Farmer In Napanee Area Minus Chicken

A certain farmer in the Napanee district is going to be short one of his spring Leghorn pullets when he counts his flock tonight.

And that one chicken is going to be miles away from the balance of the flock but the party responsible for its disappearance is entirely innocent of the whole matter. It happened this way.

An eastern township motorist en route to Belleville to bring two girls to school at the Ontario School for the Deaf was passing through the Napanee district, when a slight thump was heard on the car. The only comment was that the car must have struck a bump.

But on arrival in the city they found what had caused the bump. They parked their car on Front Street and a store clerk happening to be standing in a doorway saw the dead chicken wedged between the bumper and radiator grill.

The woman motorist asked for a paper bag, picked up the chicken and placed it inside the car and laughingly agreed with the comment from a bystander that she now had her dinner.

Springer Cows Bringing $300 At Public Auction

That there will be a shortage of milch cows in the Bay of Quinte area in another two years if farmers continue turning off their young stock is the opinion of cheese factory inspectors in this area.

According to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture farmers in the area are taking their calves off pasture and selling them at community auctions in order to take advantage of the high prices offered.

Big prices are being offered also for springer cows with offers up to $300 being common by buyers.

In Prince Edward County milk production has fallen off very rapidly during the past two weeks but in Northumberland it is stated that pastures have remained green and cattle look well and are doing satisfactorily. Moisture conditions in Hastings have also been favorable and field corn has grown rapidly. Silo filling has already commenced in Northumberland.

Tomato ripening has been hastened by warm weather while a number of farmers have been seeding wheat, rye and even oats for fall pastures.

Windsor, Sept. 13 — (CP) — A well-placed kick last night by a 19-year-old domestic servant routed a youthful would-be robber who entered her employer's home in suburban Riverside.

Police said the only thing missing from the house was a change purse containing $1.

Higher Living Standard Seen As Greatest Factor in Holding Spread of Red Doctrine

By FORBES RHUDE
(Canadian Press Business Editor)

Banff, Alta., Sept. 13—(CP)—If you want to have things you must produce them.

This theme was banged out by Roy W. Gifford of Detroit in a session of Canada's trading position at today's sessions of the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of commerce.

Mr. Gifford said the standard of living of Canada and the United States is the highest in the world. Natural resources were not the full answer.

"Wealth cannot be produced by legislation. Rather, it is the result of high productivity, on our farms and in our factories. Unless the rest of the world can increase its productivity our problems and theirs will multiply. . .

"Our very greatness in productivity may be our undoing unless by some means the rest of the world can be assisted in improving their own productivity and wealth production. A higher living standard would be the greatest single factor in stopping the spread of communism."

C. Gordon Cockshutt of Brantford, Ont., dealt with Anglo-Canadian trade. He is chairman of the Canadian section of the Anglo-Canadian Trade Committe, and of the Canadian section of the Canada-United States committee, and a past president of the Canadian chamber.

Anglo-Canadian Situation

He reported progress in the Anglo-Canadian situation, but added:

"We Canadians believe that the United Kingdom has perhaps been too restrictive and arbitrary in setting quotas and in cancelling long-standing trade arrangements between our two countries.

"The efforts of the Anglo-Canadian Trade Committee have been directed toward breaking down these trade restrictions and in working toward freer trade, primarily in agricultural products.

"We believe, however, that greater interest should be directed to the subject of sales of Canadian manufactured goods in the U.N.

"We believe, however, that greater interest should be directed to the subject of sales of Canadian manufactured goods in the United Kingdom.

"The position in which the Canadian manufacturer attempting to sell to the United Kingdom today finds himself is a matter which should be of grave concern to both countries. Had it not been for the present increase in industrial mobilization for defence, we believe it would have been possible for the United Kingdom to have lifted many of the obstructions which had restricted the sale of Canadian goods in the United Kingdom.

Defence Programs

"Unquestionably, defence mobilization will curtail the amount of British products available in Canadian markets, and in the days to come various forms of United Kingdom dollar position.

"However, no Canadian viewing the long range prospect of trade between the two countries can help realizing that the future of this country will be closely related economically with that of the United Kingdom, and that the efforts of such organizations as the Anglo-Canadian Trade Committee to meet the problem, must be vigorously maintained by Canadian business men. . .

"It seems inevitable that the English - speaking world will eventually co-ordinate their production and consumption, that their living standards will be comparable and that in this closely-knit world artificial restrictions must be eliminated."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 13. (CP)—Prices climbed steadily over a broad front as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Leading industrial stocks paced the upturn, climbing to new peak price levels,

Volume for the first three hours was 1,208,000 shares.

Gains ranged from fractions to a point over a wide list of lead industrials. The group has been held in a comparatively narrow price path in previous sessions this week following a strong advance last Friday.

Base metals chalked up a four successive session of advance but the climb encounter some resistance. Mild profit-taking at times reduced gains but fresh bursts of demand again boosted the list into the new high average price territory. Key stocks like Consolidated Smelters, Hudson Bay were on the upturn.

Leading Junior Gold producers chalked gains ranging to 15 cents in brisk dealings. Seniors added fractions.

Windsor Considers Civil Defence

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 13 (CP)—Mayor Arthur J. Reaume, returning from Ottawa meetings with civil defence authorities, said last night that Windsor is "almost assured" of getting a well-qualified man to conduct defence planning in this Border city.

He said results of a talk with Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, civil defence co-ordinator, were "very good." Further instructions would come from Ottawa in the near future.

The person being considered for Windsor's civil defence had been a defence director during Second World War air attacks in Britain, Mayor Reaume said. He is now living in Montreal.

The mayor said that Maj.-Gen. Worthington will visit Windsor Sept. 28 to meet civic and industrial leaders and discuss ideas for over-all civil defence in Canada.

ACTION STARTS STRIKE;

London, Sept. 13. (Reuters)—London Bus garage today took on two new female conductors and started a strike of drivers and conductors which may cripple the city's public transport system.

So far only one garage, where the girls were engaged, was affected. About 650 men stopped work and 100 buses were idle on three routes—two of them through the heart of London.

Busmen contend their wages are so low that only women can accept the terms offered.

OVEREATING CAUSE OF OVERWEIGHT

Increasing evidence has been revealed that the sole cause of obesity is a caloric intake in excess of the bodily requirements, says Dr. D. E. Roger of Regina, Sask., in an article in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. A condensed version of Dr. Roger's technical contribution has been released by the Health League of Canada.

The doctor quotes authorities as concluding that obesity, the state of being overweight, is caused by overeating with six causes of the practice, namely (1) inculcation of the habit by an overzealous or misguided mother; (2) the gratification obtained from the flavors of foods; (3) the feeling of repose and comfort produced by the full stomach; (4) temporary respite from difficulties obtained by indulging in food; (5) an unchanged appetite in persons whose calorie need is lessened by illness; and (6) food habits of youth, when the requirements are greatest, are sometimes retained through adult life when requirements are less and thus result in obesity.

The use of a positive rather than a negative approach to any diet is preferable, writes Doctor Roger. The more normal the diet can be the better the psychological effect. The less the patient talks and thinks about food, the easier it will be for him to adhere to the diet.

The writer remarks on food fallacies that abound, the nine most common being (1) the "no breakfast" or "poor breakfast" habit; (2) that brown bread has fewer calories than white; (3) that margarine is inferior to butter; (4) (4) the misuse of mineral oil in the preparation of foods; (5 that honey is a natural sugar and consequently has no calorie value; (6) that melba toast has fewer calories than bread; (7) that water makes them fat; (8) that the odors from cooking make them fat; (9) that pills or exercise alone will reduce weight.

In a reducing diet, the trend is away from the tough or starvation type of diet.

As for the value of exercise in reducing, Dr. Roger quotes one authority as stating one must walk 36 miles to lose one pound of weight.

BERNARD SHAW INJURED

Few if any writers of this or any age or language have been better known in their time than George Bernard Shaw, Irish playwright and critic of the theatre, music and art and of the problems of his time. Many of his views meet with opposition but even his critics recognize the brilliant and clear quality of his mind. He is known in the English-speaking world and on the Continent of Europe as a successful playwright with scores of successes to his name. With the natural wit of the Irish in his makeup there is keenness as well as brilliance of expression about all his work which puts him in a class by himself. No one is just like Shaw. Critics believe some of his great plays will endure long after the age for which he wrote has passed away.

It came to great numbers of people as a shock to learn that the playwright and critic of his times had fallen in his garden on Monday and fractured his thigh bone.

On account of his great age, 94 years, such an injury is very serious but even in his plight he had carried to the hospital with him a number of books to engage his attention while recovering.

Early reports indicate that he came remarkable well through the operation to set the limb, "very perky" a statement said. His mental keenness is as alert as ever in spite of the serious nature of his injury.

Admirers of his works are legion in Europe and America. He is a successful man of letters, who stands alone in his own class by the very nature of his keen observation and wit and his range of interest. Brilliant wit and imagination join in his work.

The world admires the stricken man who faces his injury with his mind unusually bright. Mind indeed seems in his case to triumph over the body.

Those who know his works and even those who know him only by name and reputation will hope and pray for the aged man's recovery. His spirit in the hospital where he is in his bed waiting for recovery wins admiration. His keenness of interest seems undimmed.

Since the death of his wife some years ago Shaw has led a rather lonely life in England where he long ago made his home but though lonely he has continued to take a keen interest in observing and criticizing the times. Yet he is one of the best known men in the world for his originality of opinion and expression and for the wide range of his interest in the passing scene.

One of the most wonderful things in nature is a glance of the eye, it transcends speed; it is the bodily symbol of identity. — Ralph Waldo Emerson.

JUST FOLKS

GROWN UP

"When you've grown up." I chanced to say,
His question floored me flat.
"Does 'grown up' mean I mustn't play?"
How would you answer that?
What say to an inquiring lad,
"Does 'grown up' mean I must be sad?

"Does 'grown up' mean that I can do
Exactly as I please,
And when I am as old as you
Sit down and take my ease?"
"No! No! I said, "when time has flown
I'm sure you will have wiser grown.

"Not all the time will you be sad,
Nor all the time be gay.
You'll understand both good and bad
More surely, I would say,
And you will scarcely feel the touch
Of what upsets you now so much.

"That temper you so quickly lose,
You will have learned to keep.
There will be times when you will choose
To laugh when now you weep.
You will be braver, fairer, too,
When 'grown up' can be said of you."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Deafness has lost some if not much of its most depressing features, thanks to the electric hearing aids that are part of the treasure of this wonderful half century.

"As soon as they perfect the things to the point where we don't get the sounds of our clothing," stated a deaf friend, "I, for one, will be eminently satisfied."

This man was middle-aged before he lost his hearing. While he laments his loss, he is able to be philosophic about it, and to see what advantages there are in his affliction.

"The world," he says, "was getting to be a pretty noisy and tiresome place by the time I went deaf. It was not merely radio loudspeakers, traffic, industry, that was growing noisier, as I recall it. It seemed to me people were doing a lot more talking than formerly; or else a lot more people were feeling free to talk. Yacketty, yacketty, clacketty, slacketty: that was the world around me. I sometimes suspect I lost my hearing not through the illness the doctors accuse, but through unconscious volition.

"Now, in the first place, I don't mind in the least wearing this contraption around my neck and in my ear. For one thing, it spares me a lot of idle blather. Any number of people shy off from me when they see this wire. But what is worth hearing, and what I want to hear, I can hear perfectly.

"What is more, I can retire whenever I like from any situation by a mere flick of the finger. If I want to read, think, reflect, I can move into a solitude that no longer holds any fears for me. The rest of the community can be run ragged by radio, by children, by blather: I am at peace.

"If I make mistakes, every one excuses me. In fact, if I want to make a mistake, I can do so, knowing I will be excused. All in all, I'm not too badly off."

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE ONE CHANCE

Many years ago an elderly woman lay at the point of death. The doctor assured the members of her family that her illness was so severe as clearly to indicate approaching death. He declared, however, that is such cases it was the practice among physicians to administer certain extreme remedies. He warned the family that there was certainly no more than one chance in a hundred that these remedies would produce beneficial effects.

But they did. The woman recovered and lived for eleven years. Some physicians probably would not have bothered, feeling certain that the patient was going to die anyway. They might have reasoned that one chance in a hundred is scarcely worth taking.

But one chance in a hundred is worth taking if something very important is at stake. History is filled with the accounts of how impossible situations have quickly been turned into triumph by persons who refused to accept the impossible.

When all hope seems gone and there is only one chance in a hundred left, let us never forget that one chance. It may not be much but it is something. And because it is something it should not be neglected.

Death of Smuts Removes Link Of Commonwealth

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The death of Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts removes the main link which has bound the Union of South Africa to the British Commonwealth.

Thus it should cause no surprise if the Union breaks away before long and, like the Republic of Ireland, sets itself up in business as a republic. This is regarded as a distinct possibility by well-informed observers. Official circles in London are said to be worried.

Smuts was leader of the United Party, which he founded largely to perpetuate the Commonwealth. In fact he WAS the party. Opposed to his program has been the Nationalist party which now is in power.

The leader of the Nationalists is Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan, a former clergyman, who advocates separation from the Commonwealth. Dr. Malan is a rather provincial and stolid figure who has lacked the colorful leadership of the dynamic Smuts. However. there are a lot of folk in South Africa who subscribe to Malan's policies.

Inside and Out!

There also have been some in Smuts' own party who, while clinging to him through loyalty and admiration, have had leanings to some of the Nationalist party ideas, including separation. It has been the field marshal himself who has held them in line.

However, while the question of separation is paramount, this is not the only great problem hanging over the country. There is the controversial policy of white supremacy and racial segregation maintained by the Malan government.

This racial issue is one of long standing, and its ramifications reach to far-away India. South Africa has a large population of Indians who have fallen under the segregation ban. The result has been the creation of bitterness in India and the lodging of formal complaints by the New Delhi Government with the United Nations. Thus far there has been no sign of any change of heart in South Africa on this point.

Whether Smuts' views ultimately prevail in his country, the Commonwealth has lost one of its greatest figures, and the world one of the outstanding statesmen of generations.

Letter to the Editor

Farm Woodlots Can Be Valuable

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Your editorial on "Woodlots" was revealing and very attractive to this reader, whose feet seldom stray from the 'pavements grey'. I was amazed to learn, for example, that "authorities estimate that Canada has 22,266,062 woodlot acres which yield a total income of $39,955,176. In Ontario alone, it is felt that there are about 8,000 square miles, or 3,120,000 acres of waste land that should be returned to forest. Of that total, something more than 2,500,000 acres might be operated in a profitable manner."

Subsequently I ran across the following related details on this same "Woodlots" theme, in a brochure published by one of Canada's great financial institutions which—in my humble opinion—is something of a conservational 'classic'. There is room in this little letter, perhaps, for two paragraphs:

(A)—Farm woodlots add up to 34,792 square miles, distributed as follows: Prince Edward Island 493; Nova Scotia, 3,243; New Brunswick, 3,455; Quebec, 9,317; Ontario, 6,039; Manitoba, 2,390; Saskatchewan, 4,010; Alberta, 4,261; British Columbia, 1,584.

(B)—This story comes from New Jersey by way of Forest and Outdoors, and has to do with the estate of timberland left his son and daughter in equal shares by a farmer. The son sold his woodland to a nearby sawmill operator for a lump sum of $4,200. Every tree was taken, only rubbish remained. The daughter called in a state forester who made an expert appraisal of her timber and marked about 50 per cent for sale. The marked trees were sold to the same lumberman at $31.50 a thousand board feet. She received $9,000, and still had an excellent grove of up-and-coming timber left on her land.

Thanks a lot, Mr. Editor, for a thought-provoking editorial.

Ontario's Feudin' Judges Still Not Talking

Toronto, Sept. 13 CP) — Ontario's feudin' judges are still at it. They're saying nothing to each other—and not much more than that for publication.

Most of the verbal jabbing Tuesday—second day of the McRuer-vs.-Schroeder battle — was outside the ring, among the spectators. Many weren't very sure just what to say.

The minor war of judicial silence started Monday with no advance billing—although it might have been heralded: "Who's going to try whom?"

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer, thin, 60-year-old top man of the province's Supreme Court, got back in town earlier than expected after presiding at the fall assizes in Peterborough.

Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder, suave, 49, and a former top-flight Ottawa lawyer, was here already, scheduled to take charge of criminal cases when the Toronto assizes started. But he didn't. The Chief Justice did, apparently acting on the tradition whereby senior men get the criminal proceedings, juniors the civil actions.

Declined to Preside

Mr. Justice Schroeder declined to preside over the civil actions and adjourned hearings indefinitely although litigants, witnesses and counsel were waiting.

It happened again Tuesday.

They made progress on the criminal cases, with Chief Justice McRuer presiding. Nothing happened in civil court.

Mr. Justice Schroeder stayed home. Said a bored witness outside the empty courtroom: "looks like the judge is on a sitdown strike."

Then Mr. Justice Schroeder went to the law library at Osgoode Hall.

Then he went into his own office. A reporter caught up with him there. Mr. Justice Schroeder's "no comment" went like this: "I hope you'll not think me discourteous but I feel it would not be quite right for me to comment."

Regretted Publicity

He regretted "all this publicity —but of course it can't be helped" and added:

"I understand the Chief Justice is not commenting either."

The Chief Justice wasn't. Others were:

Attorney-General Porter —it's up to the Chief Justice; he can assign another judge to the civil court.

A lawyer—"I think Mr. Justice Schroeder had a perfect right to be mad at being overruled by the Chief Justice."

The same lawyer (later) — "however, I think the noble judge should have sat and voiced his objection later before the Judge's Council."

There apparently was no rule on how to settle a tiff between judges, because nobody ever expected two judges would start tiffing.

Logs, Flat Cars Plunge Off Trestle, Fall to Highway

Longview, Wash., Sept. 12 (AP) — Dozens of huge logs and at least seven railway flat cars plunged off a high trestle last night a few miles north of here, crashing into a highway more than 125 feet below.

A number of other logging cars hung precariously from the badly-damaged span, and it was feared several might break loose.

Wrecking crews, working at top speed to clear the debris, said that as far as could be determined no automobiles or trucks were caught beneath the rain of logs and flat cars.

All of the logging train crew were reported to have escaped unhurt.

BELL'S PALSY

Sir Charles Bell, a transplanted Scotsman living in London during his professional career shortly after the American Revolution, was a noted physiologist of his day. I regret to say that since his time no outstanding improvement has developed in the treatment of the disease which he so adequately described and which still bears his name: Bell's Palsy.

Bell's Palsy can happen to anyone. Within the space of a few hours, a one-sided paralysis of the face occurs which affects only the muscles and not sensation. The muscular paralysis of one side of the face results in flabbiness of the affected side with loss of the ability to close the eye and a certain degree of "drawing" of the face toward the unaffected side.

In young persons, recovery is the rule although a year or more is sometimes necessary. More often, from one to three or four months is sufficient in time to allow of complete recovery. This state of affairs is no improvement over that of Bell's time.

Some causes of Bell's Palsy are well known—among them, injury and specific blood diseases as well as pressure on the facial nerve resulting from tumors. Other causes are less well known, but prominent among the presumed causes is "exposure" to cold.

The facial nerve is encased throughout a good deal of its length by a snug-fitting bony canal of the skull. Pressure upon the nerve from any "swelling" within the canal would seem unavoidable and indeed pressure from injury or tumor is often found to be responsible for the difficulty. It is less clear, however, that the nerve, protected as it is, could suffer greatly from "exposure" to cold insufficient to create any great damage elsewhere in the face. Nevertheless, a great many victims of the disease seem to have no difficulty in recalling that they were "exposed" to cold at some time previous to the development of the paralysis. This is perhaps not remarkable when one pauses to consider that a great many people believe that "exposure" to cold causes a great variety of disorders.

A history of "exposure" on the other hand is very often not found. And millions of people are daily exposed to cold who do not develop Bell's Palsy.

Certain types of neuritis have been traced to a dietetic deficiency of vitamin B (1). It has not as yet been scientifically established that Bell's Palsy is a type of neuritis due to this cause. It has further not been established that the injection of large quantities of this vitamin has appreciably changed the course of the disease.

Nevertheless, a great many victim's of Bell's Palsy are treated with sometimes heroic doses of vitamin B 1. There is no scientific, controlled evidence that these persons recover any more rapidly than those who are not so treated. It is possible, however, that many a victim thus afflicted gets a psychological "lift" from the injection of anything—ranging from vitamins to applesauce.

Various types of electrical treatment have long been used in this disorder—along with massage, heat and a great variety of internal "remedies." I believe that electrical stimulation of the paralyzed muscles serves a useful purpose in preventing atrophy or fasting, during a long siege of this illness. But I know of no evidence that such treatment has any particular useful effect on the nerve itself, although it is probably quite harmless.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TONGUE OR HEAD

Undoubtedly the head that we own is our greatest possession. Put to its best and highest use, it will guide us through life both successfully and happily. But there is a small organ, under command of this head, that calls for great control. I refer to this tongue of ours. How often it gets out of control, says unkind and bitter things that later we always deeply regret.

On the other hand, how useful this tongue of ours can be! It can say helpful and encouraging words that take rootage in other minds, often giving such ones a new lease upon life. The late Walt Mason was always saying kind things about people, and one day he wrote a poem about a man who had a "misfit face". He was so homely that when people looked upon him they stopped and yelled —but when they learned that no unkind word or ungenerous expression ever came from that face, they suddenly exclaimed, in the words of the poet, that "he was a handsome man!"

Some people's tongues are nothing more than trouble makers. They have the gossipy tongue, the mean and bitter tongue, with poison on its tip. Such people can never be happy, for they drive their possible friends from them, and plant many a hurt in a heart that never should have been there.

We can all think what we please, but if we have a wise head, we will put a damper upon the things that our tongue may say that might result in tragic damage to the life of someone else.

It is wholesome to hold our tongue, as the saying goes, until we have something useful and helpful to say. False rumors travel the tongue route, and it isn't a safe one. Nothing so disgraces the head as to have its tongue turned loose in idle and thoughtless words. If we can't say something uplifting and inspiring, then we ought to say nothing, allowing the head to retain its noble and natural dignity!

The head goes into an ectasy of joy and satisfaction when such expressions as these leave the tongue: She was so pleasant. He always understood. Love gave a glow to his face like that of a fading sunset. Thank you, and if you please, were words always at the tip of his tongue!

New Warehouse of Beaver Lumber Company Planned For Efficient Handling, Display of Building Products

Merchandising of lumber and other building products has come a long way since the customer was asked to plow through mud or snow to his ankles to view his lumber requirements in the lot at the rear of the office or to pick up other needs in a dark, damp shed.

The building trade business has indeed come a long way as is demonstrated by the new retail lumber warehouse of the Beaver Lumber Company, 101 Church Street, South, immediately south of the tracks at the C.P.R. station.

Measuring 88 by 180 feet, the imposing two-storey frame structure is the result of years of experience and planning by the largest retail lumber merchants in Canada. The combined warehouse and office was planned for efficient storing and handling of all lumber and building products and for the marketing of lumber in its best possible condition.

Started 42 Years Ago

Just a word about the Beaver Lumber Company. It saw its birth 42 years ago in Western Canada and has its present headquarters in Winnipeg and today has spread over five provinces. The Belleville branch is the newest in Ontario. Other district branches are at Napanee and at Peterborough.

Robt. Holmes, formerly of St. Catharines, and yard manager at the local branch of the firm, emphasizes that new Belleville warehouse was planned for the best possible display of lumber and other building products.

Ventilated Racks

All lumber is stored in airy, well ventilated racks for keeping it in the best possible condition. Trucks can drive directly through the centre of the building and are loaded and unloaded under cover. All lumber can be conveniently inspected by the customer prior to purchasing.

The showroom and office is vastly different from what might be expected of a retail lumber business. Inlaid tile flooring in contrasting colors, sets off walls done in allied products associated with the building business. Doors and window frames and other building products are displayed in a manner to give customers ideas as to how such materials can be worked into individual building projects.

In addition to lumber of all kinds for all uses, the local branch of the firm will carry builders' hardware such as hinges, locks, cupboard hinges and nails. It also has a cement agency with a good supply being kept on hand.

Masonite of all kinds, Ten test, asphalt shingles and all types of roll roofing, as well as window and door cases of all kinds and sizes are stocked.

Architectural Service

A service to prospective builders which Beaver Lumber Company is proud of is its architectural services which provides plan consultation at low cost. Through this service a customer can come in with rough plans of the required project and a few days later receive workable plans of the needed structure.

To acquaint Belleville and district residents with the merchandising service offered by Beaver Lumber Company, the local branch of the firm will hold 'open house' October 11th to the 13th.

During this period of several nights local residents will be invited to inspect the new office and warehouse of the firm and see for themselves the manner in which lumber merchandising has been "brought up to date."

Rev. Dr. C. M. Nicholson Succeeds as U.C. Moderator

Toronto, Sept. 13 — (CP) — A Cape Breton coal miner's son, who says he comes from good, Scot-Presbyterian stock, is the new Moderator of the United Church of Canada.

Dr. Clarence M. Nicholson, Principal of Pine Hill Divinity Hall, Halifax, won election to the church's highest post at opening sessions last night of the General Council's 10-day meeting.

At 46 one of the youngest men ever elected to office, Dr. Nicholson received 219 of the 336 votes cast in a second ballot. He succeeds Very Rev. Willard Brewing of Toronto, who had been Moderator since 1948.

Four other leading clergymen in the church were nominated. They were Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, council secretary from Toronto, Rev. Douglas H. Telford, Vancouver, Rev. G. D. Kilpatrick, Montreal, and Rev. John M. Mutch, Hamilton.

Native of Nova Scotia

The tall, new Moderator was born in the shadow of a colliery in the little town of Dominion, N. S. He was educated in Cape Breton schools, andd prior to entering Dalhousie University he had worked two years in the coalfields for his tuition fees.

At Dalhousie, he spent his summers doing mission work for the United Church.

Dr. Nicholson became principal of Pine Hill Divinity College, oldest of the eight United Church training schools, more than four years ago. Previously he held pastorates at four churches in Nova Scotia.

He is married and has two sons, aged 12 and nine.

In 1948 he went to Europe as United Church delegate to major church conferences. He attended the Modern Churchmen's Conference of the Alliance of Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian system, and the first meeting of the then - newly - formed World Council of Churches.

Following his election, Dr. Nicholson told reporters he feels the issue of materialism, secular as well as communist, to be the great church problem in the immediate future.

He had no step-by-step program mapped out for his two-year period of office but he saw in the Moderatorship an opportunity to provide inspirational leadership.

Dr. Brewing, the retiring Moderator, told the Council the Christian church should avail itself of its dynamic spiritual weapons and rely less on materialism.

Of the Korean War and threats of other wars, he said:

"It is not a quarrel between resistance and non-resistance. From the Christian view it is a quarrel between violent material resistance and violent spiritual resistance. Love is more dynamic than hate."

Nickel Workers Ask Wage Boost

Port Colborne, Ont., Sept. 13 — (CP)—International Nickel Company employees here and at Sudbury, Ont., want a wage increase to supplement their pay under existing contracts, union officials said today.

The announcement was made jointly by Michael Kopinak, president of Local 637, and Nels Thibault, president of Sudbury Local 598 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.).

Similar action is under way at the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company plants at Trail and Kimberley, B.C., the announcement said. Inco management has been requested to reopen wage talks on contracts negotiated early this year.

A substantial wage increase is viewed as a matter of emergency due to a sharp rise in the cost-of-living index, he said.

The amount of increase sought was not disclosed.

Canadians Can Expect Reductions In Living Standards

Ottawa, Sept. 13—(CP) — The Senate heard warnings Tuesday that if threats to world peace continue, Canadians can expect a reduction in their living standards with the probable return of price and wage and other of the wide range of controls they knew in wartime.

Senator Salter Hayden (L—Ontario) said a government bill to control consumer credit was "only the beginning." He predicted that if defence necessities kept biting into the consumer market, there would "be a lot more in the way of restrictions and control in the very near future."

In fact, he believed it would "lead directly to price control and wage control and all the controls we had in full bloom during the war."

Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader, said he did not think Canadians yet realized the magnitude of the situation. It might well be that they would have to "reduce their standard of living."

Senator Wishart Robertson, government leader, said Canada's present rising cost of living could be traced to the fact Canada's economy was "moving more and more toward integration with the United States." The prices Canadians paid for most goods were the United States prices, plus 10 per cent —the amount of the devaluation of the Canadian dollar in relation to the U.S. dollar.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) and Senator W. M. Aseltine (PC-Saskatchewan) also spoke in the debate before the consumer credit bill was given second and third readings. It will give the government power to control credit.

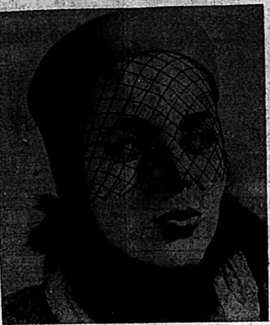
The Crescent Halo Toque



By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS NEAT and dramatic little hat is a knowing answer to blustery winds ahead, and is Mr. John's new crescent halo, in shape. Made of velvet, its sides are cut down in crescents over the ear tips, and over the veil too.

Bright or dark colors, with the black coarse mesh veil, and you can see how comfortable and nicely balanced in silhouette the hat is with neck hugging furs.

Abroad With Me

By Dorothy E. Futcher

Edinburgh, Scotland

At the Institute Hall we are received by Lady Minto, resident of the Minto W.I. You will remember she was a Canadian, an Ontario girl from Morrisburg, and her friendly greeting makes one feel immediately at home. About three hundred Institute members are present, coming in from many surrounding communities to pay their respects to our Canadian delegation.

I find the name Elliot is common here— and I am introduced to may of them. Lord Minto is a descendant of the same Elliot clan as my ancestors. Naturally I can't resist making this known and I learn much of the past and present history of the Elliot clan— after a delightful cup of tea.

Lady Minto formally welcomes us and tells us how her heart isn't entirely in Scotland; she was a Canadian first, and the thrill and happiness it gives her to introduce to her Institute members her own countrywomen. When we entered the Hall a corsage of white heather, for good luck, and rosemary, for remembrance, is pinned on and we wore them proudly. One of their members sang some of the beautiful Scotch songs we love, all of us joining in the chorus.

Lady Minto presented some of us personally with a Scottish Institute badge and on the card accompanying it, printed in gold, are these words, "A token of friendship from the Minto W.R.I. with its Canadian President and name linked so closely with Canada." The Countess of Minto is small in stature, lovely to look at, with a most engaging smile. She wore a small brown turban to match her dress and on it was pinned in our honor the diamond maple leaf, presented to her mother-in-law, Lady Minto, on her departure from Canada. She told me she has two married daughters, one living on Long Island, who recently presented her with her first grandchild, and two sons both serving in the forces in Malaya. So worry is a part of all of us, great and small.

The Minto Institute placed us further in their debt by handing us a small parcel when we said a reluctant goodbye. It contained a generous piece of shortbread and fruit cake. It was a wonderful afternoon and more and more we realize the respect and homage paid here to two great words, "Canadian" and "Institute."

Are you still with me, or did you drop off at luncheon? Am I telling you things you would like to know? I can't go into too much detail, and anyway that is wearying. We have as yet had no word from home—I suppose because we move on each day. Surely at Copenhagen there will be mail—we are getting homesick to know what is going on at home.

Did I tell you we were staying at a girls' hostel in Edinburgh. Cooks made every effort to secure reservations, but finally threw up their hands in despair, for Scotsmen flock to Edinburgh at Festival time. Miss Ferguson, secretary of the Scottish Institutes, took over and found us a place to lay our heads, thus sparing us from riding the trains all night.

Can you stick with me 'til the end of the day? I told you it was a momentous one.

Through the effort of Institute friends we have tickets for the tattoo that takes place in the esplanade just outside the castle walls—high up on the hill. The best bands of the British Isles take part, Scottish cavalry are there, giving added glamor. If you didn't have one drop of Scottish blood in your veins, you would be thrilled to see 100 Scotsmen all in their best, with kilts swinging, playing good old Scotch tunes on the bagpipes and 50 drummers thrown in for good measure. Up and down the esplanade they marched — until every ear is tingling. Foot soldiers come on in perfect formation and go through complicated drills without one mistake. Then several hundred in highland costume perform the very graceful sword dance—all this taking place beside the castle, illuminated in that soft golden light.

The whole thing is a picture just out of this world. And to fittingly finish this perfect day, over the loud speaker a voice repeats the words we all know and love:

"Breathes there a man with soul
so dead,
Who never to himself hath said.
This is my own, my native land," etc.

You can understand that no one was interested in conversation as we walked slowly home.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking ?

Watery cup custards are caused by the number one criminal in the kitchen—too much heat.

When milk and eggs are cooked together as in a custard, the egg proteins coagulate or harden slightly and thus thicken the milk. If the custard, however, is baked too long, the hardening egg squeezes out some of the liquid, causing the wateriness often found in this dessert.

Sometimes a custard will be removed from the oven perfectly smooth if eaten at once. As it stands, water collects, and the custard becomes curdly. This is due to the fact that the internal heat of the custard, as well as the heat of the cup, actually continues the baking process.

If the custard could be cooled the instant it was removed from the oven, the trouble would be avoided. Since this is not practical, the best plan is to remove the custard from the oven when it is still slightly underdone. Then the heat in the cup will continue the baking until the custard is firm.

To test the custard, insert a knife, not in the exact centre but a little off centre. If it comes out clean or nearly clean, remove the custard from the oven.

Banana Rum Custard

Preheat the oven at 350 degrees.

In a saucepan heat slowly 2 cups of milk until bubbles appear around edge of saucepan.

Beat 2 whole eggs or 4 egg yolks. Add 1-3 cup sugar to the eggs and beat well. Add 1-8 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons rum.

Add the hot milk to the egg-sugar mixture. Grease 4 custard cups. Strain the hot milk mixture into the cups.

Place custard cups in a baking pan with hot water halfway up the sides of the cups. Bake 30-35 minutes or until a knife inserted a little off centre comes out clean.

Cool custards thoroughly. If cooled overnight, they will keep their shape intact when unmolded.

Force enough banana through a sieve or mash enough banana to make 1-2 cup pulp (1 large ripe banana). Beat 1-2 cup heavy cream until thick. Add 1 tablespoon sugar to whipped cream. Fold the banana pulp into the whipped cream with a down, over up motion of the mixing spoon.

Unmold custard onto serving dishes. To unmold run a paring knife around sides of custard. Invert over dish and shake until custard comes out of cup. Spoon whipped cream mixture around custard.

BEAUTY

Hair beauty.

Like many other good-looks griefs, it is easier to prevent hair troubles than to overcome them. Given a loose scalp—one that can be moved freely over the cranium —a generous blood supply that moves swiftly, and a stable nervous stem, it may follow that the hair will retain its growth and natural color into old age. We are told that the glorious halo is closely related to the nervous system, strange though that may seem. High tension, loss of sleep, and malnutrition may take a toll. Molting may start: then there is grief indeed. Every year we realize more, and more that taking care of the health is the first good-looks duty.

It is interesting to look into the habits of those silky shafts. They do not continue to grow indefinitely. New hair grows more rapidly during its first two years, after which the growth will grow faster than the other three, according to inequality of length. Your topknot material extends itself faster in the summer season than in the winter.

It plays a continuous hail-and-farewell act. A shaft will come to the end of its days and fall out and a little soft understudy will appear to take its place, that is if the papilla from which it emerges is on the job. When the papillae give up, the result is baldness. That may happen if circulation is sluggish, though the actual cause of baldness has not been determined. It is known that when the hair is in a healthy state it selects lime, manganese, sulphur and iron from the blood, so diet may be a factor.

A beautiful head of hair will suffer from neglect. Unless it is kept scrupulously clean, it will lose lustre, and vitality. The hair stringy and rebellious. If you of hair, but few women these days do the 100 strokes every night, as did their grandmothers. If the hair is falling, brushing is most important. The bristles will not remove a live shaft; only the dead ones will come away. The sooner they are removed, the more quickly the new growth will appear.

Careless shampooing can fairly suffocate the soft threads; they will be coated with soap scum that takes the coil quality, from the permanent wave, leaves locks trums, won't stay put and looks find that your hair is having tantrums, wont' stay put and looks as if it had been basted, hie yourself to a beautytorium and have a professional renovation. ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Not all teenagers believe in "going steady"

I have always felt it too bad that modern girls and boys feel they must "go steady" with someone while still in their teens. To my mind, teen-agers are cheating themselves out of very important experience when they limit their opportunities to learn about different personality types by having a great many good friends.

Most of the time, when I express such an opinion, a great many boys and girls write to protest. They think to "go steady" is the only desirable existence.

So it's very pleasant to have a letter from two teen-age sisters, who enthusiastically agree with me on this all-important subject.

Their letter says: "We would like to let a few of your teen-age correspondents know that there are still some teen-agers who don't think about falling in love all the time. There are boys of our age, too, who feel, as we do, that teen-agers should have plenty of dates with many others.

"We met some boys not long ago who asked us if we liked to go steady. When we said no, they replied 'Thank goodness!' They said all the girls they were going with were strong believers in this steady business and they, the boys, were getting tired of it. You'd be surprised how popular we are with those boys and with others we meet, just because we aren't looking for a steady. These boys are not drips, either. On the contrary, they are very popular, and many of the girls we know envy us for our friendship with them.

"Don't get us wrong, because of course we look forward to a home and children of our own some wonderful day. In the meantime, why, oh why can't teen-agers forget about falling in love and going steady, and instead, date all the boys?"

I wish there were some way girls like these two could start a campaign to get away from what they and these boy friends of theirs call "this steady business." If the idea could only catch on, I'm quite sure there would be far fewer young people with broken hearts because their steadies tired of them and decided to go steady with somebody else. I'm sure, too, there would be more happy marriages, because both the girls and the boys would know better what sort of personality went best with their own, and they'd also know more about getting along with people.

In other words, by the time they were ready to marry, they'd have developed a good measure of maturity, without which the outlook for enduring happiness in marriage is very, very dim.

THERE'S a smooth line and an urbane look to the best of the new separates designed to do wonders for a small wardrobe or to find an impressive niche in even the fullest clothes program. Frances Sider, who does sun and fun clothes so well, has come up with some sleek, suave separates, interesting on their own, exciting when presented as a costume. The permanently mushroom-pleated skirt is fully lined, and the overblouse is snugly belted. The skirt falls straight and narrow and the overblouse has a high cuffed neckline and cuffed shoulder. The belt dangles a sparkling diamond-like stone. The fabric is wool jersey.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Quickly Mention Your Name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm always puzzled as to whether or not to introduce myself, or at least mention my name, to someone whom I haven't seen for some time, someone who may or may not remember me. Usually it seems to me that to introduce myself in these circumstances may appear very presuming, as if I took for granted that the person has forgotten, when perhaps he or she hasn't. What's best to do? (I was confronted with this circumstance quite often in July of this year when I returned to a small hotel where I spent some time last summer, and where I met some guests who were also there last summer.)

Olive M.

Under these circumstances and many similar ones, I'm 100 percent for a person's at once making herself or himself known—perhaps not so obviously as by a self-introduction, but by a gracious even though seemingly-casual mention of the name." How do you do, Mrs. North. I'm Sallie South—and I'm so happy to see you again." This makes it easy for Mrs. North's memory and manners—and she can at once respond with grace to the greeting and recalling. So how helpful this straightforward approach, instead of thoughtlessly leaving the other person floundering helplessly to recall the name.

Bride's only attendant to carry garnet rose bouquet

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just become acquainted with those little garnet roses, of the size of sweetheart roses, and I would like to have my sister, who is a handsome brunette, carry them in my wedding soon. Do you know this rose I'm trying to describe, and if so, would you consider them too informal to use in a formal church wedding? My sister is to be my only attendant. I am planning to carry a white prayerbook with a white orchid on it. Would you please make any suggestions about my sister's costume?

Florence L.

Yes, I do know these little garnet roses, and I to am enchanted with their rich color and their endearing personalities. They would be entirely proper for your sister's bouquet, used either alone or combined with a few stephanotis, lilies-of-the-valley or other small white flowers. I've seen this season a lovely shade, a pink-mauve, in both marquisette and in taffeta, that would combine most happily with the garnet shade of the roses. This exquisite shade is a particularly good shade for a bridal attendant, and with the garnet roses should be a dramatic combination for a handsome brunette!

Bride's charming bow to groom's parents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Am I right in believing that the parents of the prospective groom should receive an invitation to their son's wedding?

M. W.

Yes. . . .and here is a particularly gracious way the bride-to-be can make this charming bow: when the engraved invitations arrive from the engraver, she slips several of them in their envelopes, encloses these in a large envelope, with a high-hearted little note. This nice attention gives the groom's parents the comfortable and comforting feeling that they are thoughtfully included in all plans for the wedding.

News of the drowning of three-year-old Charles Aldershaw at Hanlan's Point on Saturday was received with regret by local residents to whom he was known. Capture That Delicious Plum Flavor

Plums in all shades of pale reds, deep purple-reds and dark blue as well as soft greens and glowing yellows, tempt the homemaker when she goes to market in September.

There is great diversity in the preference for various types of plums. One family may put green gages at the top of the list while another group feels that nothing but the Italian prune is worth canning. Some people know that the bitter tang of Damson jam is perfect for breakfast or tea. There is no reason why every family should not enjoy all three of these types as well as a few red and yellow varieties.

The larger and firmer plums are excellent for canning and all plums except those with very tough skins and fibrous, juicy texture will make good jam. Sour firm varieties have enough pectin and acid to make a satisfactory jelly of beautiful color.

These instructions come from the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, and will assure excellent results.

Sweet Italian prunes require very little added sweetening. For these a thin syrup, using 1 cup sugar to 2 cups water, will be sufficient. Sour varieties should have a sweeter syrup. Most people will prefer to allow 1 cup of sugar to 1 cup of water. If the syrup is too heavy the sweetness destroys the delicious plum flavor.

Canning Plums . . .
Hot Pack Method

Wash plums, leave whole or halve and pit. Bring to boil in syrup and simmer 2 minutes. Pack hot, leaving ½ inch head-space. Seal vacuum-type sealers or tin cans completely. Partially seal screw or spring top sealers. Process sealers or cans 10 minutes in the boiling water bath.

Sealers may be processed for 20 minutes in the oven at 275°F., but tin cans should never be processed in the oven.

Damson Plum Jam

8 cups plums
3 cups water
7 cups sugar

Wash, add water and cook plums, uncovered, for 15 minutes. Add sugar, bring to boil and boil 6 to 8 minutes. Skim off as many pits as possible as they rise to the surface. Pour into hot, sterilized jars and, when slightly cool, pour a thin layer of paraffin wax over the top, rotating the jar so that wax will adhere to the glass to form a close seal. Leave until hardened, then add a second layer of melted wax, again rotating the jar. Cover with metal lid or paper and store in a cool, dry place. Yield: 7½ cups jam.

Plum Roly Poly

½ to 2/3 cup sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 1/3 cups boiling water
3 cups halved or quartered,
pitted, sweet plums

Add sugar and salt to boiling water and bring to boiling point. Add plums and simmer 5 minutes. Strain and reserve syrup.

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar.
3 tablespoons shortening
½ cup milk

Mix and sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in fat, using two knives or a pastry blender, until the mixture resembles fine bread crumbs. Add sufficient milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board and roll in a rectangle ¼ inch thick. Spread plums over dough and roll like a jelly roll. Place in a greased bread tin and pour over the roll ¾ cup of the plum syrup. Bake in a very hot oven, 425°F., for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve hot with Plum Sauce. Yield: six servings.

Plum Sauce

1½ cups syrup from plums
2½ teaspoons cornstarch or 5 teaspoons of flour
2 tablespoons cold water
1/8 teaspoon almond extract

Measure remaining syrup and, if necessary, add water to make up 1½ cups. Bring to boiling point. Mix cornstarch with cold water and stir into boiling syrup; cook 10 minutes; remove from heat and add almond extract. Yield: six servings.

Fashion Flashes

STARTLING indeed is the combination of smart town cottons and furs noticed in more than one place this Summer. With a fine gray cotton broadcloth dress, one girl flaunted a long narrow stole of moleskin dyed a brilliant lipstick red—a real eye-opener!

NO SEASON anymore for the velvet hat which now takes its proud place as a year-round fashion. To follow the Summer velvets are colorful little velvet hats for Autumn Deep purple velvet for a tricorne pillbox covered with coarse navy blue veiling that curves from front point down to hug the sides.

THE NEW version of the Chesterfield coat is ever so smart. Usually it is three-quarter length with narrow raglan shoulders, and fashioned of such novel fabrics as fleece or a new spongey tweed.

COLORFUL CLOTHES mark the new fashion season, with emphasis on purple tones and on orange. Tangerine yellow velveteen for a pretty suit, the short jacket with narrow, set-in sleeves, shawl collar and gathered tucked pouch pockets. Gored skirt has a slight flare.

NEW NOTIONS lend interest to gloves. Fine suede in either pastel or brilliant hues for a glove with matching fringe in shimmering silk in an appliqued motif down the cuff and swirling from the side of the back.

LAST WORD in a travel or general-wear fur coat is a wrap of brown Persian lined with chamois yellow fleece. It is made without shoulder seams and the double-breasted closing can be turned back to make tuxedo fronts of the fleece. Collar is inlaid with the wool fabric.

2ND THURLOW

Thurlow Couple Feted on 35th Anniversary

2nd Thurlow—Neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grills gathered recently to surprise them with a party and old-fashioned charivari on the occasion of their 35th wedding anniversary.

The couple, taken unawares by the hearty reception, were presented with a silver bread tray, a silver pickle dish, and a silver cigarette case. Mr. Arnold Mitchell made the presentation on behalf of the gathering.

In addition to the group singing, a trio composed of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Grills and Mr. Manley Mitchell sang two appropriate songs with Mrs. Mitchell providing the accompaniment.

Readings were given by Mrs. F. Doxtator and Mrs. O. Stratton. Miss Sarah Stickney, who played the wedding music 35 years ago, played the wedding march.

Just prior to the presentation of the gifts, Mrs. Don Leeming read an appropriate address.

Mr. and Mrs. Grills expressed their pleasure at this heart-warming demonstration of friendship.

A social evening followed with refreshments being served. A specially decorated anniversary cake featured the confections.

Uses Borrowed Gun to End Life

Campbellford — (Special) — With a 12 gauge shotgun which he borrowed to shoot skunks, Jack Garneau, 74, of Trent River six miles north of here, ended his own life Monday afternoon. He had been in failing health for a number of years after suffering a stroke.

Garneau lived alone in one-half of a double house, the other part of which was occupied by his brother.

He borrowed the shotgun about one year ago from Jack Stephens whose four-year-old daughter occasionally went to visit him. Monday afternoon the little girl went to see Garneau. He kissed her and told her she would not see him again, that they were going to bury him. After the little girl left he apparently shot himself using a forked stick to pull the trigger.

Garneau's brother Napoleon entered the house to ask if he wanted anything from the store and found his body slumped in a rocking chair. He is survived by two brothers Napoleon and Oliver, both of Trent River, and two sisters, Mrs. James Cook, Trent River, and Mrs. Matthew Greenley of Smithfield.

COMMONS DRIVES

The Senate, keeping pace with the Commons, approved the government's plans to limit consumer credit and heard Senator Salter Hayden (L—Ontario) suggest there would be more restrictions in the "very near future" if defence needs continued to drain products and supplies away from the consumer market.

In the Commons, Mr. Macdonnell introduced his motion with the statement that the government was handling the cost-of-living problem with a "feathered duster" and that Moscow would smile at Canada's "complacency and self-satisfaction" in her defence preparations.

Mr. Stewart, producing the C.C.F. amendment, said the government should have imposed an excess profits tax and raised the personal levies on individuals in the higher income brackets. The government's financial policy penalized the poor and protected the rich; hurt the weak and exempted the strong.

Mr. Low felt the budget provisions were "just about what the present situation calls for" and suggested the people themselves could help bring down the cost of living if they would refrain from buying goods when they saw evidence of profiteering.

Mr. Sinclair said the government had avoided an increase in personal income taxes because it felt this would be "wrong at this time." A price control program, as suggested by the C.C.F. would be "doomed to failure" because the people would refuse to support it.

Plight of Apple Growers

Mr. Nowlan drew attention to the plight of Nova Scotia apple growers, now without overseas markets, and suggested the apples should be processed and shipped free, if necessary, to the depressed countries of Europe. The growers needed some advice and leadership from the federal government.

Mr. Gillis suggested parliament should have enacted stand-by legislation which would have permitted Mr. Abbott to impose price controls if the cost of living went out of hand.

Mr. Cruickshank urged the government to place a 50-per-cent tax "on the axle grease that is sold under the name of margarine" and said margarine should have been taxed instead of candy, chocolate bars and chewing gum. The margarine industry had put 500,000 dairy farmers out of business.

Mr. Blackmore said Canada never would accomplish what she was financially and physically capable of doing, on the basis of her wealth and natural resources, until her financial system was altered.

Mr. Higgins said parliament should not end its special session until it has settled the question of whether Canada should send troops to Europe, as proposed yesterday by Winston Churchill, Britain's Conservative leader.

Mr. Picard, while endorsing the government's defence preparations at home and abroad, wondered whether Canada could afford the $300,000,000 program to help rearm North Atlantic Treaty countries. The country might be establishing a "precedent" which would have to be renewed from time to time.

Mr. Adamson said the budget proposals would be "practically without effect" as a means of halting inflation and financing the defence program. He proposed establishment of a futures market in gold as a means to curb inflationary tendencies.

Mr. Wright said the widening of price spreads on low-grade wheat, coupled with recent frost losses in the 1950 crop, would mean a "tremendous" drop in the amount of purchasing power in the west. The government should provide compensation by increasing the initial wheat payment.

Mr. Hansell felt the budget contained "an element of strategy" in that it was "letting the people down easy". However, the going might get tough later. To combat rising prices, he suggested "severe penalties" be provided for profiteering.

Mr. Sinnott said an increase in personal income taxes at this time would have, as it did during the Second World War, discourage men from working overtime when full production was needed.

DEFENCE

Not Too Harmonious

The programs which Acheson laid down here yesterday and to which full British reaction was expected today—with the French to speak up probably tomorrow—represent the last joint accomplishment of Acheson and Johnson.

The two men were compelled to work together closely and frequently. On public occasions each stressed their co-operation. Associates less concerned with the outward appearance of harmony said that while they got on together personally in a cordial manner, distrust and suspicion hindered their relations.

Marshall is famed in Washington for getting his associates to carry the main burden of work while he sticks to high-policy formulation. He is expected to sponsor defence department methods much more in line with those of state.

When Marshall first became secretary of state in January 1947, Acheson was undersecretary and remained in that position for six months. He developed a high regard for Marshall and their association continued after Acheson resigned to return to private law practice. In January, 1949, Acheson succeeded Marshall.

The two men, therefore, have shared responsibility for developing the main lines of policy which the United States now is following—and over which Acheson, under the President, has immediate direction.

Diplomats, normally sensitive to any ascendancy of military influence in policy-making, feel no fear of that score in connection with Marshall. Rather it is the reverse. The recent incidents of Navy Secretary Francis Matthews' statement on preventive war and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's outspoken views on Formosa tended to create fears in the state department that Johnson might be swinging away from the civilian-directed international policies of the government into a tough-handed military kind of policy.

HOW TO GET QUICK RELIEF from sore, PAINFUL PILES

A Candid and Honest Discussion on a Delicate Subject

IMPORTANT! Here is frank information — in non-technical language—regarding an annoying, painful, often embarrassing physical condition which now afflicts countless thousands — you, perhaps, among them. Far too frequently this condition, at first superficial in itself, can be Nature's warning of more serious trouble to come. We believe everyone who suffers from this condition owes it to his or her own personal comfort to read the statement below. LEONHARDT PROPRIETARIES, LTD.

Since the dawn of civilization, medical men have been fighting a ceaseless war — to save lives and to conquer dread diseases.

When they discover a new "miracle" drug or surgical technique, the news rings round the world! Yet all the while, other "unsung" men of science are working equally hard to relieve suffering caused by less dramatic, "everyday" maladies. Among them is perhaps the most painful of all —piles!

A Subject Seldom Discussed

Pile sufferers are burdened with a double hardship. They yearn for relief, but hesitate to seek it because of false pride and embarrassment. Yet to the man or woman who knows the agonizing torment of itching, burning piles, the truth about their trouble may mean a world of difference in business efficiency, in social pleasure, in good looks and vitality!

What Causes Piles?

Piles are not a primary ailment. Conditions which cause them never originate in the parts affected. At first, piles are simply inflamed and distended "varicose veins" in the delicate membranes of the rectum. A common cause is hepatic congestion (torpidity of the liver) which results in ordinary, everyday constipation.

How Piles Develop

As the liver function slows down, blood flow from the lower bowel to the liver is retarded and small rectal veins swell with blood. Then, usually, constipation starts. Hard, clogging masses form in the lower bowel — irritating and bruising the distended rectal veins. Blood stagnates in and bruised areas, until the tiny veins become greatly inflamed, lumpy, horribly painful.

This agonizing pain aggravated by constipation, is "self-perpetuating". The constipation adds to the itching, burning pain and soreness—which in turn increases the constipation — which then tends to further enlarge the swollen veins until they become pile tumors. If this vicious circle is not broken, there is only one choice — chronic piles or the surgeon's knife!

Why Face This Choice?

Decide now to break this vicious circle! Many others have done so, thanks to an able professional man who, more than 50 years ago, began an intensive study of piles — their cause and effect. Knowing that piles are caused by congested conditions inside the body, he wisely searched for an internal medication that would relieve hepatic congestion, stimulate bile flow, gently ease constipation and improve circulation of the blood in the lower bowel — thus helping Nature herself promote a healthier condition in the sore, painful areas where piles are found. Finally, in his own practice, he devised a formula of medically-proven elements — small tablets taken by mouth — which showed amazing results in 86 out of 100 cases that came to his personal, professional attention!

Sufferers Acclaim Hem-Roid

He gave his formula the trade name of Hem-Roid — using it first in his own practice, later supplying it to friends and acquaintances. In 1904 he sold the formula and name. Since that time, millions of packages have been bought by the public throughout the world — and countless satisfied users of Hem-Roid testify to its quick, efficient action.

Accept This 10-Day Offer!

Naturally — long-standing, neglected cases of piles may call for a doctor's advice. But for average pile conditions, we know nothing better than Hem-Roid to give you the relief and results you want. To prove it, we make this special 10-day offer!

Now from any drugstore, get a package of Hem-Roid — 60 tablets, 20 full days treatment — at the amazingly low price of $1.50. Use the tablets exactly as directed for 10 days. If at that time you are not delighted with results you get, just return the package with unused tablets to your druggist for full refund of the purchase price! You risk nothing — and you stand to gain immeasurable relief from the embarrassing discomfort and torment of itching, burning piles. Ask for Hem-Roid —today!

Film Shown Kiwanians Deals With People Over 45 Years Old Denied Work Because of Age

"Why should an intelligent business transaction be frustrated by one line on an application form — Date of Birth?" was the challenging question issued in the movie short "Date of Birth" shown members of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday noon by Mr. H. Reed, director of the Belleville Office of the National Employment Service.

The film dealt with the growing problem of Canada's "senior citizens", those over 45 years of age, who are being denied work because of their age.

In his introductory remarks, Mr. Reed stated that many firms are denying employment to men over 45 and women over 40 because they do not fit into the company's insurance and pension schemes. He pointed out that in the past world war, elderly people were brought out of retirement in many cases, to fulfill vital roles in military and domestic production.

"They did a magnificent job," he stated.

Mr. Reed quoted statistics to show that the older workers have greater skills than their more-sought-after younger rivals. They are more dependable, steadier producers, whose accident rates and absenteeism records are far better than those of younger workers.

Must have Co-operation

"We in the employment service of Canada cannot work without the co-operation of all employers," he added. "One third of the present labor force of four million eight hundred thousand in Canada is over 45 years of age. If these workers are not permitted to work because of their age, the remaining Canadian labor force must make up the seven hundred and fifty million dollars needed per annum to keep these people on pensions of $40 a month."

The film pointed out that the shift to new industries, the greater life expectancy, and the declining birthrate in Canada in the past 50 years have all contributed to the building up of an aging population which today is composed of as many people over 45 as there are children under 15 years of age. The seriousness of this aging population and its effect on the economic life of the nation were stressed. The picture concluded with a plea to employers to use common sense in the hiring of our "senior citizens".

Will Use Centre

The speaker was introduced by Cliff Baragar and received the thanks of the meeting as expressed by Doug Sinclair.

It was announced that the Kiwanis Club would begin to use Kiwanis Centre themselves with the first party planned for this coming Saturday night. It will all be very informal with members bringing along their own equipment for recreation.

The sing-song was led by Vic White with Phil Huddlestone at the piano.

Staff McKenna was chairman of the meeting in the absence of president Taylor Franklin and past president Norm Edwards, who are in Toronto for the Kiwanis Convention.

Wiser but Poorer

Frustration and Fatigue Mark Efforts of Reporter to Check His Weight on Penny Scales

By JACK BROWN

The other day someone said, "What happened to the good old weighing machines that used to be all along the street?" So the other afternoon we went out to see just what the score was with the skin-and-bones counters. They are still around, in case you're wondering, and many are still not very accurate.

The east side of Front Street is almost bare. The only weighing machine we could find was the big blue one which stands in front of the City Hall. It is the lone indicator, and stands as a tall blue sentinel for the tourists to see. So, pennies clutched in grimy hand, we tiptoed up to the monster, dropped in one cent, listened to the gurgles within, and read the indicator. It said 150 lbs., which seemed to be fairly close to the truth.

Only Three Agree

The east side of the street as far as Upper Bridge yielded nothing, but the west side was a jackpot. We managed to spend eleven cents on various machines, and only two of them agreed on the weight score. None of them agreed at all on the advice handed out.

In front of Reddick's bakery, we went hogwild. There's a machine there that will tell you the answer to just about all the intimate questions in the book. We took a flier on "Who will marry me?", "Am I too retiring?", "Will I have money?", and "May I confide in a woman?". We wanted the answer to the first because it's time we got to the marrying stage. And the machine said 'A minister or a justice of the peace.." Disappointing.

Some Sharp Advice

In case you'd like to know, the answers to the other three questions were: "More enthusiasm would help," "Enough to buy groceries, anyhow," and what was probably the most bald statement of all 'You might as well put it on the radio."

The bakery weight was 150 lbs. also.

That little show over, we moved along to the chain stores, where all sorts of things happened. At Woolworth's, the first try brought a weight of 154 lbs., and a little ticket that said 'You are inclined to be envious, but wholly without reason, for in many respects you excel those whom you envy."

That sounded pretty good, but the weight was wrong. So we stepped on the machine again, went through the motions again, and gained five pounds. This time the ticket said 159 lbs., and the advice read as follows: "You will soon meet a person who will have a very marked influence upon your whole life. You may trust him." Overjoyed, we went out on to the street again expecting to meet a man shoving $100 bills at us. No man.

Tries Second Time

Kresge's store was another disappointment. The machine was shoved back in the corner with a sign tacked on it. It was out of order, so we wandered into the Metropolitan. There, on the first try, we got Tyrone Power and a weight of 151 lbs. On this ticket the day was marked as September 8, which was only three days off, and the weight was within reason, so we were satisfied. A second try brought the same weight, same date, and Sonja Henie, so we figured the penny was a good investment. We quit there, because a man could go on all night with that sort of thing.

Zeller's was a flop, too. There wasn't a machine to be seen. And now firmly infected with the disease, we moved to Sills' book store and there challenged a jazzy green job that coughed, indicated 152 lbs., and offered no advice at all, no movie stars. Finally, we wound up at Schryver's drug store and found another one of those multiple-choice machines. The questions weren't any different from the ones we had already had answered, so we were content with the weight. It was 150 lbs., agreeing with the machine in front of the bakery.

We're frustrated—don't know how much we weigh. And besides that, eleven cents went down the drain trying to find out. The index and third fingers on the right hand are numb from contact with penny slots, and we have Mr. Power and Miss Henie to show for the efforts.

But we still don't know how much we weigh.

TROOPS REVOLT

Taipei, Formosa, Sept. 13 (AP) — The defence ministry said today a regiment of Chinese communist troops in Southwest China revolted last month and joined nationalist guerrillas. The ministry reported the revolt occurred south of Kinming, capital of Yunnan province, a hotbed of anti-communism.

SUE THE GOVERNMENT

Milan, Italy, Sept. 13 — (AP)— Relatives of Claretta Petacci, Mussolini's mistress, sued the government yesterday for the return of the Duce's love letters to her written before the two were shot by Italian partisans here in 1945 The family also demanded damages because the government had allowed publication of some of the letters.

War-Theatre Conscripts Can Join Legion

Winnipeg, Sept. 13—(CP)—The Canadian Legion has opened its ranks—although only after tempestuous debate — to conscripted soldiers of the Second World War who served in war theatres.

Delegates to the dominion convention here debated the controversial change in the legion constitution for 90 stormy minutes yesterday before it was approved 764 to 428 in a secret ballot.

Legionnaires who spoke strongly in favor of the move included Hon. C. Rhodes Smith, Manitoba's attorney-general and chairman of the legion's constitution and laws committee, and H. A. Newmark of Montreal, spokesman for the Quebec command.

Mr. Smith, who introduced the motion, said the move was designed to unite all those who bore arms in the service of Canada. Men conscripted in the First World War were Legion members and in other Commonwealth countries men conscripted for service were admitted to Legion membership.

He said men conscripted under the National Resources Mobilization Act who refused to change their status but served in action as conscripts were "just as much volunteers" as those servicemen who waited until they knew they were going overseas and then volunteered.

Not Consistent is Claim

Mr. Newmark charged that delegates opposing the move were being inconsistent. Monday they had urged the government to implement conscription.

He claimed N.R.M.A. men had "exhibited appalling ignorance of what the law required" and were provided with little opportunity to get this information.

"If they had understood they would have been prepared to do their duty," he said.

Those who went overseas and saw action were "not less resolute" in facing the enemy than volunteers.

T. Poolton of Kapuskasing, Ont., said he did not want "men who lay around Canada for 3½ years admitted to the Legion."

Ray Mann of Brantford, Ont., said the Legion "will invite disintegration by accepting to membership men who dishonored their country by failing to offer the same sacrifice as those now buried in foreign soil."

An amendment proposed by Bob MacNicol of Gibson, B.C., asking a secret ballot be taken of the entire membership, was voted down.

Dionne Quints Have New Pet, A Young Fawn

Callander, Sept. 13—(CP)—The Dionne quintuplets have a new pet—Bambi, a three-month-old fawn that a neighbor found tangled in a wire fence near here.

Oliva Dionne said Tuesday night his five 16-year-old daughters are more excited about Bambi than about their trip to New York next month. But chances are, he said, that Cecile, Annette, Yvonne, Marie and Emilie will start talking more about New York as the big date draws near.

They will be guests at a dinner Oct. 19 by the Alfred E. Smith Memorial Foundation. Cardinal Spellman arranged the visit. The quints will share the spotlight with U.S. Vice-President Barkley.

Meanwhile, at the quints' home here in northern Ontario, Bambi gets all the attention. Badly cut and near starvation when freed from the bushland fence three weeks ago, the fawn has been nursed back to health. Its home is the lawn in front of the Dionne house. Papa Dionne has tied up his dogs.

Mr. Dionne denied reports that there has been any dispute between him and his daughters about where they should buy their clothes for the New York trip.

"There never was any question about it," he said. Evening gowns of pale blue taffeta are among the clothes purchased — in nearby North Bay—for the trip.

Won't Have Time

Said Mr. Dionne of reports that the quints were holding out for a Fifth Avenue shopping spree:

"They won't have any time to buy new clothes in New York. Besides, we couldn't take a chance with the crowds in the stores."

Mr. Dionne will accompany his daughters. Also in the party, to be chaperoned by two of the nuns at the school the quints attend, will include the 10 girls with whom the Dionnes take classes.

They will arrive in New York the night of Oct. 18. After the dinner Oct. 19 they'll remain a few days "to see the sights." Mr. Dionne said he thinks the quints will stay at a New York convent.

He said Cardinal Spellman has written, approving a suggestion that the quints take part in a Holy Hour while in New York. It will be at 5.30 p.m. Oct. 20 at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The prayer to Mary, Mother of Sorrows will be among those recited.

West Germany Tries to Restore German Science

By JOHN EARLE

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 13 — (Reuters)—West Germany is striving, with limited means, to restore German science to the pre-eminent position it once occupied in the world.

The general disintegration of national life which followed the Second World War dragged science into a state of stagnation. Trade and research came to a standstill. Priceless equipment was destroyed and valuable patents confiscated by the victors.

To focus public attention on the present resurgence, a "week of German science" was held at Bonn early in August. Scientific associations, rectors of universities and professors from all parts of west Germany took part.

Prominent among the associations was the "Emergency Society of German Science," re-established in January, 1949, "to avert the danger of a total breakdown of scientific research in Germany."

Its members are a cross-section of national scientific life and include the universities of the western zones—it is not represented in the Soviet zone.

During "Science Week" it was announced that the United States, through the Marshall Plan, would give directly to west German agriculture 20,000,000 marks ($5,136,000). This money is not only to be used for specific scientific research projects but also for long-term plans to build new agricultural institutes and schools. It will also largely be applied with a view to benefitting west Germany's export trade.

Picton Athletics will do the remainder of their 1950 baseballing from the sidelines.

The boys from the "Little Spanish Town" across the bay got the ole heave-ho when they found themselves the baseball pigskin used in a long forward pass tossed by the Ontario Baseball Association and its representatives into the end zone of diamond oblivion.

And as a result the Napanee Athletics take over the Intermediate gonfalon of the Central Ontario Baseball League and meet the No. 6 Repair Depot this evening in the first game of the first round playdowns.

?..;fiz|) . . . 76*!£'fi|ff . . . @?!lb—J . . . fiff?£%% . . . Translate that into English, add the choicest cussword and you'll get a whispered idea of what the Yanover-Fraser-Church triumvirate think of the OBA, its conveners, the COBL and baseball in general.

And it all happened because somebody (guess who?) forgot to file change of residence certificates of Messrs. Jackie Wardhaugh, Dick Fitzpatrick and Johnny Dean, Picton imports, with that august body, the Ontario Baseball Association.

"We've been Pearl-harbored" screamed a Picton spokesman when he was informed of the fact that the Napanee team had been awarded the COBL Intermediate "." playoffs and the right to meet the Sixardee squad.

"It's a blankety blank . . . blinkety blink, blankety blank" (you may substitute the proper words if you know them — if not consult an old salt or an Imperial Army drill instructor) dirty trick" said another.

"It's all Killoran's fault" he went on without pausing to inhale. (Killoran is the Joe-boy mentor of the Napanee Athletics who does a spot of baseball masterminding between trips to Niagara Falls and his duties as a professor at the College of Applied Square-Dancing).

"Mister Killoran" he charged, "saw the handwriting on the wall. Picton tossed a scare into them in the first game of the playoffs and beat them the second game. He refused to bring his team to Picton on Monday because, he stated we had been using three ineligible players. He meant Wardhaugh, Dean and Fitzpatrick, because no transfer of residence certificate had been filed."

"Killoran further said," he went on between gasps of fury, "that Napanee had been awarded the playoff series and would meet Sixardee in the " " playdowns."

Then began the finest exhibition of buck-passing since Sitting Bull paraded his braves at the Little Big Horn before giving Custer and his cohorts, current hair-dos.

The wires from Picton, north,east and west sizzled. Telephones shrilled in the far-flung places. Automobiles roared out of the town to points east and west.

It appears the Convener, Robert Smith, learning of the non-filing of the transfer of residence of the Picton players, had declared Napanee the winners of the playoffs. Picton sought the offices of Bill Snyder, OBA secretary. They were informed it was the job of the league president to settle the dispute. President Bob Nesbitt, according to the Picton spokesman declared he could not act, because the teams were in Intermediate playoffs.

Then Picton went further afield. They sought the advice of another OBA representative. "Get your district convener to send me a letter covering the facts and I'll see what I can do," he is reported as saying.

This was duly brought to the attention of Convener Smith, and again according to the Picton spokesman, that gentleman politely declined to concur in the proceedings.

Again the Pictonians went to Mr. Snyder. They quoted the other teams in the league as having imports and filing their transfer of residence certificate at a date later than the deadline set. Batawa, they claimed had filed their TOR certificate only a few days ago. "Whatinells the big idea and why are we getting the brush-off?"

This department telephoned Mr. Snyder in order to get some order out of the argumentative chaos.

The OBA secretary informed us that his organization had given all zone chairmen full authority to settle such disputes. As far as the filing of transfer of residence papers was concerned he said "it is the same old story year after year. These leagues and teams in turn forget to file the certificates although they are fully aware of the fact that they must do so, let the matter slide until it is too late and then come screaming for help. Ignorance of the rules is no excuse."

According to Mr. Snyder, Convener Smith has the last word in the matter and that is, Picton is out of baseball for this season, at least.

But somebody slipped somewhere. The Picton management should have taken care of the matter, and the COBL executive or secretary should have seen to it that they did. But there the matter stands and Picton pays for its administrative shortsightedness, or that of the league officials.

Los Angeles — Enrique Bolanos, 137 1-2, Los Angeles, outpointed Terry Young, 140, New York (10).

New Bedford, Mass.— Don Williams, 147 1-2, Worcester, Mass., knocked out Wilbur Wilson, 149½ Boston (1).

Back in harness again for another hockey year, Bill Cook and "Toots" Holway have assumed their duties as mentors of the Belleville Junior "B" squad and Belleville midgets respectively. Fred Eigle will again assume the supervision of the juvenile squad. Manager Cook feels that the 1950-51 junior squad will be bigger and better than previous teams and will carry high the junior hockey banners of Belleville. "Toots" will again have his hands full with his midgets and expects a number of vastly improved youngsters to respond when he sounds the hockey "Fall in."

Cleveland Indians, Out of Flag Contention, Start Role of 'Spoilers' in American Loop

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

With big Luke Easter as the ringleader, the smarting Cleveland Indians are moving back into the American League pennant race in the role of "spoilers."

Knocked out of contention and blasted by their bosses, the Indians are out to redeem themselves at the expense of three remaining contenders — Boston, New York and Detroit.

They began to reap revenge last night by defeating New York Yankees 8-7 on a dramatic three run homer by Easter in the ninth inning.

The defeat sent the Yankees reeling into second place, half a game back of Detroit Tigers, who scored a 3-2 afternoon triumph over Washington Senators.

Cleveland has one more game with the Yanks, six with the Tigers and two with the third-place Boston Red Sox. The Red Sox, still moving relentlessly forward, climbed within a game of the lead by edging Chicago White Sox 2-1.

The Indians brought the wrath of their general manager Hank Greenberg, down on their heads by losing five straight games, including four to the lowly St. Louis Browns. He said they played "stupid baseball."

Out In Front 6-0

For a while last night it appeared that the Indians' losing string would extend to six games.

Home runs in the first two innings by Joe DiMaggio, Phil Rizzuto and Yogi Berra shot the Yanks off to a 6-0 lead. The Indians began their comeback with a run in the second against Allie Reynolds. Larry Doby cut the disadvantage to 6-3 with a two-run homer in the third and Easter socked his 23rd to shave the deficit to 6-4 by the end of the fifth.

Steve Gromek was touched for a run in the eighth and it appeared that the Yanks had the game in the bag when Jim Hegan grounded out to open the Cleveland ninth.

Reynolds Blew Up

But Reynolds, who had allowed only four hits, then blew up and walked the next two batters and was hurriedly lifted for relief ace, Tom Ferrick. Bob Kennedy greeted Ferrick with a run-scoring double. Doby struck out, but Easter then slammed Ferrick's first pitch over the right field fence to break up the game.

The Tigers had rough sledding before squashing the Senators. Old Diz Trout went all the way for the Bengals and permitted eight hits, while his mates collected only five off Gene Bearden and Mickey Harris.

Lefty Mel Parnell turned in a neat five-hitter in recording his 16th victory and eighth straight for the Red Sox under the lights in Chicago. The Sox now have won 24 out of their last 27 games.

The Browns, behind the three-hit pitching of Al Widmar, blanked Philadelphia Athletics 6-0 in the other American League game.

Roberts Wins 19th

In the National League, Philadelphia Phillies moved a step closer towards the pennant by nosing out St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 behind the five hit pitching of Robin Roberts, who attained his 19th victory. The Cards' Max Lanier surrendered only three hits but one was a fifth-inning homer by Andy Seminick who celebrated his 30th birthday.

The victory kept the Phils 6 1-2 games ahead of the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers, who collected only one hit in beating Ewell Blackwell and the Cincinnati Reds, 3-1. Blackwell lost the game in the eighth inning when he hit a batter, committed an error and wild pitched home a run that broke a 1-1 tie.

New York Giants came up with another well-pitched game as Sheldon Jones blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0. The shutout was the 17th turned in by the Giant staff this year.

The Jones triumph moved the Giants to within half a game of the third-place Boston Braves, who dropped a 3-1 night game decision to Bob Rush and the Chicago Cubs.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

Bill Dickey surprised the baseball world four years ago today when he resigned as manager of the New York Yankees. Dickey took over the job from Joe McCarthy in May of that year. The day before he resigned and coach Johnny Neun took over, Dickey had announced that he would definitely last out the season with the Yankees.

Broda's Cheque Will Depend On Avoirdupois

(By The Canadian Press)

The Battle of Broda's Bulge—one of the sideshows of the last National Hockey League season—is on again and this time there's money involved.

Last winter, Pudgy Walter (Turk) Broda, Toronto Maple Leafs' goaltender, was benched by managing director Conn Smythe with orders to get his weight down if he wanted his job back. The Turk reduced his poundage after missing one game and returned to the lineup.

This year, the Brandon, Man., veteran's semi-monthly pay cheque will depend on his avoirdupois. Before reaching for his pay, Turk will step on the scales. If he weighs 190 pounds, his contract, signed Tuesday, stipulates that he'll receive an unannounced amount.

For every excess pound above 190, the Turk will lose $1. If he can get under the weight, he'll get $1 extra a pound.

A comparatively-svelte 194¾ compared with last year's preseason poundage of 201, Broda announced Tuesday that he'd be down to 190 before the Leafs report at their St. Catharines training camp Sunday.

William Aytok of Skytop, Pa., competing in his first tournament for blind golfers, was an upset-winner of the Canadian championship in Hamilton Tuesday.

He carded an 18-hole total of 106 to edge Charles Boswell of Birmingham, Ala., the United States champion and pre-tournament favorite, by one stroke.

Dr. W. H. J. Oxenham of Toronto carded a 70-58 for 128. Canada's best showing was made by Phillip E. Ledderhouse of Prince Albert, Sask., who put together nines of 59 and 63 for a total of 122.

The field of 13 play another 18 holes today and the international championship will be decided by the lowest 36-hole total.

Philadelphia Phillies have called up three pitchers from their Toronto farm club in the International League.

Reporting to Manager Eddie Sawyer were right handers Jack Brittin and Paul Stuffel and southpaw Jocko Thompson.

The National Boxing Association has cleared the way for Sugar Ray Robinson to get a shot at the middleweight championship within six months.

Reversing its vote Monday to nullify a return bout contract, the N.B.A. convention at Detroit agreed to permit Laurent Dauthuille of France or champion Jake Lamotta to fight Robinson after a return bout. Such a return bout will be held only if Dauthuille upsets favored Lamotta in tonight's title fight at the Olympia stadium.

Lamotta already has agreed in a signed contract with the International Boxing Club to face Robinson at Chicago stadium during the second week of February if he still is champion.

Nat Fleischer of New York, speaking at the request of Max Waxman of Dauthuille's managerial board, said the Frenchman would post a $10,000 bond to guarantee a Robinson fight.

The Japanese government has decided to ban cycle racing, a sport which has caused nearly 30 serious riots since it was introduced into Japan only a year ago.

Immediate cause of the ban was last week's riot at Naruo race track, near Kobe. Police shot and killed one spectator and rioters severely injured a policeman and three girl ticket sellers when fans who thought a race had been fixed stormed the ticket window.

Ever hear of women boxing? Well they did in West Virginia and want no more.

At the request of the West Virginia Athletic Commission, the National Boxing Association at Detroit Tuesday recommended a ban on women boxing.

Patrick J. Beacom of the West Virginia Board framed the resolution which was passed.

One of the points raised by Beacom was that "such bouts... may cause such physical harm to the women boxers as to do great injury to the already sex boxing game."

Jake LaMotta Expected to Tame Tarzan Dauthuille

Detroit, Sept. 13 — (AP) — Middleweight champion Jake LaMotta is expected to tame Laurent (Tarzan) Dauthuille of France tonight in a promising 15-round title bout at the Olympia Stadium.

Back in the city where he wrested the crown from another Frenchman — the late Marcel Cerdan—15 months ago, LaMotta rules a 5-to-9 favorite. No knockout is predicted.

With radio and television barred from this international test, promoter Nick Londes of the International Boxing Club looks for a crowd of 13,000 to pay $100,000. If he is right, it will be a Detroit indoor record. The old mark of $88,522 was set in 1947 for a welter title battle between Ray Robinson and Chuck Taylor.

Delegates to the National Boxing Association convention, which ruled LaMotta or Dauthuille must give Robinson a shot at the crown within six months, will be honored guests.

The N.B.A. disposed of the LaMotta headache yesterday, at least temporarily by clearing the way for Sugar Ray Robinson to get a middleweight title match within six months.

Sign to Meet Robinson

Champion LaMotta has signed to meet Robinson in Chicago Stadium during the second week of February. Dauthuille, who fights Jake for the title tonight, has posted $10,000 to guarantee he'll also fight Robinson in six months. But if Dauthuille beats LaMotta, he first must go through with a return LaMotta match. He has promised to take both fights within six months.

A motion to approve this settlement of the LaMotta muddle was passed by the convention yesterday in its closing session, despite the objection of Pennsylvania's commissioner, John (Ox) Da Grosa. Da Grosa said Pennsylvania will continue to recognize as its middleweight king according to the decision it made in June.

Dauthuille's main selling point going into the LaMotta bout is a 10-round decision over Jake scored Feb. 21, 1949 before Jake won the championship. Operating on the theory that "I did it once and I can do it again" the French champ bubbles with optimism.

Although the Frenchman's European record includes two losses to Robert Villemain and a defeat by Tiberio Mitri, whom LaMotta conquered easily in his last defence, his North American performance demands respect. Dauthuille clicked off four straight 1950 knockouts, including Steve Belloise, Tuzo Portuguez and Charley Zivic. His only loss since coming from France in late 1948 was to welterweight Kid Gavilan. Making a required 154 1-3 pounds for the Kid was too much for him.

Ogdensburg Wins Over Watertown For Third Time

Watertown, N.Y., Sept. 13 (CP) —Ogdensburg Maples rode hard over Watertown Athletics of the Border Baseball League here Tuesday night to plant an 11-3 victory for their third straight win of a best-of-seven semi-final series.

Fourth game of the series will played here tonight.

Maples jumped into a 3-0 lead in the first inning, but had this margin shaved when playing manager Frank Heller of Watertown slammed a two-run homer in the last half of the same frame.

Maple pitcher Art Cook then settled down to blank the A's until the ninth, when they got their third run. Homer Weeks paced the Ogdensburg barrage with a homer, double and single in three official trips to the plate.

Eastern Canada Chestnut Colt Favored to Win

Winnipeg, Sept. 13 (CP) —An Eastern-Canada owned chestnut colt will go to the post at Polo Park today as favorite for the richest prize of western Canada racing—the Canadian Derby. Six colts and geldings and one filly are scheduled to go in the $5,000 classic for three-year-olds.

Sir Strome, owned by Joe Holbeck of the double blue stable, Toronto and second in the 1950 running of the King's Plate at Toronto, will be odds-on choice over a muddy track. Sir Strome gained prominence last week when he copped Whittier Park Handicap at a mile and 70 yards and set a track record of 1.41 4-5 for the distance. He will run as a double entry along with Good Sir.

The only filly in the race, Storm Bell, owned by H. M. Holden of Midnapore, Alta., is the western hope. The speedy filly, winner of the Alberta Derby at Edmonton in August, will be carrying 123 pounds. Colts and geldings carry top weight of 126.

Besides Ontario and Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have representatives in the 21st running of the derby.

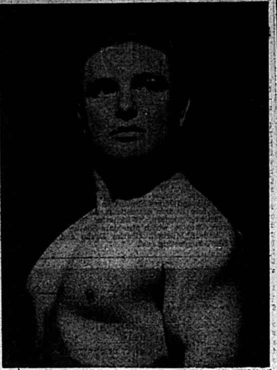
Onwitch, owned by E. T. Myers of Rosetown, Sask., will be carrying a lot of the fans' wagers. Last year Onwitch earned more money for his owner than any other western two-year-old.

British Columbia has two entries, Sir J. R. and Pollapash. Fermenter, owned by C. P. Jacques of Calgary, will carry the other Alberta colors in the grind.

The Canadian Derby was won last year by Yates senior, owned by W. J. Yates of Calgary.

Track record for the derby distance was set in 1947 when Sir Berrill romped in with a time of 2:07.

Approximate post time is 6 p.m. CDT.



Timothy Geohagen, the strongest laddybuck that iver left the shores of Ould Ireland since big Danny McGoon tossed the bull of Killarney clean across the Irish Channel, will attempt to unveil the villainous Masked Marvel here on Friday night. Jersey Giants And Baltimore Win Openers

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Giants and Baltimore Orioles have drawn first blood in the International League's semi-final playoffs.

Manager Joe Becker's underdog Giants nipped the pennant-winning Rochester Red Wings 5-4, and the Orioles clipped Montreal Royals 6-2 last night in the opening games of best-of-seven series.

The Giants used four pitchers to stop the Red Wings, 107 favorites to take the series. A Rochester crowd of 7,688 watched the Giants choke off repeated late-inning rallies after taking a 4-3 lead with two runs in the seventh.

Veteran righthander Russ Bauers limited the Royals to three hits before 4,371 fans at Baltimore. The crowd was held down because of a threat of rain.

The Orioles nicked Omar (Turk) Lown for single runs in the third and fourth innings. After the Royals tied it up with two in the sixth, the Orioles locked up the decision with four in the last of the sixth. Clyde Kluttz drove in three runs on a pair of singles to lead Baltimore's eight - hit attack.

St. Thomas Wins Chance at Second Place in Loop

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 13—(CP) —St. Thomas won a chance at second place in the Senior Intercounty round robin baseball playoffs Tuesday night by defeating Kitchener 11-8 in a seven-inning game shortened by rain.

Washed out in the first of the seventh the game was officially called at six innings after players and some 1,000 fans waited half an hour in hopes skies would clear.

The win was St. Thomas' fifth for four losses. It gave them a chance to tie Waterloo Tigers for second place by defeating them in tonight's game. If St. Thomas takes tonight's fixture, second place likely will be decided in a sudden-death game, winner to meet Brantford Red Sox in the final series.

Lefty Wilson was still pitching for St. Thomas when the rains came but Kitchener had three men on the mound. Yank Lipka started, was replaced by Nick Martinovich in the second and Wally Beggs took over in the fourth.

Bill McCarthy — whose wife gave birth yesterday to a 7½ pounds boy — hit a homer over centre field fence for St. Thomas in the fifth. Kitchener took a two-run lead in the first two innings but St. Thomas evened it up in their half of the second. In the fourth St. Thomas went four runs ahead. Kitchener recovered the lead with a big six-run inning in the fifth. St. Thomas forged ahead with four runs and added two insurance runs in the sixth.

More than that, you get controlled volatility and the best balanced combination of important gasoline qualities to give all round performance.

The improvements in Esso and Esso Extra are the result of a continuing program to keep Esso gasolines abreast of car engine requirements—to give you gasolines that are continually up-to-date.

Most cars now give satisfactory performance with ESSO — a balanced gasoline with stepped-up anti-knock quality and controlled volatility to give smoother performance at regular price.

Some cars—due to extra high compression, or the condition of the engine—need premium quality gasoline. For those cars your Imperial Esso dealer has ESSO EXTRA with extra anti-knock quality.

Fill your tank with ESSO or ESSO EXTRA. Take your car out on the road. Notice the fast starting, quick warm-up, surging power on hills and highways!

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The opening lead of a trump will seem odd in some situations. But a study of the surrounding circumstances will show its wisdom. Where rule does not apply, logic supplies the advice.

Ordinarily, the lead of a trump is a waiting lead. It is led in the hope that the leader can sit back and wait for leads towards his good cards. Especially his ace or king in unbid suits.

A trump is also led when declarer is trump rich in his own or dummy hand or both. It is led in the hope of cutting down some of the ruffs with which declarer expects to take tricks.

Another spot comes up in a deal like this:

NORTH
♠K 10 4
♥J 4
♦J 8 5 2
♣J 6 3 2

WEST	EAST
♠A Q J 2	♠8 7
♥10 2	♥Q 9 8 7 6
♦A K 10 6	♦Q 9 3
♣K 9 5	♣10 8 7

SOUTH
♠9 6 5 3
♥A K 5 3
♦7 4
♣A Q 4

The bidding went like this:

South	West	North	East
1 H	Dbl	Pass	All Pass

The double by west was for takeout. If north does not intervene with a bid, east is forced to bid something. If east passes, however, he says he can help defeat the contract. It becomes a penalty double.

The west double promises strength in side suits. The east pass promises trump tricks or trump length. The combination of both will be enough to kill the contract, east advises his partner.

Ordinarily, the correct opening lead from west would be his king of diamonds; a top card lead. But this skilled player led trump ten. Another trump was led as soon as defenders got in again.

When the smoke of the battle cleared, declarer found himself down three. He got only four tricks; two trumps, a club, and a spade.

What prompted west to start with a trump lead? East showed he could soon dominate the trump situation. So south's best trumps should be knocked out fast. Prevent him from ruffing with small trumps.

Experts make practical bypaths didactical.

Plumbers Take Game Lead in Semi-Final Round

Howe and Hagerman's redoubtable Plumbers made the most of Marty Halloran's four hit pitching last evening to register a 5-3 triumph over Stewart Warner, to take a 2-1 lead in their best of five semi-final series.

Three errors in the first inning proved to be the Alemite's downfall. Maurice Rollins singled to lead off the bottom of the first frame. Ed Donovan struck out and Rollins moved up on a walk to Bill Spafford. Don Adams hit a fast roller to second base which went through the second baseman and the centrefielder. Rollins and Spafford scored and Adams reached third before the relay reached the infield. Wardhaugh singled to left to score Adams and took second as the left fielder bobbled the ball.

Fitzgibbon struck out and Hunter lined out to second base to end the inning.

A walk to Rollins and Bill Spafford's home run to the left field in the fifth inning gave the Plumbers their margin of victory.

Alemite opened the scoring in the top of the first inning with a walk to Rowbotham, a sacrifice by Ronsky, and a single to centrefield by Vern Carr, producing the run. They wound up their scoring in the sixth inning with two errors and a single going for two runs.

Howe and Hagerman left only four men stranded on the runways while Alemite let nine potential runs wither on the bases.

Registers Second Victory

Al Adams registered his second playoff victory over Alemite in going the distance for the Plumbers. He walked three, struck out five and scattered six hits. Marty Halloran walked three, struck out five and held the Plumbers to four hits in a losing cause.

Best man at bat was Alemite third baseman Vern Carr, with three hits in five tries, for half of the planters attack. Lunberg, Moon, and Claude Carr also hit safely for Alemite. Rollins, Spafford, Don Adams, and Harry Wardhaugh connected for the Plumbers.

The two teams go at it again Thursday night at the Alemite Field with the Plumbers needing a victory to go into the finals.

Line up:

Alemite: Rowbotham 1b; Ronsky 2b; V. Carr 3b; Lunberg cf; Moon c; Leforte ss; C. Carr lf; R. Reid rf Halloran p.

Howe and Hagerman: Rollins 2b; Donovan lf; Spafford ss; D. Adams, c; Wardhaugh rf; Fitzgibbon 1b; Hunter rf; Tomaso 3b; A. Adams p.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 13 (AP)—The movie-makers have found one trouble in filming the life of Enrico Caruso—no one can agree on what kind of a man the great singer was.

"The man has been dead only 30 years," said Joe Pasternak, producing the picture. "But nobody can agree on him. The four people, all of them who knew him intimately, and each will have a different idea of what kind of a person he was.

"We are not going to try to show his whole life. To do that would take 74 hours on the screen; we have only two. We are filming a story based on his career. It will be a story of a young Italian boy who found fame and wealth in the United States. I think it should be a film that will help sell the American way of life throughout the world."

Little Opera

The film, said the producer, will not try to "cram opera down the public's throat."

"We are not in competition with the Met," he said. "We will have a lot of singing, but it will be familiar and melodic— like the sextette from 'Lucia and the quartet from 'Rigoletto.' And we will have some pop stuff, too. One of Caruso's biggest selling records was 'because.' "

Some of the more famous aspects of the tenor's life will not be touched, Pasternak indicated. Mario Lanza, who will play the lead and has a lusty appetite himself, will not be seen eating one of the tremendous meals Caruso used to consume.

Caruso will have only two loves, his Italian sweetheart as a boy, and his wife, played by Ann Blyth. His death (in 1921 at the age of 48) will be suggested but not actually pictured.

AT THE McCARTHY — Will Geer, in the role of frontier law officer Wyatt Earp, makes an attempt to keep peace between Stephen McNally and James Stewart as the two feuding cowhands come face to face in this dramatic scene from Universal-International's thrilling western, "Winchester 73", starting today at the McCarthy Theatre, which also stars Shelley Winters and Dan Duryea. Millard Mitchell, Charles Drake and John McIntire head the film's supporting cast.

AT THE CAPITOL — Randolph Scott, Gabby Hayes and Jim Davis in a scene from Nat Holt's Cinecolor western, "The Cariboo Trail," released by 20th. Century-Fox and the next attraction at the Capitol Theatre, starting Thursday for its first Belleville showing. On the same program a select group of short subjects including a Laurel and Hardy Comedy.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma bawt me a new Sunday suit downtown in Hookbinders childrens department, saying, Now there are 2 more things I want to do before the store closes. I want to get some hole-proof nylon stockings at the special one day sale and save myself severel dollers, and on the way I'll stop at the cosmetics counter and treet myself to a lipstick refill, she said.

Which she did, saying to the gerl, Are you still selling Princess Charming lipstick refills at 89 cents?

Yes mam, that's one of our permanent specials, the gerl said, and ma said, Give me one noonday red, please.

Which she did, and she went to get ma's change, and after a while ma said, Goodness I wish she'd hurry. The store will close before I have a chance to get those nylons, and that's one of the principal reasons I came downtown today.

And pritty soon she said to the other gerl, I wish that salesgirl would come back with my change, I've been waiting and waiting and my patience is giving out. I must say it's an odd sistem for a big organization with highly paid executives and the most complicated modern bookkeeping, she said.

I know, if I was a big department store things would be diffrent, the other gerl said, and after a while the ferst gerl came back, saying to ma, Sorry to keep you waiting, but that's the way it is around here. Here's your change for 89 out of 90, she said.

And she gave me a cent, and just then the bell rang meening the store was closing, and ma started to walk out mad, and I asked her why she hadn't gone without the cent change instead of leaving all that money not getting the bargain nylons, and she [illegible] the principal of the thing.

Sounding like a lady's argument.

Blood on the Stars

By Brett Halliday

Lucy came in from the kitchen. "What was it about the ruby bracelet Michael?"

"It's been snatched."

"Stolen? Already?"

"About an hour ago." Shayne scowled and let an ounce of cognac trickle down his throat.

"This must be the first time she's worn it," Lucy exclaimed. "Remember that day they were buying it? Mr. Dustin wanted it delivered by Friday for his wife to wear to a concert."

Shayne nodded. "And this is Friday."

"So they want you to recover it for them," said Lucy happily. "That's nice. You always feel better when you're working. And there should be a big reward. Goodness! A hundred and eighty thousand dollars!"

"It isn't quite as simple as that. Painter thinks I stole it."

"Painter?"

"Peter Painter," Shayne told her. "On the Beach. You've heard me speak of him often enough."

"Oh yes. But how on earth could he get such a crazy idea, Michael?"

"It isn't difficult. . not for Painter," Shayne said morosely.

Dustin picked up a highball in his left hand. "You cops are the ones to figure things out. You know the way your mobs work down here better than I," said Mark.

"I've been trying to tell Painter," said Voorland, "how unique this particular bracelet is. The sort of jewel mobs who operate in any resort city necessarily employ finger men who are experts in their line. One glance at those star rubies would have been enough to send them after the bracelet in a hurry."

"But I still maintain it is preposterous," said Painter angrily, "to assume that a gang would be waiting right here at the hotel on the mere chance that a finger man would see something of value. Remember, Mrs. Dustin insists she didn't show the bracelet in public except when she walked across the hotel lobby to the door."

"That still doesn't rule out coincidence," Shayne argued. "Lot's of wealthy people wander out of this hotel every night wearing stuff worth grabbing. A smart mob might easily be hanging around waitng for just such a tipoff as they got when Mrs. Dustin flashed her new bracelet. Had the insurance on it gone through?" he asked Voorland.

"Yes. That is temporary coverage has been issued pending receipt of the approved policy from New York. Earl Randolph handled it for me, and I've phoned him to come over here at once."

"Mark!" cried Celia. "Do you suppose there'll be any trouble about the insurance? You haven't paid the premium or anything have you?"

"I've been waiting for someone to mention that," said Dustin. "I don't know what the legal position will be. I understood from Mr. Voorland that it was all arranged."

"Don't worry about legal quibbling," Voorland said with assurance. "International Indemnity is zealous of its reputation for paying every valid claim promptly. Your temporary coverage is every bit as good as a formal policy, even though you haven't paid a cent on it. Of course," he added "the first premium will be deducted from the full amount when settlement is made."

"I wouldn't worry too much about a cash settlement," said Shayne. "The very uniqueness of the stones in the bracelet makes it a practical centainty that the thieves will be glad to make a deal as soon as they find out what they've got."

"That sounds like prior knowledge, Shayne." Painter pounced upon his statement. "Could it be you who is planning to make a deal "

Shayne disregarded him. "Isn't that right?" he asked the jeweler.

"Exactly," Voorland agreed. "It will be impossible to sell rubies like that as they are. I have photographs and exact measurements by which they can be positively identified."

"But they could be cut up," Painter interjected.

"That is exactly what they cannot be," Voorland explained to him. "Star rubies would lose nine-tenths of their value cut up into pieces. Any cutting that destroys the asterism destroys the value of the stone. Shayne is right. They'll be offered by the thieves. . at a price."

The door buzzer sounded. Celia Dustin went to the door and admitted a portly man with a round, shining face and a broad smile that displayed two gold teeth beneath a neatly trimmed mustache.

He said, "I'm Mr. Randolph. Mrs. Dustin?"

She said, "Yes," and offered her hand. Voorland came across to meet Randolph his eyes grave and intent.

"This is bad business, Earl," said the jeweler. "We were just discussing International's liability if the jewels are not recovered."

"We've done business together for twenty years," Randolph reminded him. 'Has any company I ever represented tried to avoid a valid commitment?"

"Just what I've been telling Mr. Dustin. You know Shayne and Chief Painter. And this is your client whom I believe you have not met."

Randolph nodded to the others and went over to Dustin. He said solemnly, "I didn't realize you'd been injured. In the robbery?"

"That's right," said Dustin glumly. "If I'd been sure about the insrance I might not have tried to save the bracelet."

"Mr. Voorland has been trying to tell us," Painter put in, "that the gems in the bracelet are a kind that can't be cut up and resold readily."

"Star rubies? Only an idiot would even consider cutting one up," Randolph confirmed. 'How are you in on this, Mike?"

"Offering a reward?" Shayne countered with a slow grin.

"I haven't had time to think about that phase," Randolph said slowly, "but I presume. . ."

"Wait a minute, Randolph." Painter spoke up swiftly and emphatically. "You know the law about stolen property. There'll be no deals with thieves while I'm chief of detectives on the Beach."

Earl Randolph smiled blandly and asked, "Are you intimating that Mike Shayne is a thief? It's perfectly legal to offer a reward for the return of stolen property, and you know it."

"But is isn't legal to offer immunity along with it."

"Who said anything about offering immunity? If Shayne can recover the stuff, I won't ask him how he did it."

"It's a positive encouragement to lawlessness," Painter declared angrily. "You know as well as I do how such deals are arranged, and I'm determined to stamp out the practice on the Beach."

"Just how are such deals arranged?" Shayne asked coldly.

Canada Will Send Arms Not Troops For West's Defence

P.M. Makes Announcement During Debate in House

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 14 (CP) — The government feels that Canada's best contribution to the defence of peacetime Europe is arms, rather than manpower—"at this time."

That point was made clear in a Commons session yesterday by Prime Minister St. Laurent shortly before External Affairs Minister Pearson left for New York as Canada's spokesman at a vital meeting of the Atlantic Pact Foreign Ministers on the defence of Europe.

After John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) raised Winston Churchill's call for two or three Canadian divisions in Europe, Mr. St. Laurent entered the budget debate to make these points:

1. The government "at this time is not considering the raising of Canadian forces to dispatch to Europe. . .and has not before it any such suggestion from any of the pact governments."

2. Those 11 allied governments are not apt to suggest that the best value to be obtained from Canada's contribution would be by sending men to Europe and maintaining them rather than using them here to help produce arms and equipment for Europe's surplus but unequipped manpower.

3. Mr. Churchill is Britain's leader of the opposition and leaders of the opposition don't lay down the pact powers' defence policies—their governments do.

4. Canada's $300,000,000 arms-for-Europe program will do more for the over-all defence of Europe than if that money was spent to raise an overseas Canadian contingent which would have to be drawn from the men now engaged in productive pursuits.

Never Asked For Troops

But there were qualifications to Mr. St. Laurent's statement. He said Canada has not been asked for troops and is not at this time considering such a move. Washington reports have indicated a U.S. request for a Canadian division for Europe might be made this weekend.

Mr. St. Laurent said arms are Canada's most effective "immediate" contribution. He said Mr. Pearson goes to New York with an open mind and that the government will consider any proposal. The policy he enunciated was the policy "at this time."

FOILS ATTEMPT TO ROB

Welland, Sept. 14 — (CP) — An attempt to crack a safe at Hebert Motors here was foiled by Constable John Plemel. Investigating an open door, the constable found a safe in the office had been partly burned with an acetylene torch.

Pearson Arrives In New York For Big Three Talks

Lake Success, N.Y., Sept. 14—(CP)—L. B. Pearson arrives in New York today for the talks among Atlantic allies aimed at stemming communist aggression.

Arrival of Canada's external affairs minister one day before opening of the Atlantic Pact Council meeting raises speculation that he has been called in by the big three foreign ministers to present Canada's views on some top problems.

Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain, Foreign Minister Schuman of France and State Secretary Acheson of the United States are scheduled to put aside their Big Three talks for the opening tomorrow of the two-day discussions among the 12 Atlantic Pact countries.

Informed sources said Pearson is expected to be closeted with Bevin, Acheson and Schuman some time today. The Big Three talks are ranging over almost all pressing problems of east-west conflict.

Whether or not Pearson confers today with the Big Three representatives he will have a busy round of talks in preparation for the Atlantic Pact meeting and the United Nations General Assembly opening Tuesday.

Accompanied by Large Staff

The external affairs minister is accompanied by a large staff of advisers including A. D. P. Heeney his deputy; L. Dana Wilgress, Canada's high commissioner in London and representative of the North Atlantic Council of Deputies; and Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, chief of the general staff.

Pearson has said that one of the "very important" matters to come before the council will be Canada's proposal to spend $300,000,000 and more to help arm Europe and train airmen.

Informed quarters in Ottawa have said that Canada, under present circumstances, is not going to send military units to Europe because she feels that she can do more to help European allies by sending arms. Pearson has said, however, that Canada may have to do more in the military field than present plans call for.

The whole question of the military obligations of the 12 member states is expected to come up, including a clarification of Canada's specific duties.

WOMEN INJURED

New York, Sept. 14 — (AP)—A seven-block-long section of a heavy cable fell to the street in Queens yesterday, injuring three women shoppers and smashing tops and hoods of four parked cars. One woman suffered a broken arm, the others cuts and bruises. The cable supplied current to an elevated section of subway trackage and was suspended beneath the elevated.

SUFFOCATED IN CRIB

Stratford, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Peter Scott Huddleston, four-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Huddleston, was found dead in his crib today. It is believed he suffocated.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 14— (CP)—Synopsis: Skies are still dull across most of Ontario today with occasional rain falling in all southern and central regions. The disturbance which has caused this week's moist weather appears stalled at present over the Bruce Peninsula but indications point to it moving slowly northeastward during the next 24 hours. This movement would bring rain further into Northern Ontario but at the same time holds some promise of at least partial clearing in the southern part of the province Friday.

CROWN ATTORNEY AWREY, WINDSOR, IS DISMISSED

Action Taken in Light Of O.P.P. Report

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP) — The Ontario government today fired Crown Attorney E. C. Awrey of Windsor and accepted the "gracious" offer of two police commissioners who believe their resignation will help speed reorganization of Windsor's police force.

The decision, announced in a statement by Attorney-General Porter, came on the heels of a report which said vice has "flourished" in Windsor and that police officials must be aware of its existence.

The report was by two provincial police inspectors who made a seven-week study of law enforcement in the border city.

Action Taken on Report

The statement said that "in the light of the report," the government decided to "retire" Mr. Awrey.

It said that Judge A. J. Gordon and Magistrate A. W. McMillan, members of the three-man police commission, "offered to retire" and that the government accepted their offer.

The third commissioner is Mayor Arthur Reaume.

"By statute," said Mr. Porter, "so long as he holds that office, (Mr. Reaume) must remain as a police commissioner, so that his retirement is out of the question.

Belleville Man Named to Post

Named to replace Judge Gordon and Magistrate MacMillan are Judge A. Cochrane of Brampton and Roland Harris, general manager of the C. H. Smith department store in Windsor.

"In order that Mr. Harris may be qualified to be designated as a police commissioner," said Mr. Porter, "he has been appointed a magistrate ad hoc, without remuneration as such."

The Provincial Police report, which contains six recommendations in the light of the study by Inspectors W. H. Lougheed and Frank C. Kelly, will be submitted immediately to the new commission.

M. A. C. Hall, Crown Attorney at Whitby, will take over Mr. Awrey's duties until a permanent successor is named.

Mr. Porter's statement was made following a cabinet meeting at which the inspectors' report was discussed.

He said today's moves were "a first step" toward reorganization of the Windsor police set-up.

Judge Gordon, the Attorney-General said, is among the most highly-esteemed county jurists in Ontario and is respected by the legal profession for his integrity and legal judgment.

"He has graciously offered to co-operate with the government in any new policy that may improve the condition...It is obvious that the reorganization of the police force will require a great deal of special attention for the next few months, which would unduly encroach upon the time that the senior judge must devote to his judicial duties.

Decision Will be Up to Parliament If Govt. Decides on Force Over 15,000

Ottawa, Sept. 14—(CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said today in the Commons that if the government decides to increase the forces available for use in Korea or elsewhere above 15,000 men the decision will be placed before parliament.

He drew attention to an article in Le Devoir, Montreal newspaper, which he said acused him of misleading the Canadian people with respect to the number of men Canada would send to Korea.

The charge was "absolutely false." The newspaper had stated that the government had said it would need about 6,000 men for Korea, but an order-in-council made public last Saturday fixed the number at 15,000.

The prime minister said the government plans with respect to the Korean force were made known to the public and to parliament.

He explained why the figure of 15,000 had been fixed. The armed brigade being trained will consist of about 5,300 men. The army will also train replacements. About 9,000 men had enlisted for the added to that figure 1,000 men who special force. There had to be were being transferred to the special force from the regular army.

There were about 1,000 men in the navy now serving with the three Canadian destroyers in Korean waters. They would be replaced by others when the destroyers are recalled for refitting.

In addition, there are about 1,000 men serving in the R.C.A.F. air lift from United States to Japan. Provision was made for replacements.

Mr. St. Laurent said that in all it was estimated that about 15,000 men would be required to see that the three contingents operated efficiently.

Vice 'Flourishes' in Windsor Report Given Inspector Stringer By Investigating Policemen

Toronto, Sept. 14—(CP)— Two provincial police inspectors reported today that vice "flourishes" in Windsor and that they must assume Windsor police officials know about it.

It includes bawdy houses "in close proximity to the police station" and "wholesale betting and gambling," they said. Some of it was connected with the "big-time gangster syndicate" in neighboring Detroit.

In a hard-hitting, 8,000-word report, inspectors W. H. Lougheed and Frank C. Kelly told what they saw and heard during a seven-week study of law enforcement in the border city.

They were assigned to the job last May after the Windsor police commission asked provincial attorney-general Porter to make an investigation. This followed repeated newspaper criticism of Windsor police methods and a suggestion by Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan that local police had been "lax".

The inspector's report, addressed to Provincial Police Commissioner W. H. Stringer, was made public today by Attorney-General Porter.

Among its highlights is a statement that most "troubles" of the Windsor force can be laid at the doorstep of the officers assigned to morality cases.

"It seems queer," the inspectors wrote, "that disorderly houses could operate in close proximity to the police station without the knowledge of the police department."

Recommendations included enlargement of the force and setting up of a permanent morality division.

Parents, Ten Children Flee Flaming House at Northbrook, Only Few Articles Saved

Northbrook, Ont., Sept. 14. — (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Almonte Spicer and their 10 children, ranging in age from three-year-old twins to a 13-year-old girl, were left homeless early today when fire gutted their home. Northbrook is about 20 miles north west of Kingston.

The fire, which started shortly after five a.m., is believed to have been kindled in pipes leading to the attic. Mr. Spicer first rushed to the well and tried to extinguish the flames. But as the fire spread he aroused his wife and children and rushed them from the house. All escaped without injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Spicer, aided by the children, barefoot and in night attire, managed to drag out a stove, washing machine, refrigerator and separator but were unable to salvage any clothing or other belongings.

An immediate campaign was launched in Northbrook to help the stricken family. Clothing was being gathered and temporary accommodation sought.

Labor Department Approves Rate For Carpenters

The new carpenters' agreement arrived at for the Belleville district some weeks ago has been officially approved by the Department of Labor, members of the Belleville and District Builders' Exchange were informed at their regular meeting held Tuesday at Lattimer's.

Terms of the agreement call for pay of $1.40 per hour with two per cent vacation pay. A week's work is 40 hours with time and a half for overtime.

The question of overtime for the shift system was discussed at the meeting.

Mr. E. Finkle of Finkle Electric, representing the electrical contractors in the city and immediate district, reported that a new agreement had been signed with the electricians' union which called for rate of pay of $1.25 per hour, with a 44-hour week and two percent vacation pay. He said that the agreement includes six paid holidays with time and a half for overtime and double time for Sundays.

Guest speaker for the evening was Rev. Sidney E. Larman of Holloway Street United Church. Mr. Larman gave an interesting address on the advantages to be gained through building on a firm foundation, both materially and spiritually.

The meeting was presided over by Fred Elgie, vice president. Guests at the meeting included William Fick, Hackensack, N.J.; Harold Perkins, Department of Labor; G. Seames, of Fred Elgie Co., Ltd. and Mr. Webber, Stirling.

The guest speaker was thanked by Mr. J. White.

EXPELLED FROM UNION

Linden, N. J., Sept. 14 (CP) — Four men who distributed leaflets attacking American action in Korea were expelled from their union last night. The membership of Local 595, United Auto Workers (C. I. O.) voted unanimously to expel Calvin de Filippis, Patrick J. Gallagher, Louis Fischer and Frank Witkus.

U.S. Jet Missing In Watertown District

Trenton, Sept. 14—(CP) — A United States F-86 jet fighter has been missing since noon yesterday while on a flight in the Watertown, N.Y., district, R.C.A.F. officials here said today.

Three aircraft and a para-rescue team at Trenton are standing by to take part in the search for the fighter. However, R.C.A.F. officials said the U.S. air force has made no request for aid and "appears to have the situation well in hand."

The plane, based at Rome, N.Y., was last seen 10 miles east of Watertown when it dropped out of a formation flight with other jets.

Lowville, N.Y.—(CP)— Search parties set out shortly after dawn today to resume the hunt for the jet fighter believed to have crashed in heavy woods near here.

The ground search was started yesterday after lumberjacks reported hearing a crash near Tug Hill in the town of Osceola.

Griffiss air force base at Rome reported an F-86 was missing on a routine training flight.

Police and an air force ground rescue unit, aided by lumberjacks, were hampered by darkness and a driving rainstorm as they combed the wooded hill country last night. They called off the hunt for the night shortly before midnight.

British Troops Will be Flown To Far East

London, Sept. 14—(Reuters)—British troop reinforcements for Korea are to be flown to the Far East almost immediately, the Air Ministry announced today.

Transport planes, each carrying about 35 men, will leave an R.A.F. station in Wiltshire, taking about eight days to reach Japan. From there the men will be moved to Korea under United Nations arrangements.

NON-CONFIDENCE MOTIONS BEATEN IN ANGRY SESSION

House Will Adjourn Until February 14th

Ottawa, Sept. 14—(CP)— The Commons, on the eve of adjournment, packed more action into its sitting yesterday than into almost any other meeting since the special emergency session opened Aug. 29.

Angry, cross-floor verbal spats erupted, first in a discussion on the role Canada should play in the defence of Europe and then again when George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, rose to the defence of one of his supporters.

The developments came as members defeated two opposition motions of non-confidence in the government, concluded the debate on the budget and began study of legislation that will give legal effect to the tax changes in last Thursday's budget.

The legislation is the last major item of business on the agenda. When the work is completed, parliament will adjourn, instead of prorogue, until Feb. 14, subject to recall if developments warrant such action.

Bitter Exchange

In a brief and sometimes-bitter exchange with Mr. Drew, Prime Minister St. Laurent said no allied government has asked Canada to send troops to Europe and that his cabinet is not considering such a move.

He said the dispatch of army divisions to Europe in peacetime is not the best way for Canada to play her over-all role under the Atlantic Pact, that it is better for all the pact powers if Canada provides arms for the surplus manpower already available on that continent.

Mr. Drew accused the Prime Minister of putting "politics first" and said the government has not been taking the opposition into its confidence in defence matters.

It was not a question so much of how many men Canada would send to Korea or Europe. The important question was how many men Canada was going to train for active service at home as part of her joint responsibility for the collective preservation of peace.

Mr. Drew was the centre of another verbal battle when he rose to defend Maj. E. D. Fulton (PC-Kamloops) over his don't-enlist-for-Korea statement.

Bernard Shaw Leaves His Bed For Second Day

Luton, England, Sept. 14 — (Reuters)—George Bernard Shaw left his hospital bed for the second time today following an operation on a broken thighbone.

Helped by nurses he stood for a full minute on his good leg, swinging the injured left leg gently.

Earlier, doctors said the 94-year-old dramatist was recovering satisfactorily.

He broke his thigh Sunday when he slipped while puttering around his garden at Ayott St. Lawrence.

Two Toronto Men Refuse $10,000 Legacy if They Would Change Faith

Toronto, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Two Toronto men said today they have decided against changing from the Roman Catholic to the Protestant faith to obtain bequests of $5,000 each.

They were named as heirs in the will of their aunt, Ambla Lila Going of Peterborough, an art teacher who died 13 years ago, on condition that they became Protestants.

If only one of the men—John David Bradley, 23, employee of an oil company trucking department, and Brian Michael Bradley, 21, first-year medical student at University of Western Ontario, London — changed to Protestantism, he was to receive the entire $10,000.

Since neither intends to join a Protestant church, the money will go to the pension fund of the United Church of Canada in keeping with an alternative provision of the will.

Cut Off From Sources of Supplies In North Korea

No Confirmation Allies Effect Landing Up Coast

Tokyo, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Heavy bombing by United States Superfortresses has wrecked communist communications and the reds now are cut off from their sources of supply in North Korea, Gen. MacArthur said today.

The United Nations commander said bombing has "just about completed" the job of cutting red communications southward.

Meanwhile, a North Korean broadcast — badly garbled in reception — appeared to be saying that an Allied amphibious landing was attempted today on Korea's west coast near red-held Seoul.

There was no confirmation from Allied sources.

The U.S. Navy announced earlier that British and American warships' guns and carrier planes pounded the area from dawn to dusk Tuesday and Wednesday.

Informed sources said they believed the reds were trying to save face on the shellacking they took in the bombardment by calling it a victory in a landing effort that was repulsed.

Associated Press field correspondents in Korea said there was no word of any activity there to support the communist reports of an Allied landing attempt.

The red broadcast, from the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, reported a landing attempt began at 8 p.m. (7 a.m., EDT, today). It said the effort was repulsed and six American vessels —mostly destroyers— were sunk.

Flanking Island Seized

Islands flanking Inchon have been seized by South Korean marines in commando raids. This served the double purpose of throwing a wrench in the reds' seaborne supply lines to the battlefront—and preparing a possible avenue for an offensive.

The U.S. Navy said American and British cruisers and destroyers blasted two whole days at Inchon, Port of Seoul, which is 22 miles inland.

Carrier planes went after air strips, troops and gun emplacements there and along a 210-mile western coastal strip.

The strikes were disclosed as allied ground forces, more than 150 miles to the southeast, either held or punched out gains on the beachhead perimeter.

The U.N. ground forces commander, Lt.-Gen. Walton Walker, told his troops Wednesday — while the Inchon attack still was in progress —that an allied offensive is coming soon.

Signs Thrust Breaking

There are signs, the general said, that the red thrust on the 125-mile beachhead in the southeast perimeter is breaking. This was noted particularly on the northern front where American and South Korean forces continued to hammer out gains. Elsewhere the line was generally unchanged.

The warship and carrier-plane blows struck at the area repeatedly blasted by far-ranging B-29s from Japan and Okinawa bases. But where the superforts concentrated on heavy industry and supply lines, the naval targets were airstrips, troops and gun emplacements on the seaside and inland.

Cities all the way from the 36th to 39th parallel were attacked by Skyraider bombers, Panther jet fighters and Corsair fighter bombers. These targets included Pyongyang the Korean communist capital, Taejon, Sinmak, Haeju, Ongjon, Kaeson, Cherwan, Kimpo, Suwon and Pyongtaek.

Southward Routes Cut

Tokyo, Sept. 14 (Reuters) — Communist forces in South Korea are now cut off from their sources of supply in the north, Gen. MacArthur said today.

The United Nations commander said Superfort bombing now has "just about completed" the job of cutting all communist communications routes southward.

CAMPBELLFORD

Extols Work Of Rotary In Promoting Peace

Campbellford, Sept. 13— "Rotary, with its devotion to services provides a common ground for some 342,000 business and professional men throughout the world, regardless of nationalities or political or religious beliefs," said Arthur R. Ferguson of Gravenhurst, Governor of District 247 of Rotary International in addressing the Campbellford Rotary Club at a luncheon early this week. The address followed a conference with the local Rotary officers, directors, and committee chairman.

Mr. Ferguson said that the Rotary clubs in 83 countries are united to promote international understanding, good will and peace. Russia and Turkey, he said, are the only two countries in the world where Rotary clubs do not exist.

In addition to the activities of Rotary's 7,100 clubs in their own communities to promote the objects of the organization, Mr. Ferguson explained that over a three-year period Rotary International is spending $50,000 to create better understanding among the peoples of the different nations.

Ambassadors of Goodwill

One of the principal ways in which this money is being spent is on Rotary Foundation Fellowships which enable outstanding graduate students to study for one year in countries other than their own, as ambassadors of goodwill. Since this program was established in 1947, 195 fellowships have been awarded to students in 35 countries with grants totalling nearly $500,000.

Mr. Ferguson went on to say there is a striking similarity between the program of Rotary and the United Nations Charter, and that since the organization of the U.N. in 1945, Rotary clubs throughout the world have been active in the development of an informed public opinion on the objectives of the U.N. in an endeavor to make an effective instrument for free people everywhere.

"Rotary possses the only facilities in the world capable of exerting an influence throughout its entire surface," he said.

Founded on Friendship

Mr. Ferguson said Rotary is founded on mutual understanding and friendship among men. It is consistent with all religious beliefs. Rotary is merely an interpretation of the Golden Rule in personal relationships with our fellow men.

In conclusion, the governor cited several instances of the excellent work done by Rotary in helping crippled children.

The speaker was introduced by past pres. N. Alex MacColl, and was thanked by Rotarian W. A. Kingston. Prior to his address the governor read the initiation charge to Rotarian Oscar Mason.

Legion Property On Coleman St. To be Renovated

Branch 99, Canadian Legion, resumed regular monthly meetings on Tuesday evening when several matters of importance were dealt with.

Foremost being the acquisition of new and permanent club rooms building committee being given the go ahead to make the necessary alterations to the property on Coleman St. to make it suitable for use of the branch. It's expected that the building will be ready for the members use by Remembrance Day. Plans are under way also for erecting large modern building on the property at the rear, when this is finished the local branch of the Legion will have a building of their own valued at around $50,000.

Arrangements were also made with regards to the Remembrance Day parade and the Annual Armistice Banquet which is held in the Armouries each year. The Legion scholarships were reported on and it is hoped in the near future to arrange for the official presentation to Miss Smith, the local winner, the Legion Merit Certificate awarded by Provincial command.

Extensive Changes Planned by New Owner of Store

The latest Front Street business to change hands is that of Sills Book Store, which has been purchased by Ted Schwab. Mr. Schwab, who started his business in Belleville in 1945, took control of the Sills establishment three or four weeks ago.

Present plans at Mr. Schwab's new location include a sale for about ten days to sell off and close out all the old stock in the store. Then the store will be completely redecorated and renovated, and the stock from the other two Schwab stores will be moved in. The new owner hopes that the store will be open again, in its new dress, by October 1. He will continue to carry all the lines formerly carried by Sills, and will add the lines he carries in his other two stores.

No Staff Changes

No staff changes are contemplated by Mr. Schwab. All the staff of the Sills establishment will continue on, plus the staffs of the other two places of business. In addition, more new help will be employed. Three telephone lines will run into the new store, thus eliminating any congestion in phone orders.

The Sills store has been in the family since 1894, the date of its establishment Mr. Schwab started out in Belleville on Bridge St., in 1948 moved to Front St., and now consolidates his business in the one larger store.

Carry Many Lines

Lines carried by the new Schwab store will include music, wallpaper, paints, office supplies, equipment and furniture, business machines, social stationery, school supplies, magazines and periodicals, greeting cards and general novelty lines. The greeting card section will be the largest in Eastern Ontario, carrying what are considered to be the two best and biggest lines in the business—Coutts and Rust Craft.

In business machines, Mr. Schwab will feature the lines he has handled for years — Royal typewriters, Remington Rand adding machines, Audograph sound writing equipment (made in Belleville by Northern Electric) and Preston Noelting office furniture.

Formby, With Music Hall Variety Program, Delights Large Audience at Arena

Lancashire came to Belleville last night it did, lud, plinked, strummed and sang its way into the hearts of thousands in Memorial Arena.

George Formby, the wizard 'o Wigan, be goom, stood on a stage devoid of Americanized chorus gals, colorful backdrops and with his dinner jacket and ukelele as the only props, sang and plunked his famous songs and patter as only Formby can do.

It was a grand show. And Formby, while the star and headline attraction is but a part of a galaxy of artists, and artists who are brilliant, to put it mildly in their individual fields.

But Formby beloved comedian from the county of the clogs and shawl was his own inimitable self. He might have stepped from the loud-speaker of the radio or from the platter of the phonograph. He was there in person and you didn't have to change the record or wait till next week, same time, same station.

Broad Humor

The guy is good, he has his own brand of broad humor, honestly and unobjectionably vulgar which he puts across the footlights in a manner that would not cause displeasure of the stiffest reformer.

He stood on the stage without props or unnecessary paraphernalia, and by the sheer force of his personality had the crowd "eating out of his hand" so to speak.

To the Britishers, especially the Englishman, and breaking it down a bit smaller, the bloke, who was born within the sound of Bow Bells, or within the smoky atmosphere of Wigan, Manchester and other familiar spots in the "cotton country," it was the ultra in entertainment.

Nostalgic people from over 'ome" actually cried from sheer joy as the familiar north country twang of the famous Lancashire comedian pushed over the footlights in "Window Cleaner."

Formby reaches out and takes the crowd into his personal confidence. Quite naturally he tells you how he was "leaning on a lampost at the corner of the street in case a certain little lady goes by."

Brings Down House

His "Our Sargint Major" brought down the house. He came back several times to continued waves of applause. He interspersed his vocal efforts with choruses on the famous "uke" and a patter of stories that were colorfully but not harmfully risque. Only a Formby could do it.

At the end of the performance Formby called out "the old woman" Mrs. Beryl Formby, manager-wife and told the crowd they were celebrating their 26th wedding anniversary. Later, to this reporter, Mrs. Formby, who with her celebrated husband wears six war decorations said "Ay lud, he beets me oop once a week but Ah li-ike it."

Formby showed excellent taste in his selection of his Music Hall Varieties. He caters to all likes of entertainment in his offering, of juggling, dancing, singing and comedy.

The show began with juggler Henri Vadden, who proved capable of carrying much more than the kitchen sink on his chin. He warmed up with a whirling wash tub spinning on a wash board, whirling on a broom, followed with a laden dinner table, which he chin balanced up and down a ladder. He ended by catching a wagon wheel on an inverted headgear.

Splendid Acrobatics

Smooth aerial backflips of the Carsony Brothers produced some splendid pantomime and at least one acrobatic feat which nobody is ever likely to have seen before—unless they've seen these Carsonys do it.

Marion Sanders, pint size singer of "posh" songs with twitching movements of a screen comedienne delighted the audience with a beautiful voice of operatic texture. She exuded pep, displaying a touch of intermittent comedy that at times seemed out of place with a voice of sweet clarity.

The talking Tom cat which proved an even better actor than Roger Carne, the Music Hall idea of Edgar Bergen was a crowd thriller. Carne who appears at first in the role of a society "drunk" later proved uproariously funny and the British type of ventriloquistic humor was a delightful departure from the same type of comedy fare which Canadians are often fed.

The variety was rounded out by the tapping dance team of Mills and Benita while Herschel Henlere, "jizz" pianist, proved not only a master musician but a comedian of more than passing ability.

Harry Bailey, an Irish tenor possessed of a splendid voice emceed the show. He told many humorous stories but could have added to the entertainment, if that was necessary, with more songs favored by singers of his type. He was witty, personable and had a fine stage personality.

Formby and his troupe will appear for two weeks at Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theatre. He hopes to come to Canada "for a bit of a 'oliday" after the tour.

Busmen Walk Out Protesting Hiring Women

London, Sept. 14— (AP) —The eternal battle of the sexes put a large percentage of London's bus passengers on their feet today as a snow-balling strike made one-quarter of the city's big double-deck buses idle.

The walkout was called to protest the hiring of women conductors on the buses.

Thousands of Londoners, who normally rely on buses to carry them to work, jammed the city's subway trains and trams.

More than 7,400 drivers and conductors joined in the wildcat stoppage which began at one garage yesterday in protest against the hiring of women conductors. This morning 1,330 buses of London's fleet of 5,100 were idle.

The busmen declared that hiring of women would jeopardize their campaign for "improved conditions."

Company Making Rapid Progress On Tweed Road

The Billie Construction Company, Montreal, is making rapid progress on the re-building of a three mile section of No. 37 Highway in the Roslin-Thomasburg area with grading on the southern portion of the stretch virtually completed.

Commencing at the cheese factory south of Roslin the re-built portion of the highway continues in a line to the west of the village emerging onto the old highway about one-half mile north. From here north almost to Thomasburg the re-built road will follow the route of the original road, although the one hill and several knolls are being cut and the entire road widened to meet with present day highway construction standards.

When the section now being re-built is completed there will be only one three-mile section of the highway to be re-graded. This is from Thomasburg north to where the re-built section running south from Tweed ended two years ago.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP) —Mild profit-taking appeared in mid-session on the Toronto stock exchange reducing early gains. Market leaders advanced strongly in early trading continuing yesterday's gains but were pushed back by later selling. Volume for the first three hours was 1,158,000 shares.

Heavy buying in the first hour pushed a wide list of industrials strongly ahead into new high ground. The mid-session selling wiped out some of the smaller gains and reduced the better advances. However, the majority of issues showed moderate gains.

Base Metals suffered their first setbacks in five sessions. Profit-taking depressed leaders of recent advances to the highest average price levels since 1937. Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel and Quemont were down fractions.

Gold stocks bounced up from opening easiness. Junior producers were in moderate demand for gains ranging up to 10 cents.

Western Oil held firm on small gains in market leaders.

Campbellford Branch Bank Gets New Manager

Campbellford, Ont. — Mr. Richard D. McDonald of Frankford will succeed James D. Mills as manager of the Campbellford branch of the Bank of Montreal, effective the end of September, it was announced today. Mr. Mills will retire after spending more than 14 years as manager of the local bank.

The new manager, Mr. McDonald has been in charge of the Bank of Montreal branch office in Frankford since 1939. He brings to his new post considerable experience gained in his many years of banking in southern Ontario.

After joining the Bank of Montreal at the Glencoe branch, he acquired his early training at the bank's Fenelon Falls, Oshawa and Trenton branches, before taking charge of the Frankford office.

Mr. McDonald is well known in the Frankford district, and has always taken an active interest in community affairs. He with his wife and small family, is expected to take up residence in Campbellford soon.

Mr. Mills' retirement concludes a banking career that began '43 years ago in Brantford. He gained most of his early banking experience at Ontario branches before being attached to the head office in Montreal, where he specialized in foreign exchange.

He was appointed manager of the Stirling branch of the Bank of Montreal in 1924 and was transferred to a similar position in Alliston, after which he took over the management of the local branch in 1936.

Mr. Mills will probably remain in Campbellford for several months before moving to the Burlington area where he intends to settle.

George Formby Down-to-Earth Person Despite High Standing In the Entertainment World

By GEO. H. CARVER

"There'll always be an England" as long as there is a George Formby.

I talked and gossiped with the slim Lancashire comedian, the darling of the north country, the pride of the British music halls and the favorite of expatriated Britishers all over the world.

The quaint Lancashire dialect rolls softly off the tongue of this modest ex-jockey who forsook the saddle and turf for the exciting life of behind the footlights.

If you have seen Formby on the stage, you have met him personally. There is nothing "high-hat about him." He is as natural as his beloved roast beef and Yorkshire pudding. He converses easily in the famous "Aye Lud, are coomin t'town t'night" dialect. There is nothing forced about his manner nor does he effect mannerisms. In short the Formby you talk with personally is the Formby you see and hear on the stage.

Loves Fun

He is a simple Englishman who loves fun and likes to make it for others. He was born in Wigan, Lancashire, which he says is the butt (he pronounces it as you would 'put') and comes by his sense of humor and comedy ability naturally. His father, the late George Formby, was the toast of the lads and lassies of the clogs and shawl when they attended their beloved "music 'all" on a Saturday night.

George tipped an expensive English fedora to the back of his head after I met him yesterday afternoon in Memorial Arena. He flicked an imaginary speck of dust from an immaculate grey Irish tweed suit. Around us employees rushed seats and chairs in position. The orchestra was tuning its instruments prior to rehearsal.

Strong Firm Clasp

He thrust out a manicured hand and grasped the reportorial 'mitt' in a strong firm clasp.

'It's so nice to meet you Canadians," and the famous Formby smile lighted his face. I felt as though I had known the bloke for twenty years.

"Ere, sit yourself down, lud" he smiled beckoning to a nearby seat.

"I'll be 'ain an bit of a chat with you and then I'll hae you meet the 'old woman."

The 'old woman' is Britisher's affectionate expression for his wife.

Formby loves Canada. And that is not the typical bromide generally given newspapermen by visiting stage firemen from other countries. Formby meant it. This is his second tour of the Dominion, and while the monetary return, naturally is one of the attractions, Formby was so smitten by Canada and Canadian hospitality that he not only planned the present tour, but during the interim flew to Canada at his own expense for a benefit show in Toronto for the Winnipeg flood disaster victims.

Mean Every Word

"Ah'm not pullin' your leg, m' lud" he smiled. "I mean every word when I say that this is the finest country in the world, and its people among the best."

He leaned down and whispered. "Don't say nuthin' about this, but the old woman and I are planning to coom to Cunada for a spot of olliday after the blinkin' tour is over."

Formby was reticent about his own-expense trip for the benefit of the flood victims. I finally pried it out of him that he did it because Canadians had treated him so royally on the occasion of his first tour that "it was the least I could do to help out a grand people."

I asked him if he planned any hunting and fishing trips when that vacation rolls around.

Again the famous smile spread over the Formby features.

"Ah'm not so fond of 'oontin' and fishin' y'know, but I do love a spot of boatin'. That will suit the old woman and I to a tee."

Formby owns a handsome cabin cruiser on which he and Mrs. Formby spend most of their time prowling around in the Norfolk Broads.

They have no children. "And as I see it what faces the children of the present, with a future undecided, the world in an uproar I am just as well satisfied that we have no family."

Formby, the philosopher, is of the opinion that the world is all right, but some people in it are "not quite oop to scratch."

"I love fun. I love makin' folks laugh. I like to see everybody enjoy himself. I think that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but not too much play. If countries of the world could act like good neighbors, drop the yen for power and conquest and act like human bein's, we would not be in such a blinkin' mess," he said.

Formby left school when he was ten and immediately, because of his slim stature and 80 pounds got a job as a jockey. He rode the "flats" and "urdles for six years, racing in England and Ireland ("I got me share of the winners, too"). Then his natural stage ability and sense of humor asserted itself. He decided to follow in the footsteps of his famous Lancashire comedian father, and "took to the footlights." His phenomenal success as an international comedian is now history.

Formby, and Mrs. Beryl Formby, a distinguished comedienne and actress in her own right, were beloved of the troops in the recent war. Both possess six war decorations given them by a grateful government. They were in France with the British troops before the hell of Dunkirk and left France two hours ahead of the army in a small boat. They were the last British civilians to leave that devastated country.

Yesterday they celebrated their 26th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Formby, ("the old woman") a gracious English lady, told me, "We were married in Wigan, you know on September 13th and by goom it was a Friday at that."

George smiled. "But we've never been unlucky, mum," he grinned.

"Mrs. Formby whose smile is as winning as that of her famous husband, laughed", "I've never regretted teamin' up with Gawge. He beats me about once a week, but by goom I likes it," she quipped.

And so I left a charming English couple. Fame and fortune have not affected their simple English manner. They are forging a stronger link between the Old Country and this Dominion of ' rs.

As I said before, "There'll always be an England" as long as people like the Formbys are around.

3-47 Battery To Hold Reunion At Cobourg

Registration is taking place starting at 2 p.m. in the Cobourg Armouries.

A feature of this year's reunion of the Battery will be the presence of its wartime chaplain Padre "Pop" Munroe who will attend for the first time a reunion in this district. This will give an opportunity for members to see their wartime padre, the first time in many cases since the end of the war.

The padre will preach at the morning church service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Cobourg on Sunday. There will also be a church parade for service at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

DEPARTING SUMMER

The "good old summertime" which has been so contrariwise is hastening to its end on September 23rd at 9.34 standard time, or 10.34 "summertime."

To most people it has been less of a summer than in many years. Rain has been plentiful and cool weather not at all rare this year. What days were hot were few.

Memory goes back to Christmas Day last when rain came down. Rain fell some times during the rest of the winter so altogether the past nine months have been somewhat at variance with the record of years.

At no time was there reason to wish the warm weather gone for there was so little of it.

The next three months, the autumn season, it will be interesting to look forward to, in the hope of getting near a perfect guess or forecast of what it can bring. Spring was rather a disappointment like summer. Now what will the fall be like?

However summer has provided people with the usual multitude of sorts of vegetables and fruits. Of that there can be no complaint. These have offered the consumers all the variety of vitamins which these familiar vegetables have offered to those who relish them.

The season's crops however have not suffered from the cooler-than-usual summer.

THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH

The Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations in the United Kingdom Government, Patrick Gordon-Walker, M.P., has finished a tour of the Commonwealth. In two months he travelled 40,000 miles ,of which 14,000 were in Australia. In that forty thousand miles he had only twice set foot outside the British Commonwealth of Nations. Everywhere he went throughout the Commonwealth he met with a wonderful welcome, he said, in a broadcast to the Commonwealth Nations.

Wherever he went he found hospitality in the Commonwealth. "Everywhere I was met with the greatest kindness, overwhelming kindness," and there was everywhere "a deep friendship and fine affection for Britain and her people."

The tour was made up of two "rushed and busy months." He was able to spend a few days in Canada and Ceylon and one day in India. He had never before been in Australia and New Zealand. The impressions he received of these two member nations of the Commonwealth were inspiring. He found unswerving loyalty everywhere.

One fact impressed Mr. Gordon-Walker, the industry in the two countries. He brought back this message to the British people, "We ourselves must become much more Commonwealth-minded. I mean we must really study and understand the Commonwealth, our own part in it and what it is that holds together this unique company and fellowship of nations. I certainly learned these last two months many things I did not know or had not clearly understood."

Of the older members of the Commonwealth, he remarked that "the older members have grown greatly in their own power; once Britain was the mother country, but we are all sisters now. This is the fulfilment of our idea of the Commonwealth. And into this sisterhood have entered three great nations of Asia. All these developments must inevitably and in important ways, not only add to the stature and strength of the Commonwealth, but also modify its nature. The Commonwealth has become not only a greater but also a much more complex affair than it was a decade or so ago."

These precious links must be preserved and cherished as inviolable.

As to the place of the Throne in the Commonwealth, Mr. Gordon-Walker said, "the Crown remains the most vital of all the links and symbols of unity and free association of members of the Commonwealth." India recognizes the King as the head of the Commonwealth and the symbol of the free association of its members.

Mr. Gordon-Walker praised the British system of parliamentary democracy which is shared by all the Commonwealth members in common as one of the closest and most abiding links of the new Commonwealth, another being that "we have discovered the most successful way in the world of reconciling genuine nationalism with genuine internationalism."

Two elderly patients in an English hospital lay in adjoining beds for several weeks and then one day discovered they were twin brothers, long separated. The incident is not unlike that in When Ghost Meets Ghost, by William De Morgan, a good novel of two sisters who were parted as children and reconciled late in life. — Hamilton Spectator.

Biography, especially of the great and good who have risen by their own exertions to eminence and usefulness, is an inspiring and noble study. Its direct tendency is to reproduce the excellence it records. — Horace Mann.

JUST FOLKS

WHAT HAS TO BE

What had to be he tried to bear
Without resentment or dismay.
When he had wanted weather fair
But woke to face a rainy day,
He'd change his plans and dress for rain
Until the skies were clear again.

When he could help himself he tried
To do the very best he could.
But when his hopes were all denied
And naught could change the bad to good,
"There's nothing now to do," said he,
"But face it as it has to be."

What could be bettered with his aid
He fought to better night and day,
But this distinction always made:
When every hope was swept away,
Knowing it useless to complain,
He dressed for trouble as for rain.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The children of good managers are usually taught to be good managers themselves either by example or instruction. But there is a type of excessively good manager who makes it impossible for his or her children to be anything but helpless dependents.

They are generally people of the most unselfish character and deepest generosity. They are tireless. And if they do not make the mistake of doing everything for their children, they make the worst mistake of telling their children not merely what to do but how to do it, in explicit detail. They are up with the dawn, preparing the way for their loved ones, and are such expert managers that, soundlessly, they have set forth a bountiful breakfast precisely at the time that the tender dependents, having been expertly hoisted out of bed at exactly the last possible minute, arrive downstairs in a dither.

The beloved ones do not have to hunt around for their hats, coats, rubbers. They are all laid ready. They do not have to look out the window to see what kind of day it is. That has already been done for them. If there was anything special they had to remember to do that day, it has been remembered for them, and a suitable reminder prepared and ready.

Often it is the women who are these excessive managers. But often enough it is the men. There are any number of men who are first up in the morning, like generals, scanning the terrain of the day, and preparing the operation orders for wife, children, friends neighbors. They are competent. They are kindly, nothing but a sense of kindly competence actuates them.

But it is downright cruel of them to die. For when they die, they leave behind them something close to complete chaos. It would have been kinder to have kicked their loved one out into the cold world at sixteen years of age. At least they could have returned, if only now and then. But when such dependants are bereft, as all must be bereft, it is exactly as if they had been cut off with a shilling. You can leave money. But you can't leave love.

WANTS MORE AID

Athens, Greece, Sept. 14. (Reuters)—Premier Sophocles Venizelos said today he will apply for further military aid within the framework of European defence during his visit to the United States. He will be heading the Greek delegation at the United Nations Assembly opening in New York.

SEVEN KILLED

Tokyo, Sept. 14. (AP)—Seven persons were killed yesterday by a typhoon which struck the islands of Kyushu and Shikoku. Six others were injured. The typhoon, accompanied by heavy rains, moved into the sea of Japan and is expected to strike Hokkaido, northernmost Japanese Island, tomorrow.

Mackenzie's Column:

Turn in Korea Will Favor Allies Says U.S. General

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The biggest current news of the Korean War is the fighting talk given United Nations forces yesterday by Lt.-Gen. Walton Walker, Allied ground commander, in which he forecast a U. N. offensive soon.

The general added the optimistic prediction that "as soon as we start forward and break the crust in front of us, the enemy will fold. We can feel a weakening of the enemy now . . . in some positions they actually are pulling out."

This comes as a welcome surprise, because it's only 10 days ago that the Allied forces were facing a desperate situation as the result of a powerful red offensive on the east coast in the corridor leading to the vital supply port of Pusan.

The enemy made a massive break-through — and there seemed to be nothing to prevent him from exploiting it. Why he didn't still is an unsolved mystery.

Since then the allied forces made an astonishing recovery. In a successful counter —offensive they have largely restored their positions. The situation is good enough for General Walker to talk confidently of a coming allied drive.

Battle Punch

Naturally the general gave no details. However, we are entitled to assume that movement of troops and equipment from the United States and allied countries has been accumulating strength for U. N, Commander-in-Chief MacArthur.

General Walker's "pep talk" to the troops presumably reflects something of this sort, However, we probably shall be wise to reflect that it was a "pep talk" and not let our imaginations carry us beyond what he actually said.

In sizing up the situation it must be remembered that hundreds of thousands of seasoned and well-equipped Chinese and Manchurian troops are reported available to reinforce the North Koreans if necessary. Indeed, the indications are that a virtually-inexhaustible stream of communist forces could be kept coming down through the North Korean funnel against MacArthur's men.

Whether this will happen presumably depends on Moscow's decision. Such a development could produce another general conflict, and it is safe to assume that Russia will be chary on that account. She doesn't want another world war — not now, anyway.

Red Strategy

However, it is probable the Korean War could be greatly protracted — without precipitating a major conflict — by providing steady though limited reinforcements for the North Koreans. That would suit the Soviet strategy of keeping the United States and her allies engaged in as many costly adventures as possible, so to weaken their economic structures.

This is speculation which only time can answer. Meanwhile, although we can feel satisfaction in the current news from Korea, I think we shall be wise to gird ourselves for a good deal more fierce fighting.

Fort Erie Man Faces Charge Under Control Act

Niagara Falls, Ont. Sept. 14—(CP)—John H. Cruise, 36, of Fort Erie, was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Wednesday night and charged with dealing in $15,000 to $16,000 in United States currency, contrary to the foreign exchange control act.

Cruise was arrested immediately after his trial on an additional charge of illegal possession of jewelry and other articles imported from the United States with a total value of $5,637. Decision on the possession charge, in which George S. Simpson of Fort Erie was charged jointly, was reserved.

Police testified that they found paint marks, on a carton in which some of the articles were found, which matched the green paint on a boat of which Simpson claimed ownership. The crown claimed the goods were smuggled from the United States in the boat.

Cruise will apear in magistrate's court today on the currency charge.

Letter to the Editor

Suggests Bd. Action On Garbage Dump

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

While reading Tuesday night's paper regarding the great deeds of the local Board of Health, I nearly laughed myself to death. I could not help it, especially the one about stopping some poor guy selling hot dogs on the market. It really tickled me.

Seems to me every spring about May some one is kind enough to put posters around town reminding citizens to clean up their property or else. Some people will comply with this law while others will throw trash around and yet nothing ever seems to be done about it. For instance within three minutes walk from Front St. I can show you one of the best mixtures of garbage and trash you would care to look at. The looks of the place are bad enough but there are large rats breeding in this mess. If the Health Board wants something to quibble about why don't they get around and see these conditions instead of making people laugh to death over a hot dog.

I dare Mayor Allin and his Health Board to inspect this ungodly sight. I imagine if this mess was adjacent to Mr. Allin's property or any member of his council something would be done about it but pronto.

P.S. Fire Chief Vance can verify these statements. He has had the doubtful pleasure of fighting fires on this property on different accasions.

Address: Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.)

FUTILITY OF BUCKING THE ALMANAC

As of today, blankety-blank-blank, I have not laid a wood or even a Hovey (God rest Charley's soul) wicker on the bowling green for a whole week. I give you readers fair warning. Until this therapeutic test is over I shall not be in a mood to humor any one.

I saw in your column, an imperturable reader rises to remark at this juncture, where anyone sweating a lot won't throw poison off from the system. When I get hot sweat pops out on me something awful. What can I do to make it throw the poison off the system? (S. W. P.)

I was going to tell you the first thing to do: make a bonfire of all the old almanacs. But it is too late for that now. Might as well tell you drafts don't cause pneumonia and dampness does not cause rheumatiz, for all your life you have Ben Told differently.

Sweat, whether scanty, normal or profuse, consists virtually of nothing but salt and water. It makes no difference whether it is induced by physical exertion, by hot weather, by the application of artificial heat or by illness or by medicine.

The physiological purpose of sweating is not to "throw off" any "toxic waste" or other "poisons" conjured up by the quack and nostrum gentry to make you buy their goods. The purpose is to regulate the body temperature.

Readers who may have a copy of the booklet Call it Cri (it deals with the prevention and treatment of respiratory diseases, winter cough, bronchectasis, sinus trouble etc.—for copy send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope) may notice that I recommend a hot mustard foot bath as first aid treatment for acute coryza, acute bronchitis, acute laryngitis, acute penumonia or what have you. A hot mustard foot bath induces sweating. Well? That makes no difference Whether the patient sweats or not the h. m. f. b. relieves congestion by withdrawing blood to the vast network of surface vessels.

Simple minded folk readily imagine one can reduce superfluous flesh by taking one or another kind of sweat bath, or perhaps by wearing a cover or garment which induces excessive sweating. All the weight lost by sweating is merely the weight of the water and salt excreted through the skin—and in most instances it is made up within 36 hours by the extra salt and water consumed to quench thirst. It is advisable to take some extra salt whenever more than the usual amount of water is taken, in hot weather or after profuse sweating induced by artificial heat or by vigorous work, play or exercise. The loss of salt in sweat is likely to bring on heat cramps or heat exhaustion if not replenished along with the drinking water. Sometimes shrewd "treatment" merchants sell a gullible customer glorified sweat baths along with a restricted diet which really reduces slacker flesh, and the poor geek continues with the silly baths, which the salesman or saleswoman assures her account for the fat "melting away." Too bad it doesn't melt some of the fat out of her head so she might understand that a reasonable amount of general exercise daily, such as two or three miles of oxygen on the hoof or maybe doing her own housework, would really help dispose of the flabbiness and superfluous fat.

The control of excessive or foul sweating is described in the pamphlet Excessive Sweating, sent on written request (a clipping will not suffice) if you provide stamped self-addressed envelope.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Cause for Alarm

Is dizziness caused by fast movement of head (such as when answering some one's call) any cause for alarm? (M. K.)

Answer—No, but it is not normal and therefore it calls for medical advice.

Twentieth Century Treatment

Can truthfully say the injection treatment of piles is all you say it is. Father suffered with them for years, finally, on your recommendation, had injection treatments, and without pain or inconvenience to speak of he was cured. (Mrs. S. C. H.)

Answer—Why not? This is the twentieth century, isn't it? Send stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet It is Stupid to Suffer From Piles.

Flying to Phoenix

Late in October we intend to fly to Phoenix (from whence the letter does not show) and as my mother has high blood pressure I wonder whether it would be safe for her. (Mrs. T. S.)

Answer—In modern planes one with high blood pressure is as safe as one with normal blood pressure.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

EXPRESSION

As unique individuals, we were put into this world to express ourselves, and to do so in the most natural and honest manner that is ours. Expression is life. As Thoreau has so well put it: "There is no more Herculean task than to think a thought about this life and then get it expressed: "

A banker's wife was one of my visitors this summer and with her she brought her paints and brushes that she might give life to her expression of a love of beauty. Another friend brought almost an entire photograph gallery in expression. That banker's wife was a noted physician in New York City.

I recently wrote in this column a brief tribute to the baseball Umpire, and a teacher in the Chicago Theological Seminary, vacationing in Nova Scotia, saw it and was so impressed that he sent two poems that he composed about the Umpire. He had to give expression to a similar regard for this much abuse though excellent servant, who helps so to preserve the honor and popularity of this fine sport.

The earliest reactions of a child are those seeking to express itself, its personality, likes and dislikes. Expression is as natural as breathing, for without it there would be no interest in anything or anybody. It's the way we express ourselves that gives to us an identity and sets us apart. Without expression we would simply wither away!

The only equipment for worthwhile expression is yourself! It's all inside of you, bred into you at birth. Thank God that in this western world we can think as we please and express ourselves in the freest manner! Thoughts are the material that have blessed the world for centuries. And men and women have died to preserve that right of thought expression. A free pass, for example, is the defender of liberty in its purest form.

Again a quotation for Thoreau: "A thinker's weight is in his thought, not in his tread; when he thinks freely, his body weighs nothing. He cannot tread down your grass, farmers."

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

HAMMER AND ANVIL

Voltaire once remarked that all men are either the hammer or the anvil. By this he meant, of course, that we either fashion the events of our lives or submit to the ordeal of the anvil and allow the events to fashion us.

A firm belief in Christian doctrine would hardly lead one to give Voltaire's statement his full approval. But certainly it is true that most of the time we are either hammering circumstances or being hammered by circumstances. Sometimes it seems that we are under the hammer more often than we are above it.

What Voltaire did not see — and what many people who do not share the Christian outlook on life have failed to see—is that powerful as circumstances are nevertheless not all-powerful. A man's spirit comes into the picture if he really is a man, and this factor is more potent than all the circumstances of life put together. Greatest of all, what theologians call the grace of God comes in to make a difference—and what a difference it does make.

The hammer is heavy and the circumstances of life are hard to withstand, but the spirit of man is a thing of beauty and power and the grace of God rises like a majestic mountain peak above them all.

Despite Heavy Rain Tweed Fair Has Excellent Exhibit In Produce of Farm and Home

(By Staff Reporter)

Rainfall put a damper on the Tweed fall fair held Wednesday and despite a full program of exhibits and events only a very small crowd braved the elements to attend the fair.

But in spite of the wet weather stockmen paraded their horses and cattle, the Tweed Calf Club members strutted their calves in the show ring and many other events were run off despite the bad turn in the elements.

Holding true to the form of previous fairs there was an excellent horse show with numbers of district farmers showing their best horse flesh. Showing in the heavy horse classes were Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company, W. F. Scott of Campbellford and Dorion Cassidy of Erinsville. In the agricultural classes were C. Downey of Crookston and Cecil Bateman of Springbrook, while in the light horse classes John Sheridan of Stirling and Wilfred Lindsay of Campbellcroft showed road horses, and Kelly, of Peterborough, Elmer Gerow of Picton and G. Doucette of Foxboro, were showing in the Hackney classes.

Heavy Holstein Class

Heaviest showman in the Holstein Classes was Bernard Hunt of Tweed, while shorthorns were shown by D. Cassidy of Erinsville; Ayrshires by Elmer Wood, Ivanhoe and Jerseys by Garnet Kerr of Campbellford. Herefords were shown by Norman Whytock of Madoc and James Kinlin of Stoco. Poled Angus breeders represented were Fred Holmes of Queensboro and Ronald Ekblad of Actinolite.

Members of the Hungerford Calf Club, including three young girls, with their calves put on a good show as they paraded their calves for placing and also for showmanship.

Winners in Calf Club

Winners in the first prize group were Vera Martin, Pat Lanigan and Ross Bateman; in the second prize group Don Montgomery, Phyllis Kleinsteuber, John Varty, Raymond Healey and Paul Healey and in the third prize group, Doug. Lynn, Kenneth Cassidy, Eva Morgan, Carl Morgan and Kevin Healey. Judge for the class was Ralph Banbury, agricultural representative for Northumberland county.

Exhibitors in grain and seeds included Clem H. Ketcheson, Miss C. Meiklejohn, Stan Bateman, D. Kleinsteuber, Thomas Lynn, Mrs. Robt. Wheeler and Mrs. C. Fisher.

Poultry exhibitors included Ervine McGuire, George Owens, Tweed, D. Kleinsteuber, Tweed, and Fred Healey and Sons of Stoco. Sheep and swine showmen were Ervine McGuire, Crookston and Donald W. Heath of Stirling.

While possibly not as large as in previous years the exhibits of domestic science, handicrafts and the many classes of ladies' work was still of fine quality.

41 Cheese Exhibited

The cheese show had a large entry with 41 cheese being exhibited. Fair board prizes for cheese went to R. Huffman, Plainfield; Murray Heath, Campbellford, and Gerald Fluke, of Marmora.

The Hastings County Cheese Producers' special for the highest scoring cheese made in the county went to John Doyle, Marmora; Murray Heath, Doug. Mumby, Roslin and L. Courneyea, Stoco; Tweed Steel Works for best cheese in show — Alvin Bosley, Tweed; Murray Heath, R. Huffman and Ed. Richardson, Thomasburg; Keyes Supply special — G. Fluke and R. Huffman; W. T. Watkins Co., Huffman, Richardson and Ervine Moore, Marlbank; Snare's Billiards — Mumby and Fluke; Hunter's Veneers—Courneyea; Madoc Cheese Board — Heath and Moore; Ottawa Farm Journal, B. O'Coin, Ivanhoe, Fluke, C. Clarke, Queensboro.

Dodged Rain Drops

Tommy Mason as master of ceremonies for the novelty events worked under difficulties all afternoon as grandstand performers were forced to dodge rain drops to get through their acts.

The prize for the oldest man on the grounds went to George Meikeljohn of Tweed at 90 years of age. The oldest lady was Mrs. Chloe Vance of Tweed at 81 years. Mr. and Mrs Ed. Rivers of Tweed took the prize for the largest family—10 children.

Youthful singers to win prizes were: boys, George Fleury, Stoco, and Pat King, Tweed. Girls: Donna Reynor and Kathleen Burke, both of Tweed.

The Havelock Kiltie Band under Pipe Major Harry Anderson were a feature attraction at the fair. Professional entertainers Mac McIntosh as master of ceremonies with Ernie Cavell as magician, Ernie Bruce as Scotch musician, Dorothy Steadman, acrobatic dancer and Fred Smale, pianist.

25 in Baby Show

The baby show saw the effects of reduced attendance but 25 young hopefuls were entered by proud mothers. Judged by Mrs. Harold Varty and Mrs. Len Taylor of Tweed were as follows: Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thurston, Tweed; Murray James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael LaBarge, Actinolite; Harvey Dennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Blake, and Steven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Barry, both of Tweed, who were tied; John, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Hunt, Tweed; Donald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Fobert, Tweed; Marlene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Genereaux, and Tillie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Fleming.

Two heats each of two classes of horse racing were run, the third heat in each class having to be cancelled owing to wet track.

ADDITIONAL SUITS FILED

Cleveland, O., Sept. 14 (AP)—Additional law suits seeking $4,909,527 from Canada Steamship Lines, limited, were filed Wednesday in Federal Court in behalf of heirs of 85 persons killed last Sept. 17 in the Noronic ship fire at Toronto.

In other suits now pending in the United States Court of Appeals the steamship company has sought to limit liability to $445,000. These suits involve claims of about $6,500,000, for death, personal injury or property loss.

The Noronic disaster claimed 119 lives.

Rain Insurance Will Help Fair "Out of Red"

Tweed's Fair Board made a mistake this year in their dates. And the result was that the annual exposition wound up on a dull note with heavy rain drowning out the Toronto entertainment, the horse races, and just about everything else.

The big question of the moment among fair officials yesterday afternoon was the rain insurance they had taken out "just in case." For a while it looked as if the misty rain (just enough to show on car windshields and not enough to make things really wet) of the early afternoon Wednesday wouldn't be heavy enough to warrant the application for insurance. But later on, the mist turned into a real rain, and while it meant a dismal ending to a lot of work, official shoulders heaved a little sigh of relief.

On the platform in front of the grandstand, Tommy Mason worked hard to keep things moving, but the rain made it difficult. Horse races were finally called off as the track at the south end of the grounds became a sea of mud. And the entertainers made a gallant try to amuse the diehards who stood in the wet to watch them, but they hadn't a chance.

Kids Made Day

It was the kids who made the day, if anyone did. They didn't seem to mind the rain as they showed their animals, and when the rain came down hardest, they were still on the platform engaging in a singing contest. Hair plastered to their heads, they refused to give up, and emcee Mason and pianist Gordon Smale stuck it out with them.

The log sawing contestants had it rough, too. The saw was wet, the pine log was wet, the platform was wet—but they stuck at it, too, and finally got the log cut.

Inside the main building, exhibitors were removing their produce and craft showings as early as four o'clock in the afternoon. The building was crowded with people who didn't like the outside atmosphere. On the midway, the ferris wheel, which had been crowded with screaming children earlier in the afternoon, spun in the air, empty. The attendant was content to sit under cover.

The outside exhibitors of machinery and other products stood it a long as they could, but finally they, too, joined the long line of cars wending their way out of the rain-soaked park. The Tweed Fair was over for another year.

VICE 'FLOURISHES'

Dangerous Tie-up

The report said:

"Perhaps the worst aspect of the Windsor situation lay in the many evidence of wholesale betting and gambling that could not have been carried on without the knowledge of all members of the police department..."

Two cases involving Detroit persons "show conclusively the dangerous tie-up between the Windsor bookies and the big-time gangster syndicate in Detroit." There was "other evidence in the files of the Detroit police to definitely prove this assertion."

"It is a matter of grave concern and this set-up would probably never have existed if the Windsor police had taken vigorous action on the bookies some five years ago."

There was a "decided lack of confidence by citizens of the existing law enforcement agencies in Windsor."

The public feeling included not only the police themselves, but also the crown attorney's office and, to a lesser degree, the court. Windsor recently had become divided into two "camps"—persons wanting a stiffer law enforcement and those who believe Windsor "is no worse than some other cities."

Discipline Slack

The inspectors lauded the work of the Windsor detective and fingerprint departments but said discipline in the force in general is slack" and the morale is not of the highest order." They said Windsor's 170-man force is undermanned."

They made six recommendations:

1. A permanent morality division should be set up as soon as possible. It should be directed by an inspector and be big enough to provide for a rigorous round-the-clock investigation and raiding party."

2. Morality-division personnel should be carefully selected and should be rated "equally in status and pay" with those men in the detective division.

Should Enlarge Building

3. The police building should be "greatly enlarged" and "a precinct with a sub-station" should be established in the southeastern section of the city.

4. Fifty men should be added to the force.

5. The chief constable and his deputy should be required to "give an accounting of their stewardship" periodically to the police commission.

6. Windsor's business sections, now drafted into beats for police-protection purposes, should be revamped "so that a constable patrolling on foot may properly be held responsible for the locked-up property."

The inspectors said their examination of police commission records showed Windsor had a full-time morality squad at one stage. The peak number of men on the squad was seven, in 1946.

"On Feb. 3, 1949, the matter of maintaining a separate morality squad was discussed by the commissioners and the chief and the deputy chief. It may or may not be significant but the morality squad was abolished forthwith and this morality work was carried out subject to the directions of the chief constable or the deputy chief. . ."

The inspectors referred to the case early this year of Joseph Assef, a convicted bootlegger.

"It developed that Assef was peddling liquor in Windsor and surrounding districts in a very extensive manner."

Interest in Names

When Provincial Police charged Assef, "interest focused on the names which appeared in an address book of customers which included members of the Windsor police department."

"Assef appeared before Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan and the matter became public and was carried in detail in the press."

(The magistrate's accusation of "laxity" in city police enforcement led to a public inquiry conducted by Crown Attorney Douglas Bell of Chatham, as special counsel for the Windsor police commission.)

The police commission, the inspectors wrote, concurred with Mr. Bell's finding that the hearing disclosed no specific instance of maladministration by anyone connected with the Windsor police department.

"Mr. Bell also indicated that it is his opinion there was a lack of esprit de corps in the Windsor police department."

Of the operation of disorderly houses, "in close proximity" to police headquarters, the inspectors said:

"It is common knowledge that there was plenty of traffic to many of these places which operated openly and, in some instances, for considerable periods without being molested by the police.

"It is true there were what might be termed 'abortive raids' on some of these places where some 'fall guy' would take the 'rap'.

"There have been many ugly rumors about members of the morality squad ever since Sgt. A. Innes (now retired) took charge, which have continued down through the years up to the present time."

Identify Man as 'A'

The inspectors referred to a man they identified only as "A" who "has been in charge of betting and (horse-race) wire service in Windsor for almost the last decade and is still reported actively engaged in the racket."

"Recent developments also show that there are handbooks operating in Detroit which are under the sponsorship of 'A'". This becomes a most serious matter since the gambling interests in Detroit are vested in notorious gangsters."

The attempted murder of a man identified as "C", for which "B" got 20 years, and the mysterious disappearance of "D" and "E" are connected with "A", the Windsor gambling kingpin, the inspectors said.

Later, men identified as "H" and "J" were arrested in Detroit for operating a handbook and "H" had said he was working for "A" and got his pay in a Windsor hotel.

"These two cases show conclusively the dangerous tie-up between the Windsor bookies and the big-time gangster syndicate in Detroit."

Records for the last five years "indicate that the few officers engaged in the (anti-gambling) duty have been fairly active and perhaps tried to stamp out this type of crime, but, at the best, they only succeeded in placing a check on some of the many violators."

Continue to Flourish

"In spite of all their efforts, bawdy houses, betting houses, hand-books, and bootlegging establishments continued to flourish."

The report said: "Authorities in Detroit blame Windsor for permitting the wire service to operate, claiming that the betting results emanate from Windsor, and it must be admitted that they might not be far wrong.

"Two of the leading Detroit newspapers have covered the Windsor set-up and know quite a few of the answers. It is claimed that the local paper, the Windsor Star, has given the police department an 'unfavorable press' that is a question.

"As may be expected, there can be inaccuracies in their stories, or blame may be foisted on the police department when not at fault, but for the most part their criticism is mostly on the theme of injustice. The matter of inequality in sentences meted out to offenders may lay outside this survey but much of the grief at Windsor rests with their morality department. . .

Windsor police salaries in general compared "very favorably" with those of other police forces.

Although discipline and morale did not seem up to scratch, the force had "many fine men and officers who have been doing a good job under trying conditions and in time their services will be recognized."

AGAINST SYSTEM

Ottawa, Sept. 14 (CP) —Senator R. B. Horner (PC-Saskatchewan) told the Senate Wednesday that the grading system used in the marketing of hogs ought to be abolished—then farmers wouldn't have to run their pigs around the pen to bring them down to weight.

He said the system whereby top prices were paid only on hogs that scaled between certain weights was an antiquated method that had hung over from the days when Canada was trying to please the British bacon market. As it had turned out any trouble Canadian bacon had had on the British market was not the fault of the hogs at all, but lay in the curing methods.

Follows Wife, Found Guilty Under 1361 Act

London, Sept. 14 (Reuters) —A court of Old Hill, Staffordshire, yesterday searched back in its files to the year 1361 to find an act under which it could take action against a man who since June had followed his estranged wife home from work daily.

"You have behaved like a Chinese inquisitor," the chairman told Kenneth Gilbert, whose wife brought the charges against him.

Gilbert said he was seeking proof that she was going out with other men.

Under an act of 1361, he was placed on probation for one year "for acting in a manner calculated to blemish the peace.

Spouse Prompts Jimmy Stewart To Change Tune

London — (CP) — Film star Jimmy Stewart, for years one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, would like to forget that he ever said anything in favor of single-blessedness.

On his arrival in London with his bride of one year, the former Mrs. Gloria Hatrick McLean, he ran smack into trouble over something he said on the subject more than 10 years ago.

In England to star in a new picture entitled "No Highway," Stewart quickly admitted defeat and retracted one by one the 10 hints he offered back in 1940 on how to remain a bachelor.

Now 42 and his hair thinning and grey, the film star threw up his hands in despair as the newspaper interviewers persisted.

"I give up," he cried. "You see I've been caught."

Then together, he and his wife went through the dog-eared press cuttings setting forth what 10 years ago he regarded as "sage advice."

Here is some of the inside-stuff he handed out then:

"Learn to cook and sew; a helpless man is sunk."

"Well, you still can't sew nor cook," remarked Mrs. Stewart.

Share for Safety

"Share rooms with other bachelors, then a girl cannot visit you 'because you are lonely'," Jimmy had advised.

There was no comment from either Gloria or her husband.

"When you dine with a girl choose the most difficult dishes— then she will never dare to say her cooking is better."

"Well, I can't cook anyway," shrugged Mrs. Stewart.

"Be gentle but firm about your great need of freedom."

"Why, he just loves being married," said his wife.

But point No. 10 got him out of his difficulties. He had advised: "Wait until you meet that certain girl; then drop all pretence."

"You just saved yourself there," laughed Mrs. Stewart.

Jimmy agreed and called it a day.

TODAY it's the theatre suit or after-five dress, topped by a fanciful hat that is likely to win sartorial honors where bright lights gleam. Honors too for the woman who knows the effect of a perfectly coiffed head, the hair arranged to complement the hat. Just note how perfectly the lines of this Nancy Howard hat are set off by the bangs of the Guro coiffure that forms a frame for the face as well as for the hat. White swan plumage with a cluster of self-color geraniums makes the helmet-like hat.

Diplomat's Wife Flouts Protocol, Stirs Iran Women

Teheran, Iran — (AP) — The lively go-getting wife of the new U.S. ambassador to Iran is stirring up a lot of trouble for husbands in this ancient Eastern land.

Since the beginning of Persian civilization the men have been top dogs. Women have been going without veils for only 14 years and even today the average wife's place is strictly in the home.

But in the last few weeks Mrs. Henry F. Grady — Lucretia to her friends — has delighted long-suppressed Persian women by scoffing at tradition.

"If you show your independence, you can have the vote for women in one year," the exuberant Mrs. Grady tells her new Persian friends.

She is making plenty of friends. Her ""Thursday morning" meetings are the talk of Teheran.

Over iced tea or fruit juice, 20 to 30 Iranian women settle down each Thursday for a gabfest with Mrs. Grady. They discuss earnestly such social problems as illiteracy, woman's suffrage and ways to improve the capital's insanitary water supply which flows to Teheran homes in open gutters.

It's a startling change from the usual round of polite teas and cocktail parties. Some Persian women were a little taken aback at first by a ambassador's wife who flouts protocol to jump into all sorts of controversial subjects.

Each week different women are invited to the Thursday meetings. Most go away gossiping enthusiastically at the way an American woman operates.

Active in Politics

Mrs. Grady is no inexperienced operator. She gets her bounce, apparently, from a long line of California-Spanish ancestors. She says she made her first speech at the age of two in the California Senate — propped on the desk of her father, the late Reginaldo Del Valle, who for years was prominent in West Coast politics.

In the 1930s she was a vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee. She has lived in many parts of the world. Her husband, who has a reputation in the State Department for getting things done in the world's trouble spots, came to Iran after serving as ambassador in Greece and India.

Not content to settle down in the traditional hostess role of an ambassador's wife, 58-year-old Mrs. Grady has taken on a fulltime job of selling the American way of life as her husband's partner.

The women's vote is only one thing she is interested in (she's promoting a United Nations program for Radio Teheran, for instance). But her first action here was to stimulate the tiny woman's suffrage movement.

"If the men won't give us the vote, then let's go on strike," was the fiery comment of one chic Iranian woman at a Thursday meeting.

Her friends gasped and giggled at such an unheard of idea. But a few minutes later they were tossing it back and forth with approval."

"Some of the husbands are in for a bad time," commented one foreign diplomat's wife.

If Mrs. Grady follows the pattern she set in Greece, some of the Iranian husbands — government ministers, businessmen, professors, etc. — will be drawn into the discussion circle before long.

Belleville Presbyterial of WMS Holds Fall Executive Meeting

Mrs. C. D. McLellan, president of the Belleville Presbyterial of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada, presided over their Autumn executive meeting held in Grace Church, Napanee, on Tuesday. Ferns, and gladioli enhanced the beauty of the chancel and the organ prelude created a receptive atmosphere for a brief devotional which Mrs. McLellan opened with the hymn "For the Beauty of the Earth".

She took the 21st Chapter of Acts for her Scripture reading the account of one of Paul's journeys where he was going to Jerusalem even it was prophesied that he would be imprisoned, but Paul said, "I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus". And when he would not be dissuaded his friends said, "we ceased trying, saying 'The will of the Lord be done".

In her meditation Mrs. McLellan showed the executive that "we can do anything up to a certain point; even to the point which one thinks impossible, but from there on we have to have help. But all things are possible with God. We have no right to keep asking God to advance until we ourselves have done all we can. We are asked to advance. We are expected to march on. Until we try the impossible the possible has not been attained. Today we seem to have gotten away from the feeling that when we have done our utmost then God takes over."

To close this worship service the hymn "Creation's Lord, We Give Thee Thanks", was sung.

Mrs. Jas. Haggerty, president of Grace Church W.M.S., graciously welcomed the executive and brought greetings and best wishes for the success of the planning for the work which is one of the most important phases of the church. Mrs. McLellan added her greetings.

$19,000 Allocation

Mrs. Ralph Sills, recording secretary, read the minutes of the last executive meeting and the roll call was answered by all but three of the executive and 17 presidents of auxiliaries. Mrs. Frank Mills, treasurer, announced that the allocation for Belleville Presbyterial is $19,000. Mrs. Lincoln Elliott gave a report of the corresponding secretary's work and also a resume of the school for leaders held in Whitby recently and introduced the new study book, "The United Church Re-enters Japan", as well as some other new literature. It was reported that a full conference branch will be meeting in 1951 in the Belleville Presbyterial and a committee was appointed to find location.

Very encouraging reports were presented by various secretaries. Mrs. O. Bertrand said three new Baby Bands had been organized; Mrs. W. B. May reported seven new Mission Bands; Mrs. M. Davidson asked for the co-operation of the presidents to organize Mission Circles saying "The gospel of Jesus Christ is a good thing. We must propagate our faith. Teen age girls are ready for it." Mrs. Fred Russell had an interesting report showing many articles of clothing had been sent where requisitioned including toys, games and beautiful dolls with complete wardrobes being sent to Matheson Hospital.

The women of Grace Church entertained the executive and guests to a very fine luncheon where the spirit of friendliness and love was in full evidence.

Mrs. H. Empey, 3rd vice president, opened the afternoon session with a devotional taken from the booklet "Our Living Faith" based on Prayer. She read verses 5 to 15 of the 6th Chapter of St. Matthew's gospel and closed with the following prayer: "O Lord, we trust Thy wisdom, and we would be content to wait patiently for Thee. Teach us Thy will, that we may ask only what is in accordance with it. Strengthen us with Thy strength that we may rise above all fretting and impatience and meet life with serenity and poise. Send Thy grace upon us that we may see beyond the shadows of present suffering the foregleams of the morning which yet shall dawn for all who love Thee."

Regret Resignation

It was with much regret that the resignation of Miss Florence Down was accepted. Mrs. M. Denton, 224 King Street, Trenton, was appointed secretary of Christian Stewardship.

The president closed the session with a prayer for guidance: "O God the Father of us all, who art the source of righteousness and peace, mercifully receive the prayers we offer for our anxious and troubled world. We confess that we have had our part in those evils that are manifest today and we ask Thy forgiveness. Grant to each one of us grace to do Thy will and to understand one another. Guide those, who by their counsels, lead the peoples of the world. Strengthen and unite us all in Thy love, that we may become instruments of Thy peace and have our share in the healing of the nations. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord."

STRANGLED TO DEATH

Scarborough, England, Sept. 14. (Reuters)—Mrs. Elsie May Morgan, 45, was strangled to death last night by a vacuum cleaner. Her apron was drawn into the cleaner and the neckband was tight around her throat when she was found by her 12-year-old son.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

In India they bathe statues of their deities in food. Perhaps the very fact that many Indians are on a near starvation diet impels them to cover the statue of Gomateshvara with an elaborate menu including cocoanut, butter, dates, coffee and milk.

Indian curry powder is used all over the world and in all climates. If it were merely one spice, it would become quickly tiring. But it is made up of about 20 individual ingredients, most of them on the hot side. Native Indians in their homes use freshly ground spices for their curries.

Most of the prominent brands of curry powder which you buy in stores are well blended and consistent in quality.

Leftover meats, fish or poultry can be made quickly into fresh tasting dishes with a curry sauce. To give the sauce the proper zing, include some sauted onions and a few tablespoons of sherry.

Bottled chutney is usually served with curry. Use the easy double boiler hand, chop several tablespoons and add it to the curry just before serying.

Rice is a traditional accompaniment with curry. Use the easy double boiler method for making it light and dry.

Lamb Curry with Rice
4 Servings

Melt 2 tablespoons fat in a heavy saucepan. Add 1-4 cup finely chopped onion and 1-2 teaspoon finely chopped garlic. Simmer until onion turns yellow.

Remove from the flame. Add 2 tablespoon flour and 2 teaspoons curry powder, stirring well.

Gradually add 1 1-2 cups hot chicken broth (fresh or canned). Stir mixture well. Return to a slow flame.

Cut up 2 cups of leftover lamb into thin slices about 3-4 inch square. Simmer meat slowly with the sauce 15 to 20 minutes. Stir frequently. (If meat is very tender and breaks apart easily, cook the mixture in the top part of a double boiler over simmering water and stir only slightly.)

Add 2 tablespoons dry sherry wine, add 1-2 tablespoon salt or more to taste.

Cut enough fresh apple to make 1 cup of slices, the same size as the meat. Add apples to the saucepan and continue cooking until apple slices are tender.

To make rice: wash 1 cup rice in 4 cold waters. Place in top part of double boiler with 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vinegar and 1-2 teaspoon oil. Cook in double boiler 40 minutes without stirring.

BEAUTY

Losing good looks by a neck

Among the middle-aged seekers after good looks, the neck that has lost youthful lines and shows crinkled tissues is one of the most common pulchritude griefs. Often the face has remained smooth and attractive, mainly because the skin has received fastidious cosmetic care. The neck, that has done nothing to deserve neglect, falls into a state of semi-dissolution, and the mischief is done. This condition can be avoided, as every thirty-girl should realize. She should have a weather eye on the future. It is not just how you look today but how you are going to look ten years hence. Beauty defects are hateful at all ages.

One of the best insurances against fiddle strings is to hold the head in a regal manner. If you are in the habit of keeping your chin lowered, as many women are, it stands to reason that—with muscles relaxed—the tissues will lose tone. When that happens, the skin falls into furrows. By carrying your head on the level you will side-step that trouble and your general appearance will be good—chest high, shoulders with an easy pose, backbone extended.

The neck, like every other feature, should conform to the general physiognomy of the body. A short, thick neck is to be expected on the dumpling-shaped figure.

The graceful neck, besides being slender, must harmonize with the shoulders and bust, as well as with the head. But there is a beauty catch there. This type of neck requires plenty of creaming and massaging, as it is likely to become scrawny if one loses weight. The musculature can be strengthened by turning the head from side to side with a strong pull on the fibres. If yours shows signs of depleted tissues, sit in a straight-backed chair, hands on the hips, chest lifted, and turn the head first to fade when the leaves begin to the right, with chin uplifted, then to the left with the chin high in the air. After several turns, relax and take several deep breaths, then at it again.

Let them learn to breathe properly, and their necks will build up and round out.

Beauticians claim that it is amazing how much can be done to transform scrawny throats, disfiguring hollows and discolored skin into a firm, white colum with beautifully rounded contour. It cannot be done in a hurry, because there is no beauty magic. Time will bring improvement.

Opera singers have beautiful necks, mainly because they give them cosmetic care and because they breathe properly. Shallow breathers seldom have full, fine throats. Let them learn to breath properly, air-conditioning the lower cells of the lungs, and their necks will build up and round out.

In this season of the year mild bleaching treatments are necessary, as the marks of the sun don't fall.

Slim Down Heavy Ankles

To help slim your legs a bit, give them a nightly massage with a good cream or lotion. Helps keep them nice and smooth, too.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO you envy Betty Grable her beautiful legs? Does it happen that yours do not qualify? A little too plump of calf, maybe, or too thin? You can do something about this problem if you have patience and persevere. It is a matter of getting in muscle form Exercise will develop the skinnies; correct exercise will make fat cells dissolve, will restore youthful, graceful lines.

Walking tip-toe is one way to slim down bulky ankles even if they have sturdy bonework beneath the adipose tissue. The busy housewife can get in plenty of that kind of action as she goes about her duties, answering the front doorbell then the back, chasing to the telephone, tearing up stairs, going down again. She should wear heeless slippers when doing this if she is to get speedy results.

Bend the Ankle

Another means of working off fat is to bend the ankle, first down, then up and repeat. Sit on a straight-back chair with the knees crossed. A dozen up and down motions with the upper foot, then cross the legs the other way, make the left foot work. Then rotate your ankles in complete circular movements.

Message is helpful if it is heavy, if the fingers and palms press deeply into the flesh, if the calves are pinched between fingers and thumbs. Use a heavy emollient; a by-product of this treatment will be satin-ssmooth skin and vanishing goose flesh if it is present.

For undeveloped legs, there is nothing better than rope-jumping. It makes the muscles strong, they fill out, create better lines.

The trouble is that the average pair of legs is almost atrophied because of lack of use. No woman walks these days if she can find means of transportation. The career girl who sits at a desk all day cannot expect to retain the fine lines of her figure Activity is a law of life. We were expected to move with agility and so keep the musculature strong, vibrant, in a normal, healthy condition.

PROTEST BAN ON FREE BEER

Somewhere in Korea, Sept. 13 (AP)— A howl of protest from the allied front lines yesterday greeted the United States army's ban on free beer for combat troops.

Combat men have been receiving a ration of one small tin of beer daily. The army said it acted because of adverse public opinion in the United States.

Henceforth beer will be available only to soldiers with change jingling in their pockets or with comrades free to make shopping trips behind the lines.

Pie Please!

Sincere thanks should go to the nameless cook who first made pies with fruit instead of the meat which, for generations, had been used in the "pyes" enjoyed in England. The fruit pies originated through necessity when, after the American Revolution, meats and poultry were scarce. Without doubt, this unknown person gave the North American continent its favorite dessert.

The homemaker who is able to make good pastry holds the key to popularity in her home and community. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, say that there is no good or bad luck in pastry making. It is accuracy in measuring and care in handling that counts. There are many excellent methods and recipes for pastry. The following modern method of mixing pastry makes it almost failure-proof.

Plain Pastry

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour or 3 1-3 cups pastry flour
1 1-2 teaspoons salt
6 tablespoons cold water
3-4 cup lard or mild-flavored fat

Mix flour and salt. Remove 1-2 cup of the flour and blend the water into it, making a smooth paste. Cut the fat into the remaining flour until the pieces are the size of small peas. Mix in the flour paste, combine until the dough clings together. Chill before rolling. Makes enough pastry for 3 nine-inch pie shells; or 1 double crust and 1 nine-inch shell; or 3 dozen two-inch tart shells.

There are, however, several points which are worth keeping in mind.

Too much flour makes tough pastry.

Too much shortening makes the pastry dry and crumbly.

Too much liquid makes heavy pastry.

Too much handling spoils the tender texture.

It is this last point on which the novice often stumbles. In her efforts to make the perfect pie, she works with the pastry too long.

The pastry is most important in pie-making but it is the filling that gives its character. Apple pie with cheese is an old favorite. Here the cheese is added to the pie crust with excellent results.

Apple Pie With Cheese Crust

Line pie plate with pastry. Cover with layer of thinly sliced apples. Allowing about 2 tablespoons of sugar to each apple, sprinkle sugar over layer of apples. Dot with butter. Repeat until the pie is well filled. Roll 1-2 cup grated cheese into the pastry for the upper crust. Cover apples with the cheese crust. Bake in a hot oven 425 degrees F., for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees F., and bake for 20 to 30 minutes longer, or until apples are tender.

Plum Pie

Pie paste
2-3 cup sugar
Dash of cloves (optional)
3 tablespoons flour
Few grains salt
3 cups sliced plums (about 1 1-2 pounds)

Line a 9" pie plate with pastry. Mix sugar, cloves, flour and salt. Sprinkle a small portion of mixture over unbaked pie shell. Combine sliced plums with remainder of mixture and fill shell. Arrange a lattice work of pie paste over top of pie. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F., for 30 minutes. Yield: six servings.

Note: As an alternate to cloves, sprinkle 1-4 teaspoon almond flavoring over plums.

Chocolate Topped Pie

1 baked 9" pie shell
1 1-2 cups milk
1 tablespoons gelatine
1-4 cup cold water
2 egg yolks
1-3 cup sugar
1-8 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
1-2 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 egg whites
2 tablespoons grated chocolate

Scald milk in top of double-boiler. Soak gelatine in cold water for five minutes. Beat egg yolks with sugar, salt and nutmeg. Add hot milk gradually, then cook in top of double-boiler until thickened, about 10 minutes. Remove and stir in soaked gelatine and vanilla. Chill until partially set. Then beat with rotary beater and lastly fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into the baked pie shell and sprinkle with the grated chocolate. Chill until set. Yield: one 9-inch pie.

Fashion Flashes

THE GATHERING of the clans best describes the scene in the stores as new merchandise arrives, for everything is tartan. Red, green and yellow tartan tweed for a three-quarter topcoat with raglan shoulder. Palid is used on the bias for pocket flaps. With it a trim town suit in a tiny green and black check tweed that has a monotone effect.

EASY TO DRESS up a basic suit or coat, come Autumn. Many shops will stock chokers fashioned of a single mink skin, or fashioned of leopard or Persian lamb. With these tiny fur chokers come matching bracelets of fur easily slipped over the sleeve to form a cuff-like band.

DISCREET glitter adorns some of the newest wedding dresses. Candlelight silk satin for a beauty, adorned with four floating, scalloped-edged panels of cream colored Chantilly type lace, discreetly trimmed with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The neckline is tulle-edged and is trimmed with appliques of the lace set with the pearls and sequins.

JUNIORS should be delighted with their new fashions. Designed for mid-teens is a slim sheath of a frock in black velvet with long tight sleeves of black ribbed woolknit. Ribbing is also used for the high, round neckline.

FAR AND AWAY the best hats for Fall are of the smallish order, with many handled on casual, even mannish, lines. A side-tilted cloche of black hatter's plush is covered with tiny loose triangle tabs of black velvet lined with shocking pink and with a triangle of pearls beneath each tab.

A REVIVAL of gray flannel, foretold for some time, has come to pass. A handsome town suit of deep gray men's wear flannel has a narrow collar of black Persian lamb that widens to a square above the three-button, single-breasted closing. Slashed pockets have side tabs.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

How to welcome son's far-away fiancee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our son has just written us that he is engaged to a girl who lives in the distant city where he went last year to take over a position. We have never met the girl or her family, but we want to do the right thing about acknowledging the engagement. (1) Should we wait for the girl to write us, or should we write her first? (2) My son said that in a short time the engagement would be announced in the newspaper there. Would it be proper for us to send a formal announcement to our newspaper here also? Or should the girl's parents send this announcement to the paper here, in their names? (3) Should we send the girl an engagement present? If so, what kind of present? Should our only other child, a 19-year-old daughter, send an engagement present with us, if it is proper for us to send one?

A. T. R.

(1) One of the most important and never-changing rules of propriety is that the parents of the fiance should immediately make a gesture-of-welcome to his fiancee. If she lives near enough, they (or at least the mother) should go at once, after their son has told them the news of his engagement, to call on the girl and her mother, to welcome her into their family. Since your son's fiancee lives at a distance, you may telephone your welcoming words, or write her. Then you should at once write her mother, too, telling her of your happiness in the engagement. (2) It is proper for you and your husband to send a formal announcement of your son's engagement to your local newspaper. Sometimes this kind of announcement begins, "Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wood, of Columbus, Ohio, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Christine Wood, to Mr. George Foster Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Paul Robinson, of 345 Seventh Avenue, this city." (3) It would be proper, a gracious and generous gesture, for you and your husband to send your son's fiancee an engagement present. This isn't necessary, but the fiancee's parents very often do this. And an engagement present should be a personal present for the girl, perhaps an item for her personal trousseau, and very often something that can be marked with her initials or first name. Your daughter should write a note-of-sisterly-greeting to her brother's fiancee (if she didn't, the girl would certainly wonder at her silence), and she may join with you in sending the engagement present, or send a thoughtful gift herself.

On which finger to wear wedding ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married soon. My fiance had an accident, and lost his ring finger. He wants very much to wear a wedding ring, and I want to have him wear one. But now the question is: on which finger should he wear this ring?

L. R.

It is just as correct for a man to wear the wedding ring on the little finger of his left hand as it is for him to wear it on the so-called ring finger.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The "You're Too Good For Me" routine

When a young man tells a girl that it wouldn't be fair to her for them to marry, because she's too good" for him, he's usually right. If she's wise, she'll agree with him whole-heartedly and send him cheerily on his way.

For in 99 cases out of a hundred, when a chap makes such a seemingly noble gesture of renunciation, he does so for either one of two reasons. The most likely reason is that he's looking for a way to make as graceful as possible an exit from a relationship that's getting too close to marriage for comfort. And he chooses the "You're too good for me" routine because he thinks it will not only save the girl's feelings, but also leave with her a memory of himself as a high-minded character who would give up what he most wanted—namely herself—rather than run the risk of making her unhappy by turning out a poor husband. Thus, he can get out of the situation neatly.

Or, he may actually have lived the kind of life he knows no decent girl would approve, and doesn't want to give it up. So he goes eagerly to work to paint an enthusiastic picture of himself as a gay and devilish dog with a past. Usually, he doesn't go into details, but does his self-portrait in generalities of lurid color that convey the impression of a chap headed straight for you-know-where. Then he sorrowfully tells the girl he knows he has forfeited any right to her love, and bows himself out.

One girl who has just written me about such a man seems to have the common sense to give serious consideration to his protests about not being good enough to marry her.

She reports that when she asked for a fuller explanation, at first he countered by telling her to "figure it out for yourself". Pressed for a more explicit answer he told her that he makes a habit of "going out with girls for drinks and free love". She said he didn't seem like that kind of fellow; that she had always believed him to be a decent chap. He replied that everybody thought so, and that he didn't want people to know the sort of person he really was.

"I told him," she goes on to say, "that if he actually did these things, I thought he did them, not because he really likes to, but because he doesn't know how to spend his time and has got in the habit of hanging around with the wrong kind of fellows. He said I had a lot of sense for my age, and that it felt good to tell somebody the truth about himself. And he had tears rolling down his cheeks when he told me that."

The girl's letter concludes with the question: "Do you think that a fellow who tells a girl he is not good enough for her has some good and dacency in him?"

To this, I would say it is certainly possible that he has good in him, but that she had better wait awhile and watch for it to come out before getting too involved with him. I'm inclined to agreed with the man that she has unusual sense for a girl of nineteen, and I hope she will continue to exercise it. Sooner or later, the idea is almost sure to strike her that she can be a good influence on him and unless she listens to the warnings of that common sense—she will toy with the temptation to try and reform him.

It's very flattering to believe you wield such power over an individual that you can make him over. Moreover, it's a thought that has tremendous appeal to a woman's maternal instinct. But many and many a young woman has let herself in for a lifetime of misery by yielding to this temptation, certain that once she has become the wife of a weak man, she can mold him into a strong character.

It can happen, certainly. Once or twice in a hundred years, miracles do occur. But it's one of the greatest gambles in the world, and one hardly worth taking a chance on.

If this chap is sincerely and deeply interested in the girl, he will show her that he intends to reform himself, not depend on anyone else to do it for him. Actions still speak louder than words, or even than the tears that go rolling down the cheeks. The tears and the words may indicate that the young man has his moments of regret over his choice of a way of life that he declares has made him unworthy of the girl. But nothing she says about him suggests that he intends to do anything to change it. On the contrary, his whole attitude appears to be merely a constant reiteration of the theme: "You mustn't like me. I'm no good!"

So—when that well-worn phrase "You're too good for me" hits your ears, don't play deaf. Stop dead in your tracks and listen. Listen for the undertones that will tell you whether the man who speaks the words is trying to call the romance off in a nice polite way, or is so right in what he says that you should agree with him at once.

Wellington on the Lake

SEPTEMBER

The meadow's green with aftermath,
The harvest fields are bare,
And lo! Along the dusty road
The golden rod glows fair;
And on the lakeside hilltop
The sumach's turning red,
And from the dainty hanging nest
The orioles have fled.
And in the evening twilight
We hear the south wind sigh,
It seems like summer's quiet voice
Bidding a sad goodbye.

—Helen B. Anderson

Summer is past—"But far in heaven the while, the sun pours out upon the earth, its quiet smile, the sweetest of the year," in September.

School has again opened its doors after vacation, and no longer are children's voices heard in the park, and on the quiet street. The home next door seems quiet and deserted, since three young visitors, a boy and two girls have left for their home in Oakville. What a happy holiday was theirs, the girls dressing in various costumes and parading the streets, then assisting the boy in making a play house. For after all the quest of human hearts ends in the home.

Canning factories are now operating and many are employed, a number of workers coming in from the north.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Bowerman, Detroit, have been holidaying in the county, guests at Maple Inn, Bloomfield. They called on Mrs. W. H. Anderson and also on friends at Melville. Cyril is a Melville boy, a son of Mr. Bowerman who owned and operated the Melville mill.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Vandewater motored to Ottawa and spent the weekend with their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Douglas, who accompanied them to Wellington for a holiday.

Mrs. W. H. Anderson, Miss Marjorie Blakely and Miss Gena Benson, motored to Picton on Tuesday. Mrs. Anderson and Marjorie were tea hour guests of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Shier, and Miss Benson calling on Mrs. Will Benson and Mrs. Henry Benson, West Main St.

Mrs. Etta Humphrey returned home on Saturday after spending several weeks in Toronto.

Mrs. M. MacArthur and children have returned to Oakville after spending holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Craig Platt.

Mrs. Gladys Vandewater spent Sunday with Miss Gena Benson.

Mr. and Mrs. Putnam and children, Peterborough, were holiday guests of Mrs. Harry Jolley and Donald.

The Rev. Mr. Poulter called on Mrs. Colliver, who is very ill at the home Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Young, Gilead.

A Pleasant Party

In honor of her guest Mrs. (Rev.) T. H. P. Anderson, of Belleville, Mrs. E. Mabee entertained a party of friends at her pleasant home, Main St., on Friday afternoon. The rooms were bright with summer flowers and a very pleasant time was spent. Mrs. Anderson, recalling many incidents with old-time friends. Mrs. Mabee assisted by Mrs. N. Mabee served refreshments. The late Rev. T. H. P. Anderson was some years ago a popular pastor of Hollowell charge. Among those present were Mrs. (Rev.) Poulter, Mrs. (Rev.) Robins, Mrs. (Dr.) Thompson, Mrs. J. L. Ross, Mrs. W. Teskey and Mrs. L. N. McFaul from town, and Mrs. W. Huycke, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. W. Nelson, Mrs. C. Pearsoll and Mrs. W. H. Anderson, former friends from the country.

Marsh Hill W.M.S.

The September meeting of Marsh Hill W.M.S. was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Bartindale, Tuesday afternoon, with nine members and one visitor present. As the program was based on the work in Japan, the flowers which everywhere greeted the eye were in Japanese vases and the arrangements were simple and in harmony with Japanese designs.

Following the usual opening, roll call brought forth several interesting items on Japan. Quite some time was spent on the discussion of the season's program and the books to be used.

Mrs. Alex Tanner took charge of the program. She was assisted by Mrs. F. Finkle, who read a poem by Dr. Kagawa, Mrs. B. Bleecker reading the scripture lesson; Mrs. W. Lindenfield, Mrs. Finkle and Miss Mae Currie quoting prominent world citizens in answer to the query, "Why is it important to direct our attention to Japan this year?" An interesting quiz on Japan followed. Mrs. Bartindale and Mrs. B. Mitts led in prayers for the Japanese people and for ourselves.

The loose collection was $1.25 and a special offering for cards etc., for sick members was also taken.

The hostess served sandwiches, cake and tea, using Japanese china. She was assisted by Miss Doreen Bartindale.

ONE LIFE SAVED BY U.S. NAVY ACTION

SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME FROM CANADA

Likelihood of Canada supplying more arms to equip Atlantic Pact member forces has been voiced by External Affairs Minister Pearson. Canada, he said, can manufacture a surplus of arms over and above that required by our services. This U.S. tank being unloaded at Cherbourg, France, is just one of thousands that will be sent to Europe from Canada and the U.S. if present plans mature.—Central Press Canadian.

State-Run Lottery Popular Down Under

By LOUIS L. LECK
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia—Australians like to gamble and they like lotteries. They like them so much that last year they bought 21,500,000 tickets in 214 drawings of the New South Wales government lottery.

They paid in £6,312,000 ($15,148,800) and received £4,024,000 in prizes. Allowing £136,000 for administration, that left a government revenue of £2,152,000 ($5,164,800).

The New South Wales lottery is only one of several in Australia, but it is by far the largest. It was started in 1932 to provide funds for the state's public hospitals. Nowadays, however, only about half the profits go to the hospitals, the rest augmenting state coffers.

Tickets are 5s. 6d. (66 cents) each and there are 100,000 in each drawing. First prize is £6,000, second £1,000, third £500, fourth £350, fifth £200. There are also 10 £100 prizes, 10 at £50, 10 at £40, 10 at £30, 15 at £20, 200 at £10, and 1,000 at £3.

About once a month there is a special lottery for which tickets are 10s. and first prize is £12,000.

Tickets can be bought through agents who accept orders and buy tickets in the names of their clients for delivery the next day. Winning numbers are drawn from a drum containing 100,000 numbered marbles.

Most offices have syndicates which buy a ticket or two each payday. Lottery tickets are often given as prizes on radio contests.

Two other states—Queensland and Western Australia—run government lotteries on a smaller scale, and in Tasmania a private concern runs periodic lotteries.

Strange feature of the whole business is that three states and Tasmania ban the sale of tickets for lotteries other than their own.

But people take little heed of that, because the Commonwealth delivers letters from any source to the offices of the various lotteries. In fact, the demand for postal notes was so large that the post office issued a special 5s. 6d. note.

Railways Are Testing New Ideas in Refrigeration

Ottawa — (CP) — Canadian scientists have been working with the railway people to make cold cars colder.

They've come up with some really chilly cars, too, but there will have to be high-level decision on railway policy before any changes can be effected.

"There are . . . economic and operating problems that are a matter of policy," said the Fisheries Department in releasing the results of the tests. The National Research Council and Fisheries Research Board co-operated with the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways in performing the experiments.

The tests were made to meet demand for refrigerator-car temperatures below 15 degrees Fahrenheit for transportation of frozen fish and quick-frozen fruits and vegetables. Two experimental cars and a standard refrigerator car were used in the transcontinental tests.

The standard Canadian car is cooled with ice and salt in overhead bunkers extending from end to end of the car. These provide uniform cooling and, even in warmest weather, temperatures of 15 degrees can be maintained on long hauls.

In one test, however, one of the experimental cars maintained zero temperatures throughout. It was a C.N.R. car remodelled internally and equipped with two gasoline - driven refrigeration units.

Although the car was a success, one big problem involved the replacement of the gasoline engines by a different type of engine to meet fire regulations.

Other problems included the matter of maintenance crews and costs and the acceptability of such mechanical equipment on United States routings where Canadian cars must be operated and serviced.

The other experimental car was a C.P.R. standard model, cooled with ice and salt, but with new bunkers designed by the N.R.C.

The C.P.R. maintained a temperature approximately five degrees lower than that obtained with the standard bunker. In a test from Prince Rupert, B.C., to Toronto, this car kept its load below 10 degrees.

The Fisheries Department in its report said that previous tests had shown that the addition of 30-per-cent ammonium nitrate to the salt and ice in the bunkers lowered the temperatures a further five degrees.

Analysis showed that the new bunkers would involve a slight increase in capital expenditure, while the motor-driven system not only would involve an increase in capital costs, but also an "appreciable" boost in operating costs.

MacArthur Frowns On Word 'Gooks' For North Koreans

Tokyo, Sept. 14 (AP) — Gen. MacArthur's headquarters frowns on the practice of calling North Koreans "Gooks."

In fact, an article in the official magazine Tips says the person who uses the word is unwittingly guilty of giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

The use of the word, the article said, only provides fuel for propaganda against the democratic countries. Asiatics are insulted and alienated by the word.

Compromise Made Over Street Name In St. Julien

Saint Julien, France, Sept. 14—(Reuters) —The battle of the names in this predominantly-communist town ended in a compromise last night.

The town fathers started the rumpus when they decided to name a street "boulevard Joseph Stalin" and to name the town stadium "Maurice Thorez Stadium" after the French communist leader.

Postal officials warned that mail addressed to Stalin Boulevard would not be delivered. And somebody kept stealing the "Maurice Thorez" sign off the stadium.

Today, the town fathers worked out a solution. They put the old nameplate back on Stalin Boulevard—Boulevard Gambetta.

And they decided that in the future an ordinary painted poster saying "Maurice Thorez Stadium" will be hung up every morning and taken down every night.

Big Three Drive Toward Basic Decisions on W. German Political Security Problems

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Big Three foreign ministers drove today toward basic decisions on western German and security problems, with apparently good prospects of agreement on these points:

1. The United States, and France should take practical measures as rapidly as possible to end the state of war which still exists between them and the west German government.

2. Germany should be given a larger, more-mobile and better-equipped police force to meet the Communist challenge of internal subversion and sabotage.

3. West German security against outright red aggression continues to be primarily a responsibility of the three occupation powers, but at some future time provision must be made for the Germans to share this responsibility.

On the specific proposal that German military units should be formed a part of a unified western defence force, some diplomats believe no firm decision may be made for the time being.

Raises Objections

Foreign Minister Schuman of France, for whom this issue presents tough political problems back home, is understood to have raised objections about action now, in advance of the actual formation of European defence forces under the North Atlantic Treaty.

The conference went into its third day with Schuman, State Secretary Acheson of the United States and Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain scheduled to get together at 10:30 a.m. EDT for another six hours or so of round-table negotiating.

This was originally supposed to be the last day of the three-power talks. But so many problems, including all those of the middle east and far east, have had to be pushed back in the interest of European defence and German political and security issues that it now seems likely the three will meet again next weekend.

Treaty Council to Meet

Their meetings will give way tomorrow to two days of sessions of the 12-country North Atlantic Treaty Council.

Acheson, Bevin and Schuman were understood to have reached substantial agreements by last night that the armies now being built up in western Europe should be combined into a unified force under a single command staff, eventually to be directed by a commander-in-chief.

No formal agreements on this or any other important point have been reached, diplomats reported, and details of how the command set-up should be organized still were being studied today.

Decisions regarding Germany may possibly be advanced today to the point where a formal statement by the three countries can be made tonight.

T.L.C. Endorses Resolutions On Many Subjects

Montreal, Sept. 14 — (CP) — The quietest annual convention in years of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada yesterday endorsed a batch of standard resolutions and underlined its tough new anti-communist policy with a few flourishes.

It was learned that a United Textile Workers' delegate from Brantford, Ont., had been sent to Toronto on assignment after a speech to the Convention Monday. Anthony Valente, president of the International Union in Washington and a fraternal delegate here, sent William Stewart out of town.

At the same time, the T. L. C. credentials committee cut off 20 delegates suspected of red leanings. Among them is R. Kent Rowley of Montreal, Canadian director of the T. W. U.

The convention also asked for federal and provincial action on long-term flood control measures.

Another resolution called for implementation of the Petitcodiac and Passamoquoddy tidal power projects in The Maritimes and the digging of the long - talked - of Chignecto canal.

All have long been advocated by Maritime leaders.

Another major project advocated was the St. Lawrence River ship canal and the convention asked for completion of the Trans-Canada highways.

All resolutions follow normal T. L. C. programs.

Anotner resolution called for legislation against discrimination in employment on grounds of race, creed or color and banning of restrictive covenants in real estate transactions.

The program yesterday was heavy on demands for public works and for subsidized low-rental homes for workers.

The convention is expected to complete its main business by Friday night, although it is possible it may stretch through over Saturday.

Rossler Sentenced To Hang Dec. 15 At Montreal

Montreal, Sept. 14 —(CP) — Husky Tom Rossler, who casually told escorting policemen how he shot down an unarmed RCMP constable, will die on the gallows Dec. 15 for murder.

He was sentenced yesterday after one of the briefest murder trials in the history of the local court of King's Bench. The jury deliberated only 18 minutes before finding Rossler guilty of the slaying of constable Alex Gamman here last May 25 during an unsuccessful bank robbery.

Rossler, 45, pursed his lips and shrugged his shoulders when the verdict was announced. He showed no other outward signs of emotion.

His attitude was similar to that he displayed when captured by a Montana sheriff in a little town south of the Saskatchewan border. While being taken back to Montreal by escorting RCMP officers, Rossler talked freely of the crime and admitted it was the end of the road for him. He had a long criminal record before the Gamman murder and his subsequent flight across the continent.

On the stand yesterday, he described how he shot Gamman when the 56-year-old unarmed bank guard lunged at him on the sidewalk outside of the downtown Montreal branch of the Bank of Toronto. Rossler had shot bank manager Stan Bickley in the leg before being chased empty handed from the bank. Gamman had been on his way to lunch from the Bank of Canada where he was a guard, when he tackled Rossler.

Tuna Cup Matches Open in N.S.

Wedgeport, N.S., Sept. 14 — (CP) — The seventh international tuna cup matches opened off this Nova Scotia village today with teams of top-notch anglers from both sides of the Atlantic. Soldiers Rip Tide, scene of the annual classic, was dotted with 21 tuna craft as dawn broke along the coast. Then the blast of a shotgun gave the starting signal for the fishermen's three-day fight with the powerful bluefins.

Seven teams, representing 10 countries, are battling for the big-game angling supremacy of the world. The United States, winner in the last two tournaments, is defending champion.

Teams are entered from Argentina, Brazil, the Commonwealth, Chile, Cuba and Scandinavia. The Commonwealth team includes members from Bermuda, South Africa, England, Australia and Canada.

The mamoth fish, which appear all along the bluenose coast each fall, provide the sort of angling thrill that fishermen dream about

The biggest angling catch was made off Cape Breton two weeks ago when Cmdr. Duncan M. Hodgson of Montreal landed a 977-pounder.

Five-Day Week In Liquor Stores Across Ontario

Toronto, Sept. 14—(CP)—Ontario liquor stores will remain open five days week beginning next Monday, Brig. J. G. Sprague, Liquor Control Board comptroller, announced today.

The stores will be closed for a full day each Wednesday or Thursday, depending on the municipality. They now are open six days a week.

Brig. Spragge said the change results from difficulty in arranging for daily help in stores where employees work a five-day week.

'Daily help was necessary to allow employees a full day-off during the week and the situation was greatly aggravated by sickness other time-off emergencies and holidays," the comptroller said.

Liquor stores will remain open on Wednesday or Thursday when a public holiday falls within the week.

CUBA LOANED SUGAR

Washington, Sept. 14 — (AP)—The United States has loaned Cuba, one of the world's biggest sugar producers, 25,000 tons of its own product. Cuba needs the sugar to supply its own consumers, and will replace it as soon as next year's crop is marketed.

McAuliffe Guilty of Murder In Death of Two at Langton Sentenced to Hang Dec. 19

Simcoe, Sept. 14 (CP)—Joseph Herbert McAuliffe, 32-year-old bandit who murdered two men who chased him after a June 21 bank holdup at nearby Langton, was sentenced today to be hanged Dec. 19.

Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven pronounced the sentence, less than a day after an Ontario Supreme Court jury adjudged McAuliffe guilty of the machine-gun slaying of Arthur Lierman and William Goddyn.

It was the first time Mr. Justice Treleaven had ordered a man hanged.

McAuliffe, who comes from North Bay, Ont., and lived recently in Windsor, Ont., was apparently calm as the mandatory death penalty was imposed.

Asked by the judge if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, the convicted murderer said: "No, my lord."

Embraced Brother

McAuliffe's sister, Mrs. Irene Reynolds of North Bay, saw McAuliffe briefly yesterday after the jury announced its verdict. She embraced him in a jail corridor.

Throughout his trial, McAuliffe, auburn-haired former army small arms expert, remained tense and tight-lipped.

The jury returned its verdict after three hours' deliberation. It considered only the evidence pertaining to the Lierman slaying but the circumstances paralleled those of the death of Goddyn, who was in Lierman's car chasing the bank bandit when both men were cut down by machine-gun bullets.

Found in Shack

Starved and mosquito-bitten, McAuliffe was found in a shack after a posse had scoured the bush country in the Langton area for four days after the slayings. The stolen money was recovered earlier.

At the seven-day trial seven witnesses of the bank robbery identified McAuliffe as the bandit. Experts told of finding his fingerprints on the car in which the bandit made his getaway.

Lierman, 31, and Goddyn, 24, both married men with families, were riddled with machine-gun bullets as their car closed in on the bandit's automobile, which had crashed into the ditch.

DINNER MENU—"Can you suggest a dinner menu for a hundred men and the cost? Our church is serving dinner to one of our young men's clubs. We do not expect a profit but do want to make our expenses. What should we serve? What should we charge?

Here is a menu we think the men will enjoy. Tomato or apple juice, crackers, braised short ribs of beef, oven browned potatoes, buttered squash, tossed salad, rolls, lemon chiffon pie, tea, coffee.

Cost of food will average about 63 cents a plate. Why not charge 75 cents per plate so that you will have a little extra for flowers, napkins, etc.

Court of Appeals Hears Evidence On Application

Toronto, Sept. 14. (CP)—Ontario Court of Appeals Wednesday reserved judgment on the application of Mr. and Mrs. James Keuhl of Sudbury, to have quashed an adoption order affecting their three-year-old daughter.

Legal argument centred on the point that the child is being reared in the Protestant faith by foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Gibeau of Pembroke.

The parents, both Roman Catholics, sought custody on the grounds they wished their daughter to be brought up in their faith.

Julivа Yvonne Lesieur was born out of wedlock to Adele Lesieur—now Mrs. Keuhl—at Sudbury Jan. 29, 1947. In March of that year, the mother signed a consent to adoption and also consented to the child being raised as a Protestant.

Subsequently, the mother married Keuhl, who later adopted the Roman Catholic faith. The Keuhls then sought the return of their child.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibeau, who cared for the girl virtually from her birth, filed adoption papers in Renfrew County Court Aug. 29, 1949. But Judge T. Mulcahy declined to sign the order.

In his written refusal, Judge Mulcahy said he felt the mother's rights to the child should be tested in the courts.

Quadruplet Girls Born in London Are Premature

London, Sept. 13 (AP) — The Commonwealth's second set of quadruplets within a month was reported "all right but premature" a few hours after their birth today.

The newest set—all girls and born within an hour shortly after midnight to Mrs. Elizabeth Coles—were placed in oxygen incubators.

Last month's quadruplets—two boys and two girls—were born during a 50-hour period to Mrs. Betty Sara in Australia.

A nurse described the Coles babies as "tiny things." One weighed three pounds, four ounces. Two more were each an ounce heavier. The fourth was three pounds, 15 ounces.

The 27-year-old mother, a London housewife, was "quite comfortable," hospital officials said. The possibility of four babies had been predicted, but they were not expected until November.

David Coles, 31, the father, is a brewery maintenance engineer. The couple has one other child, a five-year-old son.

Czech War Widow Wins Scholarship

Kitchener, Sept. 13 — (CP)—Efforts of a young Czechoslovakian war widow here have been crowned with success to the extent that she will receive a university scholarship in English from the K-W Council of Friendship.

The scholarship is valued at $100 and will enable Mrs. Anne Schoderboeck to attend Waterloo College to study modern languages (French and German).

Before coming to Kitchener, Mrs. Schoderboeck was an office worker in the French zone of Germany. Since coming here she has resided with Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Wilson.

Last year she attended part-time English classes at Waterloo College and received top marks in her class. She speaks several languages fluently. During this summer she studied Latin and covered the equivalent of three years in Latin

Home Building At Present Rate Likely for Years

Windsor, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Home-building in Canada will probably continue at its present rate "for many years to come," W. K. Lougheed, economic advisor to the Canadian Bank of Commerce, told heads of the Canadian Retail Lumber Business here yesterday.

"It will take 30 years to liquidate housing needs accumulated by 1946," Mr. Lougheed told the National Lumbermen's Council of Canada at its annual meeting.

"One cannot see any check to house-building activities, barring total war or a garrison state, for many years to come."

$4,000,000 HARVEST

Toronto, Sept. 13. (CP)—While the crop of white beans in the province was disappointing Ontario farmers will reap a $4,000,000 harvest as far as the industrially-important soybean is concerned.

Agriculture Minister Kennedy said that from a small beginning soybeans had become one of the province's major crops. It had the redeeming feature of taking little out of the land and was actually beneficial.

Woman Forgets Where She Left Six Children

New York, Sept. 13 (AP) — Somewhere in the "jungle" of Brooklyn or Queens, a North Carolina mother rented a room and left her six children.

Now she can't remember where it is.

Mrs. Ruth Stevens, 39-year-old widow from Bladenboro, N.C., revealed her bewildering plight Tuesday.

Police, who took Mrs. Stevens to a womens' shelter for the night, conceded that finding the house on the basis of her clues would be a tough job.

'Woman With Cornet' Dies at Calgary

Calgary, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Mrs. George McElroy, long known as "the woman with the cornet," died last night at the age of 81.

The prominent Calgary woman was known to thousands of servicemen during the First World War by her impromptu concerts and affectionate greetings she gave at the C.P.R. station when the troop trains arrived or passed through the city.

In 1935 during the Silver Jubilee celebrations for King George V and Queen Mary, she was presented with a medal for her work.

Despite her advancing years, Mrs. McElroy occasionally played her coronet for the boys returning from the Second World War.

Only One Vessel Unaccounted For In Hurricane

Halifax, Sept. 13 (CP) — Only one vessel remained unaccounted for early today as a stubborn Atlantic hurricane appeared headed for sea after lashing the Nova Scotia mainland with high winds and torrential rains yesterday.

Of the four ships reported missing along the coast during the height of the storm last night, only the Sir Echo was still lost somewhere at sea today, with a crew of six.

Two of the vessels, the Afeneth and Emma Marie, made port safely at Wood's Harbor after hours of battling through mountainous seas and high winds with all hands bailing with buckets. All aboard the vessels suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Meanwhile the third ship, the Nickerson, was located early today by a United States coast guard cutter and the Canadian freighter Vagabond Prince about 50 miles west of Seal Island. It could not be learned immediately whether any of the six crew members aboard had been hurt.

The Sir Echo has not been heard from since the storm started, but search and rescue headquarters reported early today that it is believed the vessel is in the same area where the Nickerson was found.

Blood Test For Alcohol Ruled Out at Trial

Brampton, Sept. 13 — (CP) — A blood test for alcohol, given to a motorist charged with manslaughter, was ruled inadmissible yesterday by Mr. Justice A. M. Lebel.

The ruling was made during the Ontario supreme court trial of Philip Smith, 43, of Malton, a garage mechanic charged following the death May 3 of Frank Cunningham, Toronto. Witnesses testified that Smith insisted on the test after his arrest.

Mr. Justice Lebel said no warning is necessary when a blood test is taken, such as the caution given before a statement is offered to police. In his ruling he said:

"If it were tolerated, it would permit, in a roundabout method, the consent of the accused to the blood test. If he were told it was better for him, he would be anxious to take it."

Smith testified he did not see Cunningham until his automobile was three or four feet from the pedestrian.

The trial is continuing.

Hitler, Nazism Lead in German Reference Books

Berlin — (CP) — The individual to get most space and attention in a new German encyclopaedia is — Adolf Hitler.

The man who inflicted misery and death on millions has been given far more wordage than any other figure of world importance in past or present.

The compilers of "Knuar's Lexicon A-Z," a handy-sized volume, allotted 78 lines to the former fuehrer. By comparison, only 25 lines are reserved for Bismarck.

In addition, there are two complete pages and many insertions devoted to a detailed history of the National Socialist (Nazi) Party and its affiliated organizations, including the Gestapo. In a special black-rimmed box, closely resembling a Nazi memorial plaque each gauleiter's fate is related.

As for Hitler's foes, Franklin D. Roosevelt has been given 20 lines, Stalin 17, and Churchill only 15. Pope Pius has six lines. West German Federal Chancellor Konrad Adenauer gets eight.

18 for Mussolini

Hitler's blood-thirsty police chief, Heinrich Himmler, organizer of the concentration camps, has 17 lines with his titles being listed in full. Mussolini is portrayed in 18 lines.

The lexicon says Hitler's 25-point pre-war political program met with the "national feelings and desires of the German people . . . who resented the Versailles Peace Treaty and disarmament."

The refusal to pay reparations for the First World War, the establishment of a wehrmacht compulsory labor service for the sake of the community, social insurance old age pensions schemes are termed "national and popular with the German people."

The authors, however, call Hitler a "ruthless dictator who sought compliance with his plans with brutality."

The mass murders of Jews and other enemies of the Nazi regime are described as "crimes against humanity."

"Knuar's Lexicon" has been a traditional reference book in Germany for decades. But one West Berlin newspaper has complained that the first post-war edition pays too much attention to the Nazi era.

ProtectOldChurch AgainstVandalism

London — (CP) — Ancient St. Giles' Church, in London's Cripplegate district, where Oliver Cromwell was married and the poet Milton lies buried, has been turned into "a veritable fortress" to guard it against vandalism. The original St. Giles' dates back to 1090 and was rebuilt in 1545.

The vicar, Rev. E. G. Turner, has complained to the authorities that damage amounting to hundreds of pounds has been done to the church, a tourist attraction for years. Some time ago, he said, a fire had been started in the vestry and the lead stripped from the roof.

More recently, the vicar charged, children playing "commandos" around the church had been causing destruction "just for the love of it." Barbed wire had been put up and the windows bricked up, but to no avail.

"Every precaution is being taken, but even youngsters learn how to use wire-cutters and somehow find their way through the barbed wire," Mr. Turner said. "We are being forced to turn it into a veritable fortress and a fence would have been put around the church but for the lack of material."

Own Music Used At Her Wedding

London — (CP) — The music Rachel Fox composed for a Royal Academy examination held special significance for her.

Although she was pestered by fellow students asking: "What is it??" Rachel would only shake her head and say: "It's a secret."

The day of the examination dawned and Rachel Fox passed with flying colors — but the music's use didn't end there.

It was played as she and her bridegroom, Derek Hill, walked down the aisle of her hometown church in Somerset.

It was a wedding march.

"I wanted something joyful," she said at the reception, "and I always promised myself I would write my own."

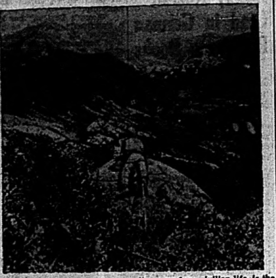
LONG WAY FROM CIVILIAN LIFE



A U.S. soldier, a few short months away from civilian life, is the lone watcher on this Korean mountain-top that overlooks the rugged terrain where battles are fought. He is with the First Cavalry Division, northwest or Taegu, and his job at the moment is to observe the activities of the red Koreans in the valley below and on the hills in front. — Central Press Canadian.

Ernest Hemingway Spends 21 Months on Italian Novel

San Francisco de Paula, Cuba—(AP) — "When I die," says Ernest Hemingway, "it will be from writing cheques."

"Not," he added, "that any one will string me up for writing hot ones, but from some sort of ailment growing out of over-exercise of the wrist. It seems that I write cheques most of the time."

Actually the novelist must have over-emphasized the labor of paying bills, for he has been very busy for almost two years on his new novel, "Across the River and Into the Trees," which was published this week. Its setting is Venice.

"I'm crazy about the new book," he said. "I read the book 206 times, to try and better it or correct errors, and it is as good as I can make it . . . I really fired all the barrels on this one."

And what's he doing now that the new novel, first since "For Whom the Bell Tolls," is out of the way?

"Oh, I'm on another one already. As a matter of fact, I started it a long time ago, and put aside for this new one. No, I can't work on two at the same time. The one I'm doing now is a very long book. In fact, it's so long the doctors wonder if it may not be too long for me."

His appearance, however, does not suggest that his 51 years are weighing on him. At first glance, he does seem older, but that's because of his moustache, and a full graying beard.

He leads an active life, at times working on his farm. His writing day runs from dawn until just past noon. After lunch there is usually a fishing trip on his yacht, Pilar, and, if luck is good, he spends the afternoon and part of the night fighting marlin. Other days he goes hunting, or to a nearby trap shoot range, or does odd jobs around his place.

The novelist stands just over six feet and, as he says, "I grew out a little on the sides." He is a big barrel-chested man.

He spent 21 months on "Across the River and Into the Trees." He put the scene of the new book in Venice because "I sort of grew up around there as a kid. I couldn't go there while Mussolini was around, but I went back soon after he wasn't. I like the place."

Trees and tropical shrubs and flowers almost hide the house from the street. He lives there with his wife, the former Mary Welsh of Bemidgi, Minn. Both enjoy fishing. Mrs. Hemingway recently won first prize in the Havana international marlin fishing tournament with a 100-pounder. His wife designs furniture, and Hemingway helps his carpenter carry out her ideas.

Hunting trophies appear in several rooms of the large, airy house. They include a buffalo head, several antelope and other trophies.

He writes where the notion strikes him. Some of it is done in longhand — "the scenery, and the descriptive stuff. For conversation, I use the typewriter, so it doesn't get too far ahead of me."

He speaks little of his books. He picked up the jacket on his new book, looked at the picture of himself on the back cover. "It's a good picture, even if it makes me look like the devil. It's the only picture, though, that shows very distinctly the three places where my nose was broken."

That seemed to please him.

1,700-Foot Wall One Man's Work

London — (CP) — A new embankment, built on the south bank of the Thames River for the 1951 Festival of Britain, can justly be called the wall that Jack built.

Its construction was almost wholly a one-man job. Every piece of granite in the 1,700-foot stretch of wall from Waterloo Bridge to the London city council building was laid by Jack Datson, a Cornish mason.

Datson handled more than 2,000 tons of granite and finished his job four months ahead of time.

"It took 80 masons to cut enough stone to keep me going," he said.

The wall, which cost £250,000 ($775,000) in materials alone, will serve as frontage for the festival's exhibition and concert hall. It will also mark another phase in a favorite project of Herbert Morrison, deputy prime minister — to clean up the south bank of the Thames, long a London eyesore.

Would Reintroduce Capital Punishment

Wellington, N. Z. —(CP) — Nine years after the death penalty for murder was abolished in New Zealand, the government has brought forward a bill for its reintroduction.

Opinions differ on the effects of the abolition of the death penalty. In the seven years before it was abolished in 1941, there were 54 murders and in the following seven years there were 87, an increase of 61 per cent.

However, opponents of capital punishment claim that other factors were responsible — a substantial rise in population, the war and the disturbed post-war years.

Nevertheless, many organizations have for long been demanding that capital punishment be restored and claiming that serious crime has greatly increased since its abolition. Advocates of a return to capital punishment have included justices of the peace, several women's organizations, farmers' unions, juries and B. L. Dallard, until recently controller-general of prisons.

The death penalty was abolished by the Labor government in accordance with party policy. The bill for restoration has been introduced by the new National Party government, but it has indicated that it will allow its members a free vote. The bill excludes from the death penalty pregnant women and persons of under 18, and also excludes infanticide.

SUFFERS FRACTURE BUT RECOVERING

George Bernard Shaw, famous author and playwright, is convalescing after an operation for a broken thigh bone suffered in one of his numerous falls. Commenting on the effects of old age recently, Mr. Shaw, 94, said its worst drawback was the fact that his legs refused to support him. Here he is shown in a recent photo carefully negotiating an incline at his home at Ayot St. Lawrence, England. — Central Press Canadian.

N.S. Town Honors 'American Doctor'

Chester, N. S. — (CP) — In memory of a famous and kindly United States surgeon, a fund has been organized here to assist the needy.

The man honored was Dr. John M. T. Finney of Baltimore and Chester, for 35 years attached to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. A memorial fund has been established in his name at Baltimore as well as here.

Dr. Finney first came to nearby Little Fish Island in 1907 to spend his summer vacation. But when he saw there were many poor people in need of medical attention, he made it his business to help them.

In his 45-foot schooner Meemie he visited the sick and performed the functions of a general practitioner. He kept up the job through the years.

Throughout the neighborhood he was known as "The American Doctor at Chester."

QUAKE LASTS 90 SECONDS

Dibrugarh, India, Sept. 14 — (Reuters) — An earthquake shock, stronger than that which rocked upper Assam a month ago, was felt here Wednesday.

Preceded by a cannon-like booming, the shock lasted 90 seconds — 2½ minutes less than the earthquake of Aug. 15.

A church here, slightly damaged in the earlier quake, collapsed Wednesday and other buildings also were wrecked.

Canadian Women Feeling Itch To Again Join Up

Winnipeg, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Canadian women who served in the armed services in the Second Word War are feeling the itch to get "back into harness."

At least that's the impression Mrs. Mary Doyer of Calgary says she gets from stacks of fan mail she's been receiving lately.

Mrs. Dover—as Lt.-Col. Dover—was the chief recruiting officer for the Canadian Women's Army Corps during the Second World War.

"If and when Canada needs the services of the C.W.A.C. again she won't find the women lacking in their desire to pitch in and do their bit," she says. "There are ever so many wanting to get back into uniform."

Mrs. Dover, a trim and efficient-looking stately brunette, is the mother of a 16-year-old son—and an alderman in Calgary city council. Second vice-president of the Alberta command, she's here attending the Canadian Legion convention.

What does she reply to the girls who write urging her to "start up the C.W.A.C.?"

"I can only tell them. . . the defence minister has said the enlistment of women is under consideration."

She confided in an interview that "I called up Ottawa and offered my services" but was told "there was nothing doing yet."

She said women could prepare to be of service, "if and when we are again recruited," by learning a trade. All three services would need typists, stenographers, accountants, cooks, drivers.

"Any emergency can be answered by women in their own place. We certainly don't want to mobilize but if we are needed I believe there will be a terrific response."

SEAT OF JUSTICE IS VACANT WHILE LITIGANTS FUME

MR. JUSTICE SCHROEDER

CHIEF JUSTICE McRUER

Chief Justice McRuer returned suddenly from Peterborough and is believed to have taken over the criminal court without first notifying Mr. Justice Schroeder. WEATHER IS NOT CO-OPERATIVE BUT FAIRS ATTRACT CROWDS

PICTON

Largest Flower Show on Record At Picton Fair

Picton—Quite apart from the excellent and varied program of entertainment offered at Picton Fair which opened today and continues Friday and Saturday, there is a display of exhibits which rivals those of any fair held in rural Ontario this year.

If gardens of Prince Edward are denuded of their bloom, the blossoms may be found at Picton Fair. The huge white tent is a mass of color as the largest flower show on record is seen. Entries in the flower section totalled 547 at last count, and among them are 66 baskets of all kinds of flowers, besides all specimens of blooms, there are corsages, bridal bouquets, fancy vases, dining room centre-pieces and other arrangements. Gladioli make an especially bright spot of color.

Helping fill the tent to overflowing are 72 different plants.

Colorful Array

The next biggest entry is in roots and vegetables. Here the bounty of garden and orchard is seen in colorful array. There are 283 entries of all kinds of vegetables, not counting 36 entries in tomatoes, 55 in grain and seeds. There are about 100 entries in fruits.

Home cooking, in which County ladies excell, has 164 entries and the chocolate cakes are especially tempting.

The ladies' work ranks next in numbers with 164 entries of fancy work, quilts, rugs, knitting and sewing of various kinds. It is housed in a centre space in the Palace this year and is better displayed than formerly.

Beneath the grand stand are around 400 birds, including a great variety of pigeons and bantams of all varieties, two entries of beautiful pheasants, all kinds of bred-to-lay and exhibition poultry, as well as forty trios of birds entered by the Poultry Club, and some rabbits.

Since light horses come in up to judging time, the total number is not known, but entries have been received from many parts of Ontario. The only drop is in heavy horses.

List Not Available

The exact number of Holsteins is not known as the list was compiled by the field man and is not available as this is written. There will be well over the hundred head, counting the Junior Farmers' 43 entries.

Sheep and swine classes are well filled, but difficulties in marketing caused cancellation of the bacon hog competition.

In oddities are seen big potatoes, big cucumbers, a cucumber growing in a bottle, tall corn, tall flowers and other oddities of nature. The Junior Farmers entry has over 150 entries in fruits, vegetables, cooking, sewing, work by Junior Institutes and by Garden Clubs. Model planes, eggs, honey, photos, art and a grand display of woodwork add to the number.

Heading the list in numbers is the exhibit by Prince Edward County Schools. Hundreds of exhibits show the skill of the pupils in a great variety of things, including manual training and craft work, art, sewing, knitting, collections, posters and murals, flowers, vegetables and modelling. The busy secretary has not yet had time to count them to secure the total, but believes they run over the thousand mark.

In all, the Fair is the show window of Prince Edward and reflects the bounty of this garden country, and the skill of its people.

Alberta Oil Production Outlook Cheering

Banff, Alta, Sept. 14 (CP) — Alberta's production of oil will equal requirements of all Canada in three or four years if the present rate of development can be maintained, Premier Ernest Manning of Alberta said last night.

Addressing the annual dinner of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, he told what oil has meant to Alberta and Canada.

Fourteen years ago the province had a debt of $160,000,000, in which interest alone took more than half the provinces' revenue of $16,000,000.

Today provincial revenues are more than $80,000,000. The public debt has been reduced by more than $56,000,000 and has been amortized so that it will be cleared off in 23 years.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

INFLATION'S HERE

Cy. Barriage, the rotund purveyor of spirits frumenti at the local dispensary, and between times the mushball right bower of one Jack Howe who sugar daddies the vaunted Howe and Hagerman Plumbers Pirouettes in the Commercial Softball League, was strutting around yesterday like a pouter pigeon which had just swallowed a beach ball.

* * *

The jubilant Cyrus, who played the game in which his pipefitters had set back the Stewarners 5-3 for their second semi-finals victory, for the sixth time, four of 'em in his sleep, was confident that his buckaroos had hit their stride and now nothing can stop them outside of the First American Cavalry Division; a roadblock of bulldozers or an epidemic of smallpox.

* * *

Cy wore the satisfied look of the cat who had eaten the proverbial canary washed down with seven or eight mice and a couple quarts of cream. He rubbed his hands gleefully and chortled: "We're practically in there, bub." He failed to say "where we were in" but from his pirouetting and joyful countenance we presumed he thinks he has not only the semi-final but the titular series tucked away.

* * *

We ventured a shot in the dark:

"Suppose, Cyrus" we asked, after waiting for four minutes for him to emerge from his Front Street version of the Highland Fling. "the gods of mushball do select you as finalists, which you are not as yet, how do you think your three-piece bathroom setters will stack up against the rampaging Cementers from Point Anne if and when they put the quietus on the Cockerels from the Henn House?"

* * *

Cy stared for a moment, then giggled, gargled and gagged. "Point Anne?" he quoth, "why they haven't gotta chance against that powerhouse of mine. We defeated them six times in the regular schedule and they'll be sitting ducks for Howe's sharpshooters if we meet them in the finals."

"But," we insisted, "Mike Whalen's up-and-coming crew have taken the measure of your bitter rivals, the Brewers, and at the moment they are hotter than the south end of a firefly".

The imperturbable Cy was unruffled. "So what?" he grinned, stuffing a three-for-five stogie in his mouth. "What difference does that make. The Pointers can be as hot as they like. We've got a cooling system that will stiffen 'em in their tracks."

"So that is your opinion?"

Cy spat the end of the stink . . . pardon, cigar to the pavement.

"That's my opinion," he said, "and Howe."

And with that quaint remark, the husky mentor of Jack (Poopdeck) Howe's tool forgetters strode off down the street, chest out, stomach farther out, to a conference with Joe Agnew regarding the possibilities of his taking over the Tip Tops next year.

THE BIG DRIP

Ole Jupe Pluvius put an effective quetus on all games, softball and baseball, not to mention "Red" Townsend's football workout last evening. Batawa scheduled to play in Bowmanville stayed at home and readied themselves for the tussle here Friday night under the lights.

IN CASE YOU'RE INTERESTED

The replacements made by the Smiths Falls Royals and Brockville Memos for their COBL finals tilts were approved by the loop executive because of loss of American imports caused by military call-ups. Majek, crack Smiths Falls receiver hurried home when Uncle Sam tooted the "fall in" as did others. Fortin of Ottawa was secured to replace Majek while Joe Levandoski, who won the league batting championship joined the Memoes as a replacement. Ronny Trussell, Brockville, one of the heroes of the last tussle between the squads is the same youngster who cavorted in a Junior "B" hockey uniform under the Bill Cook aegis some time back. Trussell played with the Memoes of his home town earlier in the season, but it is understood has confined his baseball activities this year mainly to junior circles.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Belated columnar orchids to Earl Darragh of the Ramsay Paints, and his company for their foresight and generosity in placing the scoreboard at the Alemite Field. The handsome board, which can be seen plainly from all angles of the field, fills a much needed want, and fans, teams and league executive gratefully appreciate the generous gesture.

WE COULD USE HIM!

Hurley resigned his position with the Kroehler Manufacturing Company Ltd. and has accepted a job with running trades of the Canadian National Railways.

Just over the junior age limit, Hurley was counted upon by the new Kitchener senior entry in the Ontario Hockey Association as one of their candidates.

H . . . mmm, CNR running trades, eh? Supposing by some quirk of fate, Hurtley was transferred to the Belleville division . . . ?

FIREWORKS FRIDAY!

Timothy Geohagen, the Irish strong - man wrestler, will have an opportunity to settle matters with the Masked Marvel in the main event at The Memorial Arena on Friday night. Two weeks ago Geohagen had the mystery-man in plenty of trouble with the Irish Sleeper, but the Irish athlete was so angered at the Mask that he refused to release the hold, even though Tim was outside the ropes, where he was counted out by the referee.

Ed "Strangler" Lewis, manager and coach of the popular, young Geohagen, predicts Tim will defeat and un-mask the Marvel here Friday night and will go on to win the championship of the world in the not-too-distant future.

Seelle Samara, the powerful Negro sensation, will go against Leering Lee Henning, the Iowa Corn-husker, in the semi-final. The opening bout will bring together Pat O'Shocker and Joe Devalteau. O'Shocker has just returned from a successful South American campaign. Devalteau hails from Montreal and comes highly recommended.

Detroit Sends Hal Newhouser Against Yankees in Effort To Hold Slim Lead in Loop

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Two World Series veterans, Hal Newhouser and Vic Raschi, are on the firing line today as the league-leading Detroit Tigers and the runner-up New York Yankees clash in the opener of their three-game series at Detroit's Briggs Stadium.

While the Yanks and Tigers go at each other, the surging Boston Red Sox clash with the seventh-place Browns at St. Louis.

Here's the American League pennant picture at-a-glance.

	W.	L.	Pct.	GB	GL
Detroit	87	49	.640		18
New York	87	50	.635	½	17
Boston	86	51	.628	1½	17

Newhouser who has contributed 14 victories to the Tigers' scant half-game lead, has beaten the Yanks only once and lost to them three times.

Raschi, who will be seeking his sixth straight and 20th victory of the season, has split four decisions with the Bengals.

Boston has won eight straight games in St. Louis thus far, but the Browns of late have been flexing their muscles. The Browns are riding the crest of a seven-game winning streak that includes four triumphs over Cleveland.

Detroit and New York tuned up for their important meeting with victories yesterday. The Tigers stopped Washington Senators 6-1 while the Yanks smeared Cleveland Indians 10-3. The Red Sox were not scheduled.

Fred Hutchinson, with help from Ted Gray, gained his 16th victory for the Tigers.

Lusty Hitting by Berra

Three Cleveland errors, along with some lusty hitting by Yogi Berra, allowed the Yanks to breeze to victory in Cleveland. Berra rapped out his 22nd homer two singles, drove in two runs and scored four. The miscues helped the Yanks to score six of their runs.

Ed Lopat received credit for his 17th victory. Bob Lemon opened for Cleveland and suffered his 11th defeat against 20 victories.

Luke Easter of the Indians, who won Tuesday night's game with a ninth-inning homer, poled a terrific 463-foot blast off Lopat in the sixth for his 25th of the season.

The Browns edged Philadelphia Athletics 5-4 on Ken Wood's ninth - inning homer. The Browns' seven-game winning streak is their longest since they won the pennant in 1944.

The big news in the National League was the end of New York Giant righthander Sal Maglie's consecutive scoreless inning streak at 45. The skein came to an end as the Giants beats Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1. The game was called after seven innings because of rain and the scheduled second game also was rained out.

Cheap Homer

Rookie outfielder Gus Bell ruined Maglie's spell with a cheap home run in the seventh inning. The ball hit the screen bordering the rightfield foul pole 257 feet from home plate.

Maglie who had four straight shutouts under his belt, was gunning for the National League record of 46 1-3 scoreless innings turned in by Carl Hubbell of the 1933 Giants. Maglie now has won 11 straight and has a 16-3 record for the season.

Boston Braves remained half a game ahead of the fourth-place Giants by downing the Chicago Cubs 5-2. Warren Spahn stopped the Cubs on four hits to gain his 19th victory.

Scheduled games between Cincinnati and Brooklyn at St. Louis and Philadelphia were rained out.

LaMotta Scores Dramatic K.O. Over Dauthuille

By JACK HAND

Detroit, Sept. 14 (AP) —Sugar Ray Robinson is next for middleweight champion Jake LaMotta after his dramatic 15-round knockout last night of challenger Laurent Dauthuille with only 13 seconds to go.

But for a savage closing rally that snatched victory from defeat the well-tamed Bronx Bull would be worrying about a return match with Dauthuille, not Robinson.

Trailing on the cards of all three officials and just about all the working press, Jake barely saved his title. It was a heartbreaking defeat for the game Frenchman who just missed avenging the late Marcel Cerdan. After it was over the 11-to-5 underdog sat in the dressing room with tears streaming from his eyes.

There will be long debates why the Frenchman didn't play it safe in the final round. All he had to do was stab at LaMotta's nearly closed left eye and stay away. He would have won back for France the championship that LaMotta wrested from an injured Cerdan in the same city 15 months ago.

The last - round strategy a wide split in Dauthuille's camp.

Trainer Heinie Blaustein said "he was way out in front on points and I think he shouldn't have taken any chances."

Andre Barraut, his French manager, said "my boy is a fighter and he was going to swap punches with Jake all the way. If LaMotta is a sportsman he'll give Laurent a return bout very soon."

Will Fight Robinson

Over in the other dressing room, LaMotta didn't talk about a rematch. In his leopard skin robe, squinting through his battered left eye, Jake talked Robinson.

"Sure I'll fight Robinson," he said with a grin, "if he doesn't run out—and I'll eliminate him too."

Jake will fight Sugar Ray or else risk a National Boxing Association ban. He already is signed to fight Robby in the Chicago Stadium during the second week of February.

LaMotta said his handlers told him he was behind in the 12th, but he told them "you're full of baloney."

"I knew I had him when he dropped his hands in my corner. I was waiting for him to drop his guard for 15 rounds."

Jake almost waited too long. Critics wondered when the old, swarming, never-stop LaMotta was going to make an appearance Most of the time he tried to win with his stinging left jab. Seldom did he throw his right hand until the final flurry. Still he had the Frenchman bleeding from cuts around the nose and eyes during most of the scrap. LaMotta weighed 159 1-2, Dauthuille 160.

Dauthuille almost beat the count. He was up on one knee at nine and just was getting up as referee Lou Handler tolled "ten." Handler had Dauthuille ahead 72-68 after 14 rounds. Judge Joe Lenahan had it 74-66 and Judge Jack Asprey 71-69 for the Frenchman.

The crowd fell short of expectations with 11,424 paying $71,694 to see the International Boxing Club production. The official contracts call for LaMotta to get 45 percent and Dauthuille 15.

SWIM RECORD BROKEN

Vancouver, Sept. 14—(CP) — The Canadian Amateur Swimming Record for the half mile was smashed last night by Jerry McNamee of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club.

His time was 10:57.5, 11.3 seconds faster than the previous record, held by Jim Portelance of Ocean Falls, B.C.

The record was broken during a meet here between the Vancouver Club and Seattle Athletes. McNamee also took the 100-yard and 200-yard free-style events.

TIP TOPS DEFEATED

Austin, Tex., Sept. 14—(AP)— Clearwater, Florida, knocked defending champion Toronto from the list of undefeated teams in the Amateur Softball Association World Tournament here last night with a 1-0 victory.

Eddie Moore of Clearwater scored the game's only run in the sixth inning. He came home on a hit by catcher Harry Hancock.

Clearwater's ace Herb Dudley yielded only two hits to Toronto while Charlie Justice gave up five safeties in a flawlessly played ball

Toronto-Owned Entry Wins Derby In Winnipeg

(By The Canadian Press)

Sir Strome, Toronto-owned entry, won the 21st running of the Canadian Derby at Winnipeg Wednesday.

The three-year-old chestnut, from Joe Holbeck's Double Blue stable, won the $5,000 western Canada race classic by eight lengths.

Sir J. R., owned by Dr. E. G. Storm Bell, owned by F. M. (Tiny) Kemp of Vancouver, was second. Holden of Midnapore, Alta., was third.

The race was marked by a spill. Onwitch, owned by E. T. Myers of Rosetown, Sask., and one of the leading contenders for the biggest purse in western Canada racing, fell in front of the polo park grandstand on the first time round. Jockey Tony Licata was taken to hospital.

Onwitch was leading the five-horse field at the time. Storm Bell was forced to sidestep the fallen horse.

Time for the 1 1-4 mile run over a muddy track was 2:24 1-5, far short of the record for the derby distance set in 1947 when Sir Berril romped in in 2.07.

Sir Strome, the favorite, paid $3.05, $2.60 and $2.10.

Three players have signed N.H.L. contracts with Montreal Canadiens so far this year. Their names, announced by Frank Selke, general manager, are centre Bill Reay, defenceman Butch Bouchard and centre Elmer Lach. Selke said Maurice Richard probably will sign today.

The International Triner Trophy Soccer series has been cancelled, John Richardson, provincial secretary of the Dominion Football Association, announced in Vancouver. St. Louis Simpkins had been scheduled to meet Vancouver city, Dominion champions, later in the month to decide the North American Soccer Championship.

Richardson said the two-game series was cancelled because of the "impossible demands" of the St. Louis team.

The U.S. team usually has been guaranteed $600 for the series. St. Louis asked $5,000.

A former all-American fullback, Charlie Boswell of Birmingham, Ala., won the second annual blind golfer's international tournament at Hamilton Wednesday.

Boswell put together a 95 with his 107 of Tuesday for a winning 36-hole total of 202.

The husky ex-footballer lost his sight as a United States army captain during the Battle of the Bulge in the Second World War.

Dave (Sweeny) Schriner will return as coach of North Sydney Victorias of the Cape Breton Senior Hockey League this season, it was announced Wednesday night.

Billy Bell, who quarterbacked briefly with Toronto Argonauts several seasons back, checked in at the Queen's University football training camp Wednesday. He played with Queen's in 1948.

His arrival brightened coach Tindall's hopes for the exhibition game against Toronto Balmy Beach this Saturday. Bell is rated tops at punting and pass defense.

Outfielder Garland (Butch) Lawing finished the regular season with a batting average of 3.45 in 134 games to lead the class-C circuit.

Arthur and Bruce Dorman of Hamilton, who just missed the Ontario Parent-and-Child Golf Championship last year, came through Wednesday by defeating R. H. and R. J. Amell of Toronto in a playoff.

The Dormans and the Amells were tied with 75s at the end of regulation play over the par-70 Toronto Rosedale Course. The Dormans won the playoff hole.

Five strokes behind were Ray and Doug Schlicter of Kitchener Westmount.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)

New York, Sept. 14 (AP) — Probably the most confident underdog you ever saw is Pancho Segura, a bandy-legged little guy from Ecuador whose big grin and court antics have made him a favorite with North American tennis fans…Because he beat Jack Kramer in the United States professional championships last spring and because the 1950 amateur season failed to produce a candidate, Pancho got the call to face Kramer 100 times on the 1950-51 winter tour…And promoter Bobby Riggs promised him $7,500 bonus if he could win a majority of the matches… Segura's grin was evident as he remarked in slightly-broken English: "You know me; I'm not a defeatist. Besides that bonus clause helps you come through." …More seriously, he explained: "I've played my greatest tennis against Kramer, my game seems to bother him a lot…Return of service is where you beat him and that's what I do best. I think I handled his second serve better than anyone else…I think I suprise all the experts."…With that, Pancho looked at a few experts who were present and gave them that big grin again.

Made the Team, Too

When the Detroit Lions invaded Texas for an exhibition, rookie Gus Cifelli, from Philadelphia via Notre Dame, was fascinated by displays of stickers reading: "made in Texas, by Texans."… not to be outdone, Gus prepared his own badge and wore it on his lapel: "Made in Philadelphia, by Italians."

Owen Sound Crescents Waltz Into Loop Finals

(By The Canadian Press)

Owen Sound Crescents, who walked away with the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior League, have waltzed into the league finals.

They blasted Peterborough Petc 13-4 in Owen Sound Wednesday night to take their best-of-seven quarter final series 4-1. That qualified them for the finals.

After a scoreless first quarter Owen Sound moved ahead 6-0 at half time and 11-2 after the third quarter.

Grant Gillespie scored four Owen Sound goals with Jack Foote, Doug Gillespie and Arnold Smith getting two each. Bill Allum, Harry Kazarian and Yorky Jordan scored the others.

Peterborough marksmen were Em Creighton, Dootch Vitarelli, Bob Thorpe and Don Crowe.

Down 7-5 at half-time, Hamilton Tigers clawed their way back to a 15-9 victory over Brampton Excelsiors to win their quarter-final series 4-1, qualifying for a semi-final spot.

George Masters belted four goals for Hamilton with three by Shortridge and two each by Tommy Love, Merv McKenzie and Scott.

Chulkshank, Steele and Gowland each got a pair for Brampton.

In the battle for the other semi-final berth St. Catharines Saints blasted Mimico Mounties 20-6. It was the fifth game of their best-of-seven series. Saints now lead 3-2.

Saints rolled in eight fast goals near the end of the first period. Leo Teatro led with four and Ken Croft and Tony Damico got three each. Don McPhail got two for Mimico.

Ottawa Takes Lead in Series With Kingston

Ottawa, Sept. 14 (CP) —Ottawa Nationals Wednesday night took a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Border League semi-final series, walloping Kingston Ponies 18-7 before 3,000 fans.

The fourth game of the series will be played at Kingston tonight.

Righthander Wally Mitchell started for Kingston but gave way to young Bob Pray in the third after Nationals shoved across five runs. Pray went the rest of the way and the Nationals continued their terrific bombardment as they swept to their easy triumph.

Ottawa sent three pitchers to the mound. Walt Balash was replaced by Frank Schwartz in the third and was credited with the win although he gave way to Don Bryant in the sixth when he got into trouble.

The Ponies took a commanding four-run lead in the first turn at bat. The Nationals returned with three in their half of the inning and took the lead with two in the third.

They scored four more in the fourth and offset a three-run Kingston rally in the sixth with seven runs. Three more in the seventh and eighth innings ended the field day for the Nationals.

King Wins Over 'Pell' Mell by Wide Margin

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP)— The one-time kinky-haired kid who fought preliminary bouts at Toronto's Massey Hall came back home last night.

Li'l Arthur King, the local boy who made good, wasn't the same windmill-swinging youngster as he outpointed Gus (Pell) Mell of Montreal at Maple Leaf Gardens. The tutelage of Blinky Palermo of Philadelphia, which shot him to the top of the lightweight division has left its mark.

It was a smooth-working King who handled his heavier opponent with ease in the 10-round main event last night. Weighing 140 to Mell's 148, King piled up an authoritative margin, dropping only one round to the hard-trying Montreal veteran. It was his 23rd straight victory since he left Toronto two years ago.

Mell opened cautiously and stopped a steady parade of left jabs in the early rounds, but jarred Li'l Arthur in the sixth as he launched a two-fisted attack. Then King regained control, opening a cut over the Montrealer's right eye and drawing blood from his nose. There were no knockdowns.

Marcel Lachappelle, 127 3-4 of Montreal and Davey Mitchell, 127 1-4 of Toronto battled to their second successive draw in a rousing eight-round semi-final.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

The nation's top golfers had gathered at Saint John, N.B. It was July 23, 1949 . . . and eight four-man teams were set to tee off. At stake was the annual inter-provincial golf team championship—classic struggle for the ownership of the Willingdon Cup.

Upsetting pre-tourney predictions, Quebec took the lead in the 36-hole contest. Ontario's last man on the 17th hole needed a 73 to even tie. In a brilliant last-ditch display he took a one-over-par 71. Ontario had won Canada's hardest-fought cup match.

Skill and keen sportsmanship put golf in the first rank of our summer sports. And together, skill with sportsmanship help you in work and play . . . keeping your scope for opportunity in Canada . . . unlimited.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Wise players hate to lead away from a high card against a suit-contract. Their fear is that it may losega trick. Or tip off declarer which way to finesse that suit, if necessary.

In such a situation preference is given to the lead of a trump. Unless there is a chance of losing a trump trick thereby. But they are not as fearful of this as less experienced players may be.

A typical case is where the bidding went like this

South	West	North	East
1 H	Dbl	2 H	Pass
4 H	All Pass

West held the hand shown here:

♠A Q 4
♥K 7 3
♦Q 6 3
♣A Q 10 4

A lead from any one of these suits is courting danger. From one of his black suits a lead might give declarer a trick. It might be a trick with south king that might otherwise be captured.

A lead from the diamond suit is permissable by rule. But only when there is no other lead that offers more safety. Because a lead from such a holding tells declarer how to handle that suit.

A trump lead from his king might be dangerous, too. But this west considered the chances in all four suits before deciding. Then he led heart seven as the least dangerous lead in his hand.

His reasoning was something like this: North has not much for his partner except trumps. Although possible, it is not likely that north has trump ace. And if he has, so what?

If north has trump ace, south can finesse west out of his king at will. If north does not have trump ace, the heart seven lead will not lose his king. And king is the only trump west expects to make.

A beginner should not burden himself with such deviations. He should first learn basic rules. Plenty of time for hot stuff later.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 14 — (AP)— Time now to give a few thoughts to that species of Hollywood life known as the screen writer.

The movie scrivener is a much-maligned gent. He is branded as everything from a soul-selling hack to Heaven knows what, and is often pictured as having wild hair, loud shirts and two swimming pools.

Actually, the screen writer is a craftsman who works hard at his profession. Take Ranald MacDougall. He wears neat suits with white shirts and owns but one swimming pool. He is good-looking enough to be an actor. Which he was until he discovered he could make more money with a typewriter.

Pet Jokes

Like actors who have their favorite performances, writers have pet wisecracks. MacDougall was telling me his favorite, which was born in Joan Crawford's house.

MacDougall, producer Jerry Wald and director Mike Curtis were visiting the actress to discuss "Mildred Pierce." They were ushered into a beautiful den with walls and furniture of leather.

"Hmm," said the writer, "this must be like living in a valley."

Nobody laughed. MacDougall tried to put the line in the script and was told it wasn't funny. He tried to inject it into three other scripts, but it was always tossed out. Finally he managed to slip it into "June Bride." "It got a big laugh," he added happily.

And Private Ones

Another MacDougall favorite came in "Mildred Pierce." Eve Arden observed Jack Carson giving her an all-inclusive glance. "Leave something on me," she said, "I'll catch cold."

Film writers also cherish their own private jokes which don't get in the script. One of MacDougall's pets was a comment on a moth-eaten script about an air squadron. Borrowing an old cliche, he said: "You can't send the boys up in that script; it's murder."

LOST VILLAGE

Manila, Sept. 14 — (AP) — Communist Hukbalahap peasants killed three Philippines army men in an ambush yesterday and looted a village in separate actions east and south of Manila. Philippines Army planes killed 11 Huks in strafing runs on a group of raiders fleeing back to the mountains after they had been repulsed by a new citizens' army defence unit at Arayat two days ago.

St. Catharines All-Stars Win Lacrosse Title

Vancouver, Sept. 14 (CP) — British Columbia's two-year reign as the stronghold of junior lacrosse was snapped last night by a fighting bunch of youngsters from St. Catharines, Ont.

St. Catharines All-Stars a team well named, took the Dominion Junior Lacrosse championship and the Minto Cup in three straight games from Vancouver Burrard Juniors.

Score of the game that ended it all was 17-8. The final followed the pattern of the two previous frays, with the invading easterners supreme in speed and strategy.

Even the scores were similar, and the outcome was not unexpected. The visitors established themselves as favorites Saturday night by taking the first game 18-9. Then they consolidated their gains Monday night with a 14-9 victory.

With the Minto Cup in Eastern possession for at least another year, the St. Catharines players leave tonight by train for their homes.

homes. Presentation of the cup was made by Bill Easterbrook, vice-president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association.

Leading snipers for St. Catharines last night were Derry Davies 19-year-old 175 pounder, who potted four goals and took an assist, and Max Wooley and Ted How, with three goals each. Al Frick scored one goal and was credited with two assists.

St. Catharines led 5-2 at the end of the first quarter, 11-3 at half-time, and 14-5 at the end of the third quarter. Burrards rallied early in the final quarter, potting two goals. Then St. Catharines came back. Last goal was scored by Davies, assisted by Len Caruse, at 14:17.

Goalie for St. Catharines throughout the series was Ted Brocuk, a fast-moving 18-year-old of senior ability. Vancouver used two goalies last night, Vic Grover replacing Maurice Woods at the beginning of the third quarter.

All games were clean-fought. Speed and strategy won the championship for the east. And few penalties were handed out in any one game.

Marmora— Marmora's juvenile baseball team playing their second Trent Valley League finals play-off game at Campbellford on Monday evening succumbed to the home team by 14-11. The game was finished in floodlight which proved a little embarrassing to both teams and occasioned more errors than usual.

Darrah who started on the mound was replaced by Drummond in the second. McNaughton was in good form for the winners and allowed only one hit.

Highlights of batting were Brooks' homer for Marmora in the 6th and McNaughton's triple in an earlier inning.

Herald B.C. Clay As Healing Agent

Vancouver —(CP) —A British Columbia clay deposit is being tested for healing properties already heralded as without "parallel in the world today."

Dr. Ernst A. Hauser of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology says a deposit about 280 miles upcoast from here is valuable for healing cuts, burns and wounds. He says it is also helpful in the treatment of arthritis.

"I am perfectly prepared to put my reputation as an international scientist at stake in saying that this product is unique in every way," he recently told a business men's meeting.

The clay has been marketed recently. The deposit is located on King Island, below Prince Rupert. Further investigations of its properties are under way.

Mother Finds Lost Children In the Bronx

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—Six children whose mother thought she had lost them somewhere in Brooklyn or Queens were located today—in the Bronx.

Mrs. Ruth Stevens, 39-year-old widow from Bladensboro, N.C., arrived with her family Sunday. Monday she appealed to Travellers' Aid, saying she had taken the children to a rooming house but couldn't find it.

All she could recall was a neighborhood with a lot of funeral parlors and a dime store, reached by a bridge with trains on it, at a taxi cost of about $2.

The frantic mother spent two nights in a city shelter while the apparently-hopeless search continued.

But yesterday the bus-depot porter who suggested the address was found. The house was in the Bronx.

Mrs. Stevens' plight brought her a quick introduction to the ways of the city.

A radio station planned it so her reunion with her children would take place in the studio and be broadcast on a country-wide hook-up.

AT THE BELLE

"Stars In My Crown" has a Cinderella from the five-and-dime

Cinderellas have stepped out and up from about everywhere but here's one whom the fairy godmother lifted from behind the counter of a five-and-dime store.

Ellen Drew was selling picture frames behind a Chicago dime-store counter when a man asked her for a photograph. The picture won her a beauty contest and, in turn, paved Ellen's way to Hollywood.

'Actually it wasn't quite as simple as that," says the actress, currently appearing in the Belle Theatre screen as Joel McCrea's wife in M.G.M.'s heart appeal story, "Stars In My Crown."

"When mother and I arrived in Hollywood, flushed with the success of the contest prize, studio gates seemed to be open to every one but us. Because we had to eat I got a job where food was plentiful. It was a restaurant and I was a waitress."

But to prove that an Irishman never gives up, the cafe Miss Drew chose was next door to Grauman's Chinese Theatre. The selection turned out to be as shrewd as she had anticipated for the place was a favorite eating place for a number of Hollywood's talent scouts. It wasn't long before one of them had arranged a stock contract for Ellen with the Paramount Studios.

"I didn't do much here," Miss Drew recalls, "until Bing Crosby noticed me. The next thing I knew he was teaching me to sing. I couldn't believe it. But he was. Soon I was singing for my first big picture, 'Sing You Sinners.'"

In "Stars In My Crown," showing tonight and Friday at Belle Theatre, she plays a small town church organist and proves the romantic inspiration for Joel McCrea in the dramatic story of a two-fisted parson, based on a novel by Joe David Brown.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a Sunday walk with pop, and I said, Hay pop, I think I saw a pin on the sidewalk, back there a little ways.

Was it a gold pin with a diamond head? pop said, and I said, No sir.

A silver pin with a gold head, perhaps? pop said, and I said, No sir, just a plane pin with its own head.

Then forget it, pop said, and I said, But jimminy roozalem, pop, picking up a pin is good luck.

That's what Loftus Links thought, but he found out different, pop said, and I said, How did he, pop?

Well, less than 5 minutes after he picked up that pin, a truck nocked him down and broke 3 cigars in his vest pockit, pop said. And when he arrived home he found that his house had been struck by lightning, although it was a cleer sunshiney day, and the whole roof had been bernt off and 6 silver tea spoons were badly tarnished. And to make matters werse, he found a note from his wife warning him not to expect noodle soup for dinner, although it was the day for noodle soup at their house, because all the markets were out of noodles. And as the last straw, Loftus Links felt a sudden twinge in his back, and realized that he had a touch of lumbago caused by stooping over to pick up the pin, pop said.

Well anyways, pop, my name's not Loftus Links, I said, and pop said, By gollies, that's so, it never occurred to me.

And if we went back, I still mite find the pin, I said, and pop said, Stranger things than that have happened.

Then shall we go back? I said, and pop said, No.

Which we didn't.

NON-CONFIDENCE

The Progressive Conservative leader told the house he doesn't agree with Maj. Fulton's advice to Canadians not to enlist in the army's special force until the government has imposed conscription. He did, however, intend to reply to an attack on Maj. Fulton by Sqdn. Ldr. James Sinclair, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott. He said "it comes with very bad grace for anyone who has not seen combat service to reflect on the loyalty" of a man who had seen plenty of service as an infantry officer in Italy and western Europe.

(Sqdn. Ldr. Sinclair was adjutant of an R.C.A.F. squadron in England and Africa.)

Called Isolationist

Sqdn. Ldr. Sinclair had referred to Maj. Fulton as an isolationist and had said his statements were parallel to wartime statements that led one Canadian — Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal — to be sent to an internment camp.

In that other case, said Mr. Drew, the government had alleged that a law was broken. In this case, whether one agreed with Maj. Fulton or not, no law had been broken. It that other case, the government had said the war effort was being hindered. Here Maj. Fulton was seeking a greater military effort.

J. L. Gibson (Ind—Comox-Alberni) and George Cruickshank (L—Fraser Valley) called for withdrawal of Mr. Drew's remark that Sqdn. Ldr. Sinclair had not seen combat service. Mr. Drew declined to withdraw.

Jean Francois Pouliot (L—Temiscouata) entered the discussion and said Maj. Fulton had a brilliant war record but that did not prevent a man from making mistakes in life. Everyone was aware of the mistakes that had been made by Mr. Drew.

The uproar ended after Leslie Mutch (L—Winnipeg South) said he did not think people would have any higher regard for parliament as a result of the speeches of Mr. Drew and Mr. Pouliot.

In calmer moments, members voted 152 to 56 against a Progressive Conservative motion of non-confidence in the government. A similar C.C.F. motion was defeated 147 to 53.

Both motions were moved Tuesday as a means of showing the opposition's dissatisfaction with the special emergency-session budget brought down to help finance Canadian participation in the Korean war, an accelerated defence program at home and arms aid to Europe.

Charges Gov't Failed

The Progressive Conservatives charged the government had "failed' to curtail non-essential expenditures and improve efficiency of government at a time when people were suffering from soaring prices and were facing extraordinary expenditures for national defence.

The C.C.F. motion was similarly worded but in addition accused the government of having "failed to protect the people of this country from profiteering by the imposition of an excess profits tax".

After turning to the budget resolutions, members quickly passed one increasing the tax on corporations to 15 per cent from 10 per cent on the first $10,000 taxable income and to 38 per cent from 33 per cent on anything in excess of $10,000.

Other resolutions still to be adopted provide for an increase in the taxes on a lengthy list of luxury and semi-luxury goods including such things as liquor, beer, soft drinks, chocolate bars, candy, chewing gum, various categories of electrical appliances and furs.

Jack Garland (L—Nipissing) said he could not agree with those who supported new taxes on soft drinks. He hoped people would continue to use cool, satisfying soft drinks and he could assure them they would suffer no ill effects.

Toronto Wants No Part of Squabble Between Justices

Toronto, Sept. 14, (CP)—Toronto Board of Control decided Wednesday it wants no part of the squabble between Chief Justice W. F. Schroeder.

Controller Allan Lamport, describing the three-day-old tiff as a "sitdown strike", wanted the city to ask the Ontario Attorney-General to intervene. Lamport's colleagues voted down the proposal.

Meanwhile, there was no action in the civil-actions section of the Provincial Supreme Court Fall Assizes, where 120 cases await action by Mr. Justice Schroeder. He still hasn't shown up.

Mr. Justice Schroeder had been scheduled to handle the criminal section of the Assizes, which started Monday. Chief Justice McRuer, returning earlier than expected from Peterborough, took over, apparently because of a tradition whereby criminal cases are handled by senior judges.

There apparently were words between the two men. Mr. Justice Schroeder has spent his time at home, at the law library and his office. He's having nothing to do with the civil court.

Three-Year-Old Boy Killed in Car Accident

Simcoe, Sept. 14 (CP)—A head-on collision between a truck and an automobile near here Wednesday took the life of a three-year-old boy and sent his parents to hospital.

David Newman, of Niagara Falls, Ont., died in a Toronto hospital, Wednesday night, after an emergency trip by ambulance. Maurice A. Newman, 32, the dead boy's father, is in serious condition with internal and chest injuries, facial lacerations and a possible leg fracture.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Lenora Newman, is in fair condition with a fractured wrist, internal injuries and a possible fractured jaw.

The truck driver, Gordon Herbert, 36, of St. Catharines, and Remus Parkinson, of Henderson, N.C., whose car struck the rear of the Newman vehicle after the collision, were slightly injured.

Briefs From Britain

(By The Canadian Press)

Newton Abbot, Devon, England (CP)—Arriving half an hour late at a conference of railway supervisors, J. R. Figgins, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, gave this excuse: "Unhappily the train did not run anything like on time."

King's Lynn, Norfolk, England, (CP)—The town's statue of King Charles II was recently renovated and now is considerably thinner—18 coats of paint were removed.

London (CP)—Advertisement in London's Walthamstow district read: "Wanted—non-gossiping, non-drinking domestic help."

Sheffield, England — (CP)—Five boxes were stolen from a car here, but the thief must have been surprised when he opened them. They contained 17 sets of artificial teeth.

Brighton, England (CP)—"No room," was the reply to a party of would-be visitors from India. Elephant tusks were offered as payment.

Outwell, Norfolk, England — (CP)—They've got bats in the Outwell parish church belfrey and authorities are to fumigate the nests to get rid of them.

Castleton, Derbyshire, England (CP)—A cricket match here was held up for 10 minutes while players, umpires and spectators chased a hare from the pitch. The intruder easily eluded its pursuers.

Nailstone, Leicestershire, England (CP)—A balloon hanging up in Bernard Baxter's store suddenly burst. A wasp had stung it and was killed instantaneously by the blast.

Leeds, England (CP)—Mrs. Lizzie Jeffs, 51, had a "burning" headache. She had applied methylated spirits to her aching forehead and on lighting a match it burst into flames. Mrs. Jeffs was treated for burns at a local clinic.

Antsley, Leicestershire, England (CP)—Curiosity cost a cat two inches of its bushy tail and nearly all nine lives. It got too near a working vacuum cleaner and was sucked into the mechanism backwards.

London (CP)—Soldier R. King, 23, was sentenced to 56 day's detention at a court-martial for twice absenting himself without leave. The first occasion was to get married—the second, five months later, "to arrange a divorce."

Blagdon, Somerset, England—((CP)—Rabbit hunter John Williams turned rescuer, when both his dog and quarry fell down a disused well. Williams rescued his dog first, then the rabbit. "Although I was out shooting," he said, "I let that one go—it deserved it."

London (CP)—When a pram ran into his ladder, John Adams, a house-painter had two shocks. The first was a fall of 20 feet to the ground, the second when he saw a baby in the pram—covered in paint.

Judge Finds Six Companies Violate Anti-Trust Act

Boston, Sept. 14 (AP)—Federal Judge Charles E. Wyzanski, Jr., ruled Wednesday that six abrasive manufacturers violated the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by combining to manufacture coated abrasives jointly in foreign countries.

The court ordered the companies to end their joint ownership of factories in Great Britain, Canada and Germany.

The concerns named are the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company, St. Paul, Minn.; Behr-Manning Corporation, Worcester; Carborundum Company, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Armour and Company, Chicago; Durex Abrasive Corp. and the Durex Corporation, Jersey City, N.J.

Judge Wyzanski found that in 1929 the companies controlled four-fifths of all coated abrasives exported from the United States through an export association.

When exports to the foreign countries were hindered by the tariff, currency and discriminating regulations, he said, they jointly established and operated factories for the manufacture of abrasives in the three countries. Coated abrasives, commonly called sandpaper, are widely used in industrial plants.

Judge Wyzanski found that the joint operation of the foreign factories reduced exports from the United States.

HAMS WORK OF ART

Chicago, Sept. 14 — (AP) — A window was smashed in Novak's meat market last night and glass fell in an attractive display of hams.

A block away, policemen in a squad car heard the noise and raced to the scene. They quickly caught up with Lester Brown, 23, rushing down the street with three bundles in his arms.

Police said the hams were works of art—oil paintings on a papier-mache covering with a stuffing of sawdust.

NEW TYPE OF CAR

Yorkton, Sask., Sept. 14. (CP)—A new-type railway refrigerator car arrived here Tuesday with a carload of plums, pears and peaches picked Thursday in orchards around Winona, Ont.

O. C. Young, principal research engineer for the Fisheries Research Board of Canada who came with the experimental car, said it was the first time a car of fresh fruit was ever handled in Canada under refrigeration.

The car resulted from a $20,000 grant to the Fisheries Experimental Branch by the National Research Council.

CARRY OFF EMPTY SAFE

Baltimore, Sept. 14 — (AP) — Thieves could have save themselves a lot of trouble at cement plant yesterday.

They broke in through window carried out a 300-pound safe loaded it in a truck and drove away.

The safe was unlocked, company officials said.

Besides, there was no money in it.

Blood on the Stars

By Brett Halliday

"All the organized mobs have someone set up as a go-between ... someone with the protective coloration of legality ... like a private eye. Through this go-between a deal is arranged with the insurance company for the return of stolen articles at a price and no questions asked. I've no doubt that you and Randolph have arranged many such affairs in the past." The detective chief whirled and took a sharp turn about the room, came back and stopped before them, adding angrily, "I'm sick of such flaunting of legal authorities here on the Beach and I warn you both I won't countenance it."

Shayne exchanged an amused glance with Randolph and said, "Painter has just got through accusing me of arranging the holdup tonight."

"You seem very sure you can put your hands on the bracelet as soon as a suitable reward is offered," snapped Painter.

Shayne laughed indulgently. "That's because I keep the right sort of company. Some day Painter you're going to shed your diapers and learn that you can't solve cases by sitting in a chair and drawing a salary from the taxpayers." He turned his back on the infuriated man and said to Randolph, "I'll see you tomorrow and talk this over."

"I promise you, Shayne," said Painter, "that if those jewels are returned through your efforts I'll slap you in jail as an accessory both before and after the fact and keep you there till you rot."

"I don't understand what all the argument is about," said Mark Dustin, his forehead knitted. "If an insurance company wants to offer a reward why isn't it legal for anyone to collect it who can return the bracelet?"

"Simply because it constitutes colusion with criminals and that's a felony," Painter shouted. "I tell you I suspect Shayne knows where your bracelet is cached this very minute and he'll keep possession of it until a large enough reward if offered. You don't realize it, Mr. Dustin but this sort of thing has become a regular racket. Men like Shayne take advantage of insurance companies faced with a large loss and eager to settle for less than the face value of the policy."

"If it's illegal for you to collect a reward from the insurance company," Said Dustin to Shayne "perhaps the chief won't object if I hire you to recover my property. Would that be colusion, too?"

"Better ask Painter," Shayne said with a shrug. "He's the lad with all the answers."

"It's practically the same situation," Painter snapped. "It amounts to puttting a premium on successful thievery. There are duly constituted authorities to enforce the law."

"It sounds to me," Dustin told Shayne, "as though it's practically illegal for you to earn a fee. How does a private dick earn a living?"

"I'll get along," Shayne answered.

The telephone rang and Celia Dustin answered it. She hung up and told her husband, "The ambulance is here to take you to the hospital, dear."

Dustin finished his drink and winced with pain as he came slowly to his feet. "I wish you'd call me tomorrow, Shayne. I'd like to keep in touch with things." His back was turned to Painter, and his left eyelid dropped in a wink as he made the suggestion.

Shayne said, "Glad to, Dustin. Good luck with that hand."

Celia touched her husband's left coatsleeve lightly as they went to the door. The others followed them into the corridor.

Peter Painter edged up to Shayne and said, "I want you to understand that I'm not at all sure you didn't engineer the holdup tonight. I intend to check every movement you've made and every person you've contacted since you witnessed the purchase of that ruby bracelet last Monday. If it turns up in your hands. I'm going to know how it got there."

Again Shayne ignored him, and said to Voorland, "I'll drop in your store in the morning, Walter, and get all the dope you can give me on the bracelet. I've an idea there's going to be some money in this, somehow, for me."

Shayne drove away from the Sunlux Hotel slowly his forehead furrowed with thought. A couple of years had elapsed since he had operated professionally in the Miami area, and a great many changes had taken place. Changes particularly, in the organization and identity of the mobs ruling the resort city's underworld.

Two years ago, he reflected morosely, it would have been a cinch to contact the present holders of the ruby bracelet. There wasn't any doubt in his mind that it had been a professional job, the sort of thing Ray Higgins might have planned and executed in previous days. A word dropped in any one of half dozen saloons would soon have reached Huggins, and negotiations for the return of the stolen gems would have begun promptly.

But Ray Huggins had slipped from power eighteen months ago and there had probably been two of three uneasy successors since then, men who might not even know Mike Shayne except by reputation and who certainly had no way of knowing he was back in business at the old stand.

Shayne's muscles tightened as these vagrant thoughts drifted through his mind. Was he actually back in business in Miami? He hadn't publicly announced any such intention for he hadn't made up his mind yet. But he knew, as he drove meditatively along beneath Miami's golden moonglow that the decision had been made for him tonight ... by Peter Painter.

He knew without going into involved thought proceses that he had accepted the challenge of the Miami Beach detective chief. It was Painter's own fault for dragging him into the case. He had no intention of being told what he could or could not do. The threat of arrest on charges of complicity if he dared arrange a deal for the return of the bracelet would be laughable had it come from anyone except Painter. It was the sort of statement any cop might toss off in front of an aggrieved citizen but from anyone else it would have been accompanied by a sly wink to take away any sting from the official warning. Everybody in the know fully understood how such matters were arranged. It was, in a sense a kind of tribute levied by the underworld and one played along with it whether he liked it, or not.

Shayne didn't like it himself but he had picked up some nice fees that way in the past, and the insurance companies were glad to pay a moderate reward instead of sustain a huge loss. A case such as this involving a fortune in gems which could not be fenced to advantage was perfect for a fix. The important thing was to get oneself into it as a go-between who could be trusted by both parties. The thing now was to figure out a way to contact the jewel thieves in a hurry before someone else got to them with a proposition.

He turned off on one of the side streets before reaching Fifth and drove slowly, sitting erect behind the wheel and watching each side of the quiet street calculatingly.

A few blocks from the ocean he stopped in the middle of the block. The houses on both sides of the street were dark and there were no cars in sight in either direction. A gravel drive led off to the right, through stone gateposts into the landscaped grounds of a moderately large estate.

He was driving a light sedan which he had bought second-hand when he learned that Lucy Hamilton was coming to Miami. It was of pre-war vintage, but he had given it a new black paint job and it glistened now in the moonlight.

Church Needs 135 Buildings In Next 5 Years

Toronto, Sept. 14. (CP)—Leaders of the United Church of Canada were told yesterday the church needs 135 new church buildings—at an estimated cost of $1,500,000—during the next five years.

Dr. M. C. Macdonald, Associate Secretary of the Board of Home Missions, said the new churches are needed mainly in large cities.

He told the church's 14th general council: "As the frontier of Home Missions work now is in the nation's large cities and not in the outlying provincial district, most of this money must be spent in the densely-populated communities of the country."

Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, head of the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States, told the council the most outstanding social fact of our time is the yearning of the common man for a more abundant life. Coupled with his belief that only selfishness and ignorance are keeping him from it.

Bishop Oxnam said that formerly there just wasn't enough of everything to permit such a life. Now people believed there was enough.

He told the 400-odd delegates that "the rights of man, derived from the love of God, belong to man absolutely because he is the Son of God. The state does not confere such right, it merely confirms them."

The report of the church treasurer, Dr. Victor Mooney, showed the church's income last year was $2,700,000. Before the depression of the '30s, it had been nearly $3,000,000. It was only since 1942 that it had started to increase and "we hope this year that it will again be in the region of $3,000,000."

He also reported that the pension for retired ministers will be increased 25 per cent. The ministers' pension fund now was solvent for the first time in ten years.

Tells What Ended Stomach Distress and Backache

Suffered 5 Years with Acid Indigestion, Headaches and Dizzy Spells. Felt Nervous, Rundown. Had Many Aches and Pains. Tells of Relief.

"After suffering five years from stomach disorders and backache I have found wonderful relief by taking Syntona Herbal Compound," said Mrs. Rose Horvath, 153 Simcoe Street, London, Ont., in a recent report.

"I couldn't eat a meal without having trouble with gassy cramps and sour acid risings afterwards. I was subject to throbbing headaches and dizzy feelings and my nerves were all on edge. My back was aching so bad I could hardly straighten up and I developed rheumatic pains all through my limbs, joints and muscles.

"I had been trying many things without benefit and finally my daughter persuaded me to try Syntona. When I began taking this medicine I knew almost right away that it was helping me. It wasn't long before my food began to digest better, my nerves calmed down and I found I was going through the day without having headaches or that awful dizziness. I kept right on taking it and now the aches and pains are gone, my back feels fine and I can say I am eating better and feeling better than I did for years.

"I am very thankful for Syntona and I highly recommend it to others."

If you suffer as Mrs. Horvath did why not give Syntona a chance to help you, too? Take it for a short trial and the chances are you will find this pure herbal medicine to be just what you need to make you feel like yourself again.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it can help you, too.

U.S. TROOPS STORM ASHORE NEAR SOEUL

Labor Unrest Being Planned Says Minister

Essential Services Will Be Disorganized is Claim

London, Sept. 15 (Reuters) — Labor Minister George Isaacs said today that reports that communists are planning to cause serious unrest in Britain are true.

He told parliament: "Meetings are being held this weekend with only one object—to disorganize our essential services.

"I am speaking at a time when our men are facing serious risks in Korea and when it is essential there should be no danger of interference with their supplies and their support."

He said the leaders of the plot include men who had just returned from a cominform meeting in Warsaw.

"The government are keeping a close watch on all these activities and will not hesitate to take all necessary action."

Anthony Eden, Deputy Conservative leader, described the minister's statement as "one of the gravest which has been made to us in parliament in recent years in time of peace."

He asked if the government contemplates legislative action.

Isaacs replied, "yes, if such should be necessary."

Isaacs said there is evidence that the organization to plan labor unrest is being created chiefly by men prominent in previous unofficial strikes.

They included some expelled from their trade unions for anti-union activities.

Appeals to Workers

"The attempts to create trouble cannot succeed if the workers refuse to be catspaws," he said.

He appealed to all workers to be on their guard against attempts to drag them into a struggle "which will be to the detriment of the nation, themselves and their fellow workers."

Isaacs linked the current London wildcat bus strike with communist activities.

The strike, partially paralyzing London transport, involves 15,558 men who stopped work as a protest against engagement of more women conductresses to the alleged detriment of their demand for higher wages.

"It is significant that communist agitators, who have been expelled from office in the union, appear to be taking the lead in this strike, which is following the familiar pattern," the labor minister said.

Customs Office Denies Charges Made by Tourist

Watertown, N.Y., Sept. 15 — (AP)—A United States customs office denied Thursday night that it had charged members of the Glidden Tour duty because they broke up a trip to Canada with a St. Lawrence River boat ride.

A woman member of the tour, a trip from Lake Placid to Rochester, N.Y. via Montreal in about 100 ancient automobiles, had said that "many" of the tourists had paid duty on Canadian purchases because of the boat trip into U.S. waters.

Thomas J. McArdle, deputy collector in charge of the customs station at the Thousand Island Bridge, denied the statement. He said only one of the approximately 200 tourists had been charged duty and that he admitted he had not been in Canada 48 hours.

Current customs' regulations allow travellers to bring back $200 worth of duty-free merchandise after a 48-hour visit to Canada.

The Glidden tourists entered Canada Monday noon and returned to the U.S. Wednesday afternoon.

McArdle said that after the two-hour boat ride had been deducted from the total time they had spent in Canada all but the one man had spent between 48½ and 50 hours across the border and therefore were allowed to bring $200 worth of duty free goods.

The Glidden Tour, held most every year since first started in 1903 by Charles J. Glidden, is sponsored by the Veteran Motor Car Club of America, the antique Automobile Club of America and the Horseless Carriage Club.

Body of Pilot Found in Wreck Of Jet Fighter

Lowville, N. Y., Sept. 15 (AP) — The body of Lieut. George H. Helbing, 25, was found Thursday in the wreckage of an F-86 jet fighter plane in dense woods near here.

Helbing's plane crashed Wednesday in the southern part of Lewis county, about 30 miles southwest of here. Lowville is about 60 miles southeast of Kingston, Ont.

Capt. Richard Leech, public information officer at the base, said the cause of the crash was unknown.

The wreckage was sighted Thursday afternoon by two lumberjacks who notified a search party.

Leech said the plane was on a routine training flight from Rome when it crashed. He said the ship was last seen near Watertown Wednesday noon.

CONSUMPTION INCREASES

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 15— (CP) — Power consumption in Niagara Falls has increased eight per cent over 1949 figures, the local Hydro Electric Commission advised Thursday.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 15—(CP)—Synopsis: The disturbance which blanketed southern Ontario with fog rain and drizzle in the past week is moving slowly out of the province. The clearing behind this system will be slow and short lived as cooler air has already pushed into northern Ontario bringing more clouds, showers and lower temperaures. This colder air is expected to move steadily southward today and Saturday and should cover the entire province by Saturday evening.

CHEVRIER HINTS CANADA SHOULD BUILD SEAWAY

Independent Action Urged by Minister

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 15—(CP) —Canada's transport minister has called for "plain speaking" and possible independent Canadian action in the long-postponed plan for the St. Lawrence seaway development.

Transport Minister Chevrier did some "plain speaking" himself in an address last night in his home town and home constituency, and suggested ways this seaway-conscious border city might fit into a Canadian seaway if the United States Congress does not want to approve the $1,000,000,000 project.

Mr. Chevrier endorsed the idea of a combined international project, but said that "if there are interests in the United States that are going to stand in the way of the development forever, Canadians ought to be told."

"After we are convinced that no progress can be made on the combined scheme—and unfortunately that seems to be the case—then I believe that Canada should consent to the reference of the (power) applications of Ontario and New York state to the international joint commission for consideration.

"In that event, I personally believe that Canada should also explore the possibility of constructing a deep waterway on the Canadian side of the boundary."

U.S. Senate in Block

Ontario and New York have asked to develop the hydro project alone. Canada has indicated its agreement but the U.S. has said both the hydro and seaway projects must come at the same time. The U.S. Senate has never approved the move.

Mr. Chevrier, addressing a meeting celebrating the 100th anniversaries of the union of the counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, said Canada is impatient with American inaction and that he spoke at a time when "for military, economic and strategic reasons, we should press for action."

Elaborating on the idea of an independent Canadian move, he noted that the 14-foot draft of the canals already on the Canadian side of the border could be deepened to 27 feet, and said there was "every reason" to proceed with the project "now".

He recalled that the 2,200,000-horsepower development which could be harnessed from the long Sault rapids had been talked about even when he was a boy in Cornwall.

Iran's Kurdish Jews Wait in Crowded Misery For Israel Migration

Tehran, Iran, Sept. 15—(AP)—Some 14,000 descendants of the wandering tribes of Israel are waiting in poverty and misery here for a chance to go to the new Jewish homeland.

They are among the little-known Jews who have lived for centuries among the Moslems, adopting the dress and many of the customs of their Arab and Persian neighbors. But they have preserved the ancient forms of their Jewish religion and speak the archaic Hebrew of the Old Testament.

This has been the only Moslem country, aside from Turkey, where Jews have found a refuge since the 1948 Palestine War. Thousands of Jews hoping eventually to go to Israel have slipped across the border from Iraq. Others have fled to Tehran to escape sporadic violence at the hands of fanatical Kurdish tribesmen.

Iran has a tradition of tolerance toward Jews. This dates back to the time of Cyrus the great, who conquered Babylonia in 538 B.C. and freed the Jews enslaved by King Nebuchadnezzar.

The Iranian government is cooperating fully with Israeli officials organizing the migration to the promised land, but it seems a painfully slow migration for Jews who have to wait for months for places on the chartered planes which fly them to Israel.

About 1,400 monthly are flown from Tehran to Israel, but the quota will be cut down this fall because priority is being given to Jews in Poland and Romania, where governments have lifted barriers to emigration for the next three months.

About 28,000 Iranian and Iraq Jews have gone to Israel from here in the last two years. But the number of those waiting to go increases daily.

About half the refugees are crowded into two camps in Hebrew cemeteries on the outskirts of Tehran. Others are living in the city's big synagogue or are staying with Jewish families.

Although the Iranian government officially opposes persecution of Jews, its police power in remote mountain areas often is slim. To escape outbursts of anti-Jewish violence thousands of Jews have abandoned their homes and property and come to Tehran on foot, muleback or by camel.

Provision has been made for migration of Iraqi and Kurdish Jews because of past persecution. No provision has yet been made for Iranian Jews because it is felt they can go to Israel after Jews have been taken from trouble spots.

Three American Soldiers Thrown Into Roaring Fire By North Korean Captors

By WILLIAM JORDEN

With U.S. 2nd Division, Korea, Sept. 15 (AP)—American soldiers testified today at least three of their comrades were thrown into a roaring fire by their north Korean captors on the western front recently.

The grisly tale of this latest in a series of red atrocities against American prisoners came to light during a U.S. 2nd Division investigation today.

The Americans were captured when the reds overran an advance command post the night of Aug. 31. The American position fell during the first communist drive that rocked United Nations defenders back on their heels.

A number of witnesses told the army inquiry board they saw their fellow soldiers, some of them wounded, thrown into a roaring fire which apparently had been built for that purpose.

One sergeant said he saw three Americans thrown into the fire by the north Koreans. He said he heard one scream: "Don't do it! Don't do it!"

The sergeant said the reds occupied the position about 30 minutes and then moved on after their grim work was done.

Another sergeant said the north Koreans made the fire with blankets and anything available. He said the fiery deathbed was about 10 feet across.

He said the first man tossed into the flames appeared to be wounded badly. He said the reds carried him to the fire and he made no effort to get out.

The second man, he said was able to walk with difficulty. It was he who pleaded with the north Koreans.

"They slugged him with something," the second sergeant added, "and threw him in."

The area where the atrocities were committed has not been recaptured.

MacArthur Directs Bold Blow To Crack Enemy's Backbone

By RUSSEL BRINES

On the Inchon Front, Korea, Sept. 15 — (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur returned to combat today to direct a bold military gamble which he says may break the backbone of the North Korean army.

At the head of the amphibious landing, MacArthur sent American marines storming into Inchon to open a second front 165 miles northwest of the southeastern beachhead.

He is remaining indefinitely in Korea to run what may be the war's climactic campaign.

MacArthur told seven accompanying correspondents the main objectives were to severe the vital red communications in the Inchon and Seoul bottleneck and then crush the communists between the expeditionary force and the main U.N. army.

The reds lack the strength to hit both Allied forces simultaneously.

"If we can accomplish what we aim at," said the 70-year-old General, "his (the enemy's) condition will rapidly become critical."

Today he watched with a smile as the first part of his planned operation unfolded perfectly in a rosy dawn.

Three and one-half hours after the marines had made the initial landing on Wolmi Island, MacArthur with top generals and admirals cruised in a small launch within rifle range of the enemy off a second beach on the edge of Inchon. The marines swarmed ashore on that beach later in the afternoon.

Allied shells whizzed over the launch, bombarding the beach as MacArthur cruised past. There was no answering fire.

MacArthur opened his second front on the gamble that Russia and communist China would stay out. He also gambled that the highly-developed American amphibious techniques could overcome the dangers of landing on mudflats and seawalls — the toughest landing areas officers said they ever had seen.

Gen. LaFleche Asks Recall For Ill-Health

Canberra, Sept. 15. (CP)—Maj.-Gen. the Hon. L. R. LaFleche, Canadian High Commissioner to Australia, has asked the Canadian government to recall him, it was learned today.

Gen. LaFleche said ill health resulting from injuries suffered in the First World War has prevented him from carrying out his duties. In a statement to the press he said he plans to sail aboard the Aorangi October 5.

He has been High Commissioner since last October.

In a farewell message to Australia he said that the future will see Canada and Australia much closer "than we now imagine".

"I notice with great pleasure that you have found uranium, which will add to your capacity to defend yourselves.

"I've seen and admired the steps you have taken to stop the incursion of communism in this country. I am not so much against communism as the way they practise it and what they have imparted into it.

"They are anti-God and have sacrificed everything for something I cannot appreciate.

"I think you Australians are fortunate in having opened your eyes to the danger of communism, and as a result it will be a lot less dangerous towards your country."

APPROPRIATION DEMANDED

Toronto, Sept. 15 — (CP) —An appropriation in the Ontario budget for alcohol and narcotic education was demanded at the annual meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union Thursday.

Charge Husband Had Concealed Weapons

Toronto, Sept. 15. (CP)—Police today charged Vladimir Varbue of Sudbury, Ont., with carrying concealed weapons after he allegedy threatened to dynamite the house of his estranged wife. In court he was remanded to September 22.

Police said the 38-year-old miner, who came to Canada as a displaced person from Estonia, had five sticks of dynamite, enough to blow up a city block, when arrested. In his pockets were a detonator cap and fuse wrapped in absorbent cotton.

"There's no doubt he intended to blow it (the house) up," said Deputy Chief M. M. Mulholland.

He said Varbue wrote his wife a letter warning her what would happen if she didn't return to him. The couple separated eight months ago, and Varbue has been coming to Toronto periodically to see his nine-year-old daughter and to try to persuade his wife to return to him.

FOILS ATTEMPT TO ROB

HOUSE PACKS IN HEAVY AGENDA IN 18-DAY DRIVE

Parliament Adjourns Today Until Feb. 14

Ottawa, Sept. 15. (CP)—Parliament, working at unaccustomed speed, crammed a baby budget and a half-dozen major pieces of legislation into its 18-day special session.

Operating at a pace attuned to the urgency of the domestic and international situations, the Commons and the Senate moved swiftly to end the rail strike and then gave equally-quick endorsement to measures to step up and finance this country's expanding defence program.

To complete that legislative agenda, the Commons operated on a working schedule of three sittings a day, including Saturday. The special session, which opened Aug. 29, ends today with the giving of royal assent to bill's implementing finance Minister Abbott's stop-gap budget.

In view of the critical international situation, parliament decided to adjourn rather than prorogue. This makes it easier to call the legislators back into session, if needed.

The 1951 session is scheduled to open Feb. 14, but Prime Minister St. Laurent has given an undertaking to summon parliament before that date if the "public interest" warrants it.

Legislation Adopted

Here is the record of legislation adopted:

1. A bill ending the railway strike and providing for compulsory arbitration if the rails and the unions cannot come to agreement within a specified period.

2. A $850,000,000 defence appropriation bill to provide for an expanded rearmament program, including the equipping of the special force being raised for Korea or elsewhere and the provision of arms to be given to Canada's North Atlantic partners.

3. A bill authorizing the placing of armed forces on active service and their dispatch overseas.

General Election Seen as Possible In Great Britain

London, Sept. 15—(Reuters) — The possibility of an early general election in the United Kingdom, following the opposition's challenge to government steel nationalization plans, checked interest and encouraged advance end-account levelling. A slightly lower trend was fairly widespread.

British government stocks showed healthy reaction to recent rises and were ¼ to ⅜ lower. First class industrials, however, were generally maintained despite a slackening of demand. Small adjustments in steel shares were mainly to higher levels following the nationalization statement.

Profit-taking in oils resulted in fractional declines, other commodity shares were quietly steady.

Jet Flying Just 'Piece of Cake', Easier Than With Old Type Fighters

Chatham, N. B., Sept. 15 (CP) — It takes just 60 seconds after radar warns of an approaching enemy to get Canada's east coast jet fighters into the air.

The squadron, one of Canada's two operational Vampire squadrons, went through a dummy run here yesterday for newspaper men. The other squadron is based at Montreal.

The front-line jets are manned by men like veteran Sqdn.-Ldr. A. T. P. Davidson of Vancouver and youngsters like 22-year-old F.O. M. G. Sauder of Wausatenau, Alta.

Davidson — who, at 30 years of age, is almost the grandfather of the squadron — says jet flying is "a piece of cake."

"Everything happens faster and therefore you actually have less to observe and do," he says. "I think it's actually a lot easier than with old, conventional-type fighters."

Behind the squadron is a training establishment turning out replacements at the rate of 20 pilots every three months and Wing-Cmdr. E. B. Hale of Hamilton, station Commander, says the rate is being stepped up.

Landing Made 22 Miles West Of Red-Held Soeul

South Korean Marines Also Land on East Coast

Tokyo, Sept. 15 (CP) — United Nations forces, striking by sea and air in bold assaults more than 100 miles behind the main front line, made landings on both the east and west coasts of Korea today as the U. N. offensive against the North Korean communists gathered momentum.

In an amphibious landing covered by American, British and Canadian warships, U.S. Marines and infantry landed behind red battle lines on the west coast and knifed swiftly under fire into the big port of Inchon, harbor for Seoul, red-held South Korean capital.

Covered by bombardments from warships offshore, the marines landed first—at 6.30 a.m. (5.30 p.m. EDT, Thursday).

Dispatches from the Inchon beachhead said the three Canadian destroyers attached to United Nations naval forces —Athabaskan, Cayuga and Sioux — were among 262 allied ships taking part in the operation.

South Korean Marines landed at the same time on Korea's east coast.

22 Miles from Seoul

The west-coast landings were made at a point 22 miles from Seoul. A U.S. Army corps landed 11 hours after the marines went ashore.

The marines landed on Wolmi island after warships slammed heavy shells into concealed red shore positions.

A naval summary said the naval bombardment and jellied gasoline bombs spread by fighters literally burned out the wooded island. So close was the timing, the bombardment stopped a slim 15 seconds before the marines hit the beach. They drove two miles inland on their first lunge.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, U.N. commander said the deep amphibious penetration might break the backbone of the North Korean army.

Only Negligible Losses

In the thrust ashore at Inchon U.S. Marines were said to have suffered only "negligible" losses.

The South Koreans who landed on the east coast were reported to have occupied Angang, eight miles west of the Port of Pohang on the coast of the Sea of Japan.

The co-ordinated thrusts deep into red territory were the kick-off of the long-awaited United Nations offensive.

It was the day of the turning tide, coming after a series of bitterly-fought allied withdrawals that began with the tank-led North Korean assault across the 38th Parallel June 25.

Since that time, the allies had been shoved southward on the mountainous peninsula into a box beachhead on the southeast.

The beachhead had shrunk to an area roughly 50 miles wide, by 70 deep.

MacArthur Plans Attack

It was some 165 miles northwest of this beachhead that MacArthur was throwing his main counter-punch.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, United Nations commander who planned the bold amphibious operation to get behind red battle lines, was on hand to direct the west coast landing on the Yellow Sea.

Brown pillars of smoke from the bombardment billowed up into the overcast skies.

Associated Press correspondent Relman Morin reported shortly after the landing the Americans had driven two miles into Inchon. Morin landed with the forces.

The west coast operation put allied troops 150 miles behind the southeast Korean beachhead front.

Shaw Takes Turn For Worse, Specialist Called

Luton, England, Sept. 15 (AP) —George Bernard Shaw, suffering from a fracture of the thigh, took a turn for the worse today.

The Luton and Dunstable Hospital announced that a specialist in diseases of the kidney and bladder has been called to examine the 94-year-old playwright.

"Mr. Shaw is comfortable," said a noon medical bulletin, "but his general condition is rather less satisfactory."

An earlier bulletin had said the famous Irish wit "had a good night and is quite comfortable."

Shaw broke his thigh in a fall last Sunday at his cottage in Ayot St. Lawrence.

Cheese Storage Warehouse Is Well Underway

Construction of the new $250,000 cheese storage warehouse by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, to be built in the Franklin Street area near the bay shore, is well under way by the general contractors M. Sullivan and Sons of Arnprior.

The foundation of the 200 by 120 foot reinforced concrete structure had been completed and work is under way in erecting the concrete supporting piers. The building will be of one-storey construction with 17 foot clearance in the cheese storage department. Laboratories and office space will be housed in a two-storey section. The roof will be built up of tar and gravel.

Completion of the building is expected by early 1951 with the possibility of earlier completion. Preliminary work on the structure commenced early in August.

According to Chas. Heath, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers, the entire storage department of the building will be insulated for maintenance of proper refrigerating temperatures for cheese. Capacity of the storage will be between five and six million pounds or approximately 60,000 boxes. The building has been designed for the use of power lifting equipment for storage of cheese.

Plans for the construction of the building were made by the Ontario Cheese producers nearly a year ago, it being announced at the time that one or more cheese storage plants would be erected. The Belleville storage is the first to be built by the Association.

'Sockless' George Suffers Multiple Fractures in Fall, Still Remains Cheery

George (Sockless) Ponsford, well-known sergeant major of the famous Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has been in hospital in his Durban South Africa home city since the end of June, according to a letter received here.

"Sockless" suffered seven fractures in a fall from a 36-foot concrete scaffolding to a concrete floor while working as a carpenter. His letter which follows speaks for itself.

"I'm writing this propped up in a hospital bed where I've been for the last 13 days and shall be for another eight weeks or so. I fell 36 feet from the scaffolding of a building I was working on, landing on a concrete floor. Must have been good concrete because I didn't crack it.

"Being a true ~~Hasty~~ P, I did the job properly—seven fractures from my jaw to my ankle, all on the right side. The worst are my back and pelvis. Oh yes, you can always trust C Coy to keep in the limelight.

"I'll be out of here in no time, the Doc tells me. It's a 12-week job, but he wouldn't bet me that I wouldn't be out of here in 10 weeks. He doesn't know what a C Coy man can do when he gets stubborn.

"This morning they surprised me. You see I'm in plaster from chest to right toes. The sister said to me, "Would you like to go for a walk, Mr. Ponsford?" (They treat me with respect here.) Of course I replied, "Sure." To my surprise they brought along a gadget of tubular steel supported by wheels.

"I have to rest my shoulders on it and push myself about. I'm afraid today it was a bit too much for me. I'll walk tomorrow, though, by gum.

"I'm well treated here. The M.O.T.H.'s, an ex-servicemen's organization I belong to, brought me a radio. Lots of people come to see me, so I am O.K.

"Cheerio, gang. By the time you read this I'll be playing tennis again."

First Executive Of Kinsmen Boys' Band Elected

The Kinsmen's boys' band, at a recent meeting, elected their first executive, in order that relations between the band and the club can be conducted on a more solid business basis. President of the band executive is Bill Campbell, and the other members are Ron Elmy, Harry Croll, Ron Neal, and Bill Babbitt. Band leader is Alfred Cooper, of the BCI staff.

The executive will work with the band committee of the Kinsmen club, of which Orliff Lloyd is chairman. Club members felt that the boys should elect an executive, not only so that the band members would have a better control over their organization, but also that there would be a direct link between the club and the band.

Worker Pinned Between Trucks, Hip Injured

Pinned between two trucks while working on the Stirling-Campbellford road just outside the Stirling village limits, John Carlisle suffered severe hip injury early this week.

Carlisle is said to have been standing talking to a truck driver when a second truck in passing pinned him between the two vehicles. The man realized there was no room between the trucks and attempted to get out of the way but it was too late.

Dr. W. Cornett gave medical attention and the injured man was taken to Belleville hospital where an X-ray revealed three fractures in his left hip and a badly bruised shoulder.

TWEED

Council Sets Mill Rate at 66 3-4 Mills

Tweed (Special)—Ratepayers in the village of Tweed will cough up an additional four and a half mills for the tax collector this fall as village council this week upped the tax rate to 66 3-4 mills. The tax rate was struck at a special meeting of council held Tuesday evening.

The tax rate last year was 62 1-4 mills. This year's boost is due to an increase of two mills in the village rate and two mills increase in the Consolidated as well as the Separate School rates.

Council spent practically the entire evening in discussion of expenditures. The reeve and all chairmen expressed a desire to remain within their budgets.

"In view of the heavy drain on the treasury this year, I think we have done fairly well to keep the rate down to a 4 1-2 mill increase," Reeve T. C. Graham noted. Increase in assessment is given at $22,000 with a total assessment of $642,000.

Thresher Loses Arm, Becomes Entangled in Belt

Well known Slash Road farmer and thresherman, Everett Scrimshaw, lost his right arm when it became tangled in a belt while he was threshing at the farm of Ralph Kimmett, Deseronto.

The threshing had been almost completed late in the afternoon when Mr. Scrimshaw attempted to remove a belt from the tractor pulley which was powering the machine. A frayed piece of his shirt sleeve caught in the belt throwing him a considerable distance and completely severing the arm.

The injured man was rushed to Deseronto but no doctor was available and Mrs. A. B. Ross, a registered nurse, applied a tourniquet and the man was taken to Belleville General Hospital where Dr. D. C. McVicker amputated the arm above the elbow.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 15 — (CP) — Prices sagged from early gains as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Buying appeared at the opening but a sudden burst of selling started leaders sliding downwards and the drop picked up speed at the half-way mark.

Base Metal stocks paced the decline, dropping into minus ground for a second straight session following four days of uninterrupted advance. Almost all issues trading sagged. Several stocks sold at new highs in the opening burst of buying. Hudson Bay, Waite Amulet, Quemont and Noranda, leaders in the recent advances into new high ground were hard hit.

Industrials also eased. Gains and losses were about balanced but market leaders were among the losers. Steels, utilities, agricultures, foods and a few liquors slipped fractions. Papers continued in slight demand.

Golds dipped in mid-session from strong early gains. Several lower-priced issues were in heavy demand. Porcupine Reef held most of the limelight, jumping about 40 cents and selling at a new peak $1.02.

Losses tripled gains in Western oils. Calgary and Edmonton and Royalite led the decline.

Mrs. George Drewry Observes 90th Birthday With Her Family Present

It is a red letter day today in the life of Mrs. George Drewry, 82 Everett Street, who today is observing her 90th birthday at the home of her daughter Mrs. Fred Elgie.

But it is not the fact that she is 90 which is making Mrs. Drewry so pleased. It is because her entire family of nine grown up sons and daughters will be at home to pay her homage on the anniversary.

From as far away as Regina, Sask., from Rochester, N.Y., Michigan and New Jersey, her sons and daughters have come to be with their mother on her birthday. A big family dinner is scheduled for this evening at the Elgie home when all members of the family will be present.

A native of Rawdon township, Mrs. Drewry has lived in that township and in Stirling for the greater part of her life. Formerly Nancy Elizabeth Caverley, Mrs. Drewry and her husband farmed on the Drewry homestead until his death in 1923. Since then she has lived in Stirling and for the past four years with Mrs. Elgie in Belleville.

Remarkably alert for her advanced age, Mrs. Drewry still goes fairly regularly to church service at Holloway Street United Church. She is a member, however, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Stirling. Failing eyesight makes it difficult for her to read but she takes great enjoyment from conversation and clearly recalls events of her early life in Rawdon.

Just as evidence of her recuperative powers, Mrs. Drewry fell last September and had the misfortune to break her hip. She has now completely recovered and is again able to get about.

Although Mrs. Drewry has not lived on the farm for the past 23 years, the Drewry farm homestead is staying in the family name with the one son, William, remaining on the farm.

Children of Mrs. Drewry attending the family reunion at the Elgie home today include William Drewry of Rawdon; Fred Drewry, Toronto; Mrs. Thornton (Mabel) Gamey, of Regina; Mrs. William (Pearl) Fick, Leonia, N.J.; Charles Drewry, Stoney Creek, Ont.; Earl Drewry, Dearborn, Mich.; Everett Drewry, Port Burwell, Ont.; Mrs. Fred (Evelyn) Elgie, Belleville, and Gordon Drewry, Rochester, N.Y.

Drivers Defy Union Order To End Strike

London, Sept. 15 (Reuters) — Half of London's scarlet double-decker buses were off the streets today as 15,556 of the city's 40,200 drivers and conductors defied a union order to end their strike.

A score of other bus routes ere curtailed.

As the snowballing walkout entered its third day, 1,600 electric trolley bus men joined in overnight.

The walkout halted or seriously restricted service on 114 of London's 200 bus lines.

The strike began Wednesday as a protest against the hiring of more "clippers"—women bus conductors who clip punch marks in riders' tickets. The men argued that the hiring move would weaken their pending claim for a wage increase of £1 a week.

The busmen indicated they don't like being called communists when 100 of them arrived in three private coaches at Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express building on Fleet Street, and began chanting "We want Trevor Evans."

Evans, the papers labor news reporter, suggested communists were organizing the strike.

"This newspaper has accused us of being communists. We hate communists," one of the busmen said.

The demonstration took place just as Labor Minister George Isaacs was telling parliament the strikers no doubt has a grievance —but "it is significant that communist agitators appear to be taking the lead."

Princess Anne Cries While Being Photographed

London, Sept. 15. (AP)—Princess Anne, third in line of succession to the British throne, cried like any other month-old baby on being photographed for the first time.

After a while it got so boring she fell asleep.

But photographer Cecil Beaton, who snapped the photos yesterday in Princess Elizabeth's sitting room in Clarence House, said the tiny Princess showed a good deal of animation when she wasn't crying or sleeping. He even caught her in a rare smile.

Strikers Bound To Keep Peace Until Trial

Hamilton, Sept. 15 (CP) —Five striking civic employees were found guilty today of obstructing police after a Wednesday scuffle at an east end dump. They were bound over to keep the peace until Sept. 19. They are not to engage in any striking activities in the meantime, said Magistrate Beamer Hopkins.

Oliver Hodges, director of publicity for Local 5 of the Civic Workers Union, and William Patterson were remanded to Sept. 18 on the same charge.

The scuffle followed efforts of the city to dump garbage during the six-week-old strike of garbage collectors and other workers.

Operators, Brewers In Dispute Over Increased Prices

Toronto, Sept. 15 — (CP) — Announcement of increased beer prices in Ontario, said to be necessary because of the recent Dominion budget, are being held up because of a dispute between brewers and beverage room operators, it was reported today.

While general agreement is reported reached on a 25-cent pint bottle, there is said to be a difference of thought on any increases on draught beer.

Brewers, faced with an increased tax on malt, are reported asking hotelmen to absorb the increased cost of production rather than pass it on to the public. Equally, beverage room operators want the manufacturer to stand the jump.

Both sides are reported seeking some way out that will not increase the present 10 cents for a glass of beer. Hotelmen are reported opposed to cutting the size of the glass from its present eight ounces.

STATE OF FORESTRY

Montreal, Sept. 15 —(CP) — Canada's forests, being surveyed on the ground and in the air, should be counted "down to the last tree," within three years, the Canadian Forestry Association said today.

The association is gathering information of growth, regeneration and yield of Canadian forests for future use in forest management.

Driver is Taken To Hospital After Crash

Crashing into the side of a Smith highway transport as it crossed the highway in front of him, Clarke Hodgens, 19, of Foxboro, was injured shortly after midnight last night and was admitted to hospital. Hodgens is believed to have escaped serious injury but his car was a complete wreck.

Driving west Hodgens failed to see a heavy transport emerging from the Smith Transport warehouse to proceed across the boulevard onto the east lane. Hodgens' car crashed into the middle of the trailer and, becoming wedged under the vehicle was dragged across the highway onto the boulevard.

Hodgens was attended by Dr. F. R. Ross. Constable K. Williamson investigated.

Parliament Is Adjourned

Ottawa, Sept. 15. (CP)—Parliament was adjourned today to Feb. 14 next, ending an 18-day emergency session called to deal with the crippling rail strike and Canada's expanding defence program.

The Commons rose for the last time at 11:46 a.m., E.D.T., and the Senate a few minutes earlier.

The adjournment followed a brief ceremony in the Senate Chamber in which Mr. Justice Robert Taschereau, acting for the Governor-General, gave royal assent to a half-dozen or so bills passed during the session.

In view of the international situation, parliament decided to adjourn, rather than prorogue. This makes it easier to bring the two Houses back into session if needed.

Prime Minister St. Laurent has given assurance that parliament will be recalled if the "public interest" warrants it.

The Commons completed its legislative slate yesterday. The Senate met this morning to put quick finishing touches to the bills implementing the stop-gap budget introduced during this emergency session.

Then, shortly ater 11 a.m., the two Houses met in the Senate Chamber to hear Mr. Justice Taschereau give royal assent to the bills;

1. Authorizing controls on instalment buying and other forms of consumer credit.
2. Authorizing controls on materials and services essential to the defence effort.
3. Authorizing expenditures for the defence program.
4. Dealing with parliamentary indemnities for this special session.
5. Giving force to the budget provisions.

Settlement Terms Kept Secret By Both Parties

Hamilton, Sept. 15 — (CP) — Agreement was reached today in the wages hours strike of 1,000 Hamilton civic workers that started Aug. 3. Settlement terms were kept secret, pending their submission to a union meeting Sunday afternoon.

The agreement was reached at a series of meetings that A. C. Dennis, Ontario Labor Department conciliator, held with city officials and representatives of local 5 of the Civic Workers Union (C. C. L.).

The strike halted regular collection of garbage and the digging of graves. Garbage-collectors and grave-diggers were among the workers on strike. Pickets set up by the strikers at the city dump tried to prevent truckers and private citizens from disposing of refuse.

Ford Workers Turn Down Offer Of Company

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 15. (CP)—An offer for a new five-year contract, which the Ford Motor Company of Canada described as "the best contract in the Canadian automotive industry", has been rejected by the leaders of Local 200 United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.).

It was turned down at a meeting last night of the Local's stewards and committeemen from the Ford Motor plants.

Immediate and future wage increases offered by the company included eight cents an hour for all workers, and additional three, five or 10 cents hourly for three groups of skilled employees and an automatic wage improvement of three cents an hour each year for the next four years.

The contract offer also included improvements in vacation and pension agreements.

The offer was made in reply to union demands for a supplementary increase of 10 cents an hour for production workers and 15 cents for skilled tradesmen. An estimated 11,000 Ford employees are involved.

PROTECTING FORESTS

A plow which roars along to fires at the rate of fifty miles an hour is being tested by the Ontario Lands and Forests Department in co-operation with the United States Forest Service.

This machine cuts a fire guard five feet wide faster than a bulldozer and is mounted on rubber tires for swift travel on roads leading to woodland fires.

It is called the "Michigan," was developed by the United States Forest Service and was loaned to Ontario to make tests. It has already been in operation on sandy plains of the Kirkwood provincial forest near Sault Ste. Marie, in the claybelt about Kapuskasing and is now being tested in the rocky mining country of Geraldton.

Another item relating to the war on forest fires indicates how much attention is being paid to the protection of the woodlands on which Canada depends so much for a great source of her wealth.

Not long ago it was reported that a small forest fire in the Sault Ste. Marie area was extinguished by five-gallon bags of water dropped by Ontario Lands and Forests planes.

Sudbury Star commenting upon this success pointed out that "a forest fire differs from no other fire in that it can be successfully brought under control if fought soon enough. The problem has been that of getting men and equipment into inaccessible areas.

"The department conducted experiments with helicopters a few years ago but the experiments were other than successful when the machine was grounded on numerous occasions for repairs and overhaul. It was also found that the nearest clearing or body of water on which the helicopter could land was often located some distance from the fire."

The Star says that as the water bombing has proved its value on at least one occasion, the department will undoubtedly explore the process and conceivably replace the water with fire-extinguishing chemicals."

"A Forest in Every Municipality" is the heading of an editorial in the Montreal Gazette, based on the slogan evolved by Mr. Ellwood Wilson, dean of Canadian Forestry engineers and a director of the Canadian Forestry Association. The article says:

"It is maintained in the current issue of Woodland World, published by the Association, that the putting of this slogan into practice right across the country should not be too difficult.

"The idea is said to have caught on already in the Eastern Townships where Mr. Wilson does extension forestry. Such a municipal forest may be started on a cut-over tract, an abandoned farm or tax delinquent civic property. It is pointed out that seedlings may be obtained from provincial nurseries and that the work of planting them could be accomplished as a community effort with school children, club members, Junior Rangers and Boy Scouts doing the work as part of organized outings.

"Foreseen for the plan is the development of a healthy competitive spirit among municipalities once a start is made in a locality. The practical value of such projects to the country's general economy should they become widespread will be obvious to anyone who has studied the inroads which commercial cutting, forest fires, insects and disease are making into our forest wealth."

RACE AND THE BLOOD BANK

It is unfortunate that the question of racial designation of blood donors was ever raised in connection with the establishment of the United Nations blood bank. The opportunities for misunderstanding were great and the misunderstanding took place. It is fortunate, on the other hand, that the question has been settled in the way that it has, not only because of its moral implication but also because of its scientific lesson.

The establishment, once more, of the fact that "race" is a purely arbitrary classification is a good thing. Human blood is human blood regardless of the degree of pigmentation in the skin. It is possible, although not yet proved, that the appearance of certain blood types may be more frequent or infrequent in certain of what we call "racial" classifications. But it is already proved that blood of one type or another is the same blood with no relation to race.

What needs to be learned from this scientific fact is that human beings differ as human beings and not as members of any one superimposed idea of grouping. Their essential humanity, their goodness and badness, their laughter and sorrow, their chance to grow and to learn, are a great unity. The oneness of their blood is a symbol of that fact. In the recognition of that symbol lies the hope for an eventual end to much of the cruel stupidity that masquerades under false ideas of "race." — New York Times.

He who will not give some portion of his ease, his blood, his wealth for other's good, is a poor frozen churl.—Joanna Baillie.

OLD BOYS

When men together meet to play,
Though fat or slim or bald or gray,
They drop the fretful roles of men
And for the time are boys again.

The room with laughter loudly rings.
A song some gray-haired choir boy sings
As if the surplice once he wore
Would fit him still as long before.

The skillful surgeon, grave and wise,
Has merry twinkles in his eyes.
And willingly the somberest chaps
Will put on funny paper caps.

How good it is that grown-up men
Can bring their boyhood back again,
And for an hour or two care-free,
Untroubled and light-hearted be.

TODAY'S TALK

SOMETHING TO LEARN

One of the most valuable traits anyone of us can have is open-mindedness. No matter how many experiences we go through, or how many books we have read, or people we have met, we then know but comparatively little. The body stops growing, but never the mind. The older the mind gets, the richer its texture.

The mind keeps accumulating, setting aside ideas and especial knowledge. The housewife may hoard food, and thus keep it from her more worthy neighbor, but the more knowledge anyone hoards, it is bound to be spread around, benefitting far more people than the ones accumulating it.

There is something that we can learn from everyone, no matter how ignorant that one may be. You never know when you may run into someone who may be carrying an idea around with him, about which he may not know the significance, so that we may learn from him, and he from us. Scattered everywhere is knowledge that only needs a knock at its door to reveal many a wonder to us.

I gave myself quite a treat this summer. I brought to my vacation retreat a volume from the Modern Library of Anthony Trollope's two most famous — and perhaps his best—books: "The Warden" and "Barchester Towers." I had promised myself for years to read both, as I had never read anything from this author, who died in 1882. But I was well repaid. For individual characterization, and information upon a unique period of English history, it would be difficult to find two more interesting books.

Old people are interesting, and good teachers, for they have so much to tell! Their minds are mellowed from every sort of experience. And they seem to get great pleasure out of unloading the story of that experience, which is as it should be. The best biographies are written late in life.

Every time you open your eyes into the light of a new day, just remember this—that you have something to learn on that day! People who think they know all that is necessary to know are really on their way out! You can't know too much—especially about yourself.

Bell Telephone Given Permission To Issue Stock

Ottawa, Sept. 15 (CP) — The Board of Transport Commissioners Thursday fully approved of a Bell Telephone Company application to issue new stock which would give it additional $42,700,000.

The board granted the Bell's request to issue 1,294,000 shares of $25 per value stock after hearing opposing argument from the city of Montreal.

Counsel for Montreal sought unsuccessfully to have the application suspended pending final decision into the company's application for a 20.6 per cent rate hoist.

The new shares, to help the company in its construction program, will be offered to its shareholders in the ratio of one share for every five shares held by them at a price of $33 per share.

SHOESTRING SERENADE

Every now and bi-annually I spend a week in Hollywood, and when I do I always make it a point to look up certain bum-buddies I know from way back. Most of them are connected one way or another with the movie business, and though these gents rarely have a nickel or an inhibition to their names it's my experience that they invariably give out with better and gayer talk-talk than one is likely to hear in the mink-lined salons of Beverly Hills.

F'rinstance, when I was on the coast a few weeks ago, I ran into Ned Brussels whose calling card says he's a producer, and over a drink at Chasen's he blandly informed me he was filming a spectacle which would have De-Mille dining on his digits.

"You mean you actually scared up enough dough to underwrite a movie?" I astonished. "Better not nose it around—the FBI is still trying to crack the Brinks robbery in Boston."

"Stick-ups are strictly for squares," said the shoestringer. "It so happens that I raised the wherewithal through the good offices of a swami."

"Come again?" I said.

According to Ned, after several months of nimble-witting, he finally managed to work out a one-picture deal with a minor studio he putting up the money for script and actors, and the studio contributing its facilities and certain left-over sets. A grocer from Cincinnati had appeared miraculously out of the wild smog and put up enough funds to cover Ned's end of the expenses, and it looked like clear shooting until the studio's executive had balked at certain scenes in the script.

"A week's work by a competent writer will fix them up," the studio man had told Ned, "and you can get plenty of good ones for five hundred bucks. However, the five hundred will have to come out of your pocket because we know from previous dealings with you that if we lay it out we'll never get it back."

At the time of this conversation, Ned's bank balance was exactly $28.57, and the grocer had informed him he wouldn't advance another cent.

That afternoon, the promoter tried every contact he could think of, but he couldn't raise enough to buy a diaper pin. Then he happened to think of Swami Rajmakiri, rushed to the bank, drew out $25 of his remaining assets and went around to see him.

This swami, according to Ned is currently the most fashionable seer in Hollywood. What with television and the freezing funds in Europe, no one has any feeling of security, and the beturbanned bozo has been cashing in on these fears, gazing into his upside-down fish bowl and predicting that everything is going to be sunshine and contracts.

Ned had sent his card ahead, which the swami required before he would grant an appointment, and so he wasn't too surprised when the oracle informed him that he was a creative man, engaged at the moment in an important creative activity. Nor was he bowled over when Rajmakiri made a coupe of passes over the crystal ball and told him not to worry—the venture was going to be a sensational success.

"Are you sure?" Ned asked him.

"The crystal ball never lies," intoned the gent with the two-way calendar.

"Well, if you're that positive," said Ned, "I presume you stand ready to back up your prediction with a token investment —say, five hundred dollars."

The shoestringer had him — Rajmakiri knew that if he didn't cough up, Ned would broadcast the story from Bel Air to Malibu. And that's how the picture finally got into production. . .

"Cute gimmick," I said "Have you seen the swami since?"

Ned chuckled. "He's been hanging around the lot ever since we started shooting," he said. "Boy, is that swami worried!"

B. Northrup, a former clerk in the House of Commons, another who always had a soft spot in his heart for the less fortunate; late Mr. E. Gus Porter, a gentleman whose untiring efforts relieved the trying circumstances for many veterans and veterans' widows during the First World War, in securing for them pensions and widows allowances for those deserving; the late Charles E. Hanna who gave unstintingly of his time and talent for veterans and veterans' widows, a man many veterans will remember as our mayor who was at the train to welcome our boys home; the late Colonel E. D. O'Flynn and W. C. Mikel, worthy sons deserving of recognition, and last, but not least how about those boys of the North West Rebellion and South African Wars, Bonisteel, Barlow and Large, to mention a few of worthy sons entitled to recognition. Mackenzie's Column: Defence Program Must Include Western Germany

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The most modern problem, and certainly one of the knottiest before the big three foreign minister in their current New York meeting has had to do with what part eastern Germany shall be allotted in the defence of western Europe.

It has been a matter of concern—though not of surprise—to find both Foreign Secretary Bevin and Foreign Minister Schuman differing with State Secretary Acheson on this vital issue.

The United States has taken the position that a defence program must include German manpower and resources if it is to be effective. The two European allies, having faced the first fierce rush of German armed might in two world wars, haven't been prepared to go the whole way with this idea.

However, the indications at this writing are that the conference is likely to achieve a compromise that will bring Gemany into the picture on the basis of at least limited partnership.

No Argument

Despite British and French fears, there has been no argument among the big three about the need of German aid in the defence program. It is agreed that there can be no successful defence of western Europe without German participation. The question has been the extent of the aid at this juncture.

Britain and France have hesitated to accept the idea of immediate rearmament of Germany as part of the defence program, although they were understood to favor the strengthening of the German police force so that it could handle internal disorders. However they now have agreed to participate in a full discussion by all of the Atlantic Pact foreign ministers of using German troops in the defence projected under the North Atlantic Treaty.

In this connection President Truman's decision to help strengthen western Europe against possible aggression to be made effective as soon as possible. Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of the U.S. army ground forces, says troops to strengthen the U.S. garrison in Europe will begin to arrive in Germany before spring.

So Germany, logically, is to be made an integral part of the defence of western Europe, despite her transgressions.

PLEASURE TURNS BITTER

The Roman emperor Tiberius sat on the throne at the time our Lord was crucified. Tiberius might really be said to have possessed the whole world. His word was law, he was worshipped as a God, and the resources of a mighty empire were his.

In order to yield himself more unreservedly to his whims and passions, Tiberius removed from Rome to an island in the Mediterranean. Here he built himself a palace and, until the day of his death, gave himself without the least restraint to the grossest kind of indulgences.

During this time he wrote to his servile and corrupt Senate: "What to write you Conscript Fathers, or how to write, or what not to write, may all the gods and goddesses destroy me, worse than I feel that they are daily destroyed, yet out of this he got no happiness.

Solomon was another pleasure-seeker who cried, "Vanity, Vanity, all is vanity." Sometimes we wonder what a lot of modern pleasure-seekers are muttering to themselves.

ATOMIC RESEARCH AND GOITER

We are in the atomic age. The world is highly conscious of the destructive effect of atomic energy, but less conscious of its possibilities as an agent in the war on disease.

One of the developments of atomic research was the discovery by Fermi in 1934, among others, that iodine could be so altered as to become radioactive, that is to act similarly to radium. Long before this time, radium had been used in medicine for its action in certain disease processes.

It has long been known that iodine is stored in the thyroid gland, enlargement of which constitutes a goitre. Ordinary iodine is commonly used to prepare patients for thyroid operations because of its action on the gland. Years ago and in rare instances even today, victims of "toxic" or "exophthalmic" goitre were and are "carried along" with iodine in an effort to avoid operation.

Iodine is essential to the normal functioning of the thyroid gland, which in turn regulates the rate of "burning" or oxidation of tissues with the liberation of energy. When a deficiency of iodine-bearing food in the diet of a person is long continued, thyroid function declines, energy decreases and unwanted weight often develops.

The importance of iodine in the diet and disorders arising from deficiency are explained at some length in a leaflet I have on the subject which you may have by asking for it and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

When the thyroid gland enlarges, the resultant goitre may be a simple nuisance—a so-called "simple goitre," or it may be a menace, resulting in loss of weight, fatigue, rapid heart action, possible bulging of the eyes and nervous and emotional instability. The latter type is known as "toxic" goitre.

About ten years ago, radioactive iodine was first used to investigate the possibilities of non-surgical treatment. Our present knowledge of the subject is limited to the experiences gained in that span of time.

The far reaching or late effects of any type of radiation are difficult to completely evaluate in the short space of ten years. It can be said, however, that ten years observation in the use of radioactive iodine has not shown evidence of untoward effect. At the present time, this method of treatment is used in cases where previous operations have failed to achieve cure, and in cases where operation would subject the victim to extreme hazard. Its use in these cases has shown it to be highly effective — symptoms in many cases being controlled by a single dose. There appears to be little or no hazard involved in its use in appropriate cases—as to early or immediate developments.

As matters stand, appropriate preliminary medical treatment followed by surgical operation is still the choice of treatment available today. The research that has been accomplished, however, seems to point to the possibility that in the future, this method of treatment may supplant surgery.

If mankind can escape the destructive effects of atomic energy in the race against time, the beneficial effects of it on individual and mass health may conceivably remove the incentive to use it for destructive purposes.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A hard-boiled sportsman known to me was nearly drowned last spring when the punt in which he was trout fishing was upset in what amounted to ice water. How he survived the shock of the ice water and a swim of fifty yards from the waterlogged punt to shore he will never understand.

He lost a haversack full of valuable flies and gear, which was two weeks later fished up by a stranger, and returned to him. The sportsman rewarded the finder of the tackle with the gift of one of his best rifles, together with special sights, ammunition and case.

This reward seemed all out of proportion to the chap who had quite incidentally made the recovery. But the sportsman explained:

"All my life I have been superstitious about luck. I believe luck should be immediately passed along. I have nobody to thank for my life being spared—nobody on earth, that is. But I have to pass the luck along, and you happen to be associated with the affair. So, if you don't mind, kindly accept this rifle. . . .

He elaborated his theory to me. Luck is mystical, perhaps supernatural. If you hog luck, luck will turn on you. But if you keep yourself empty, and ready for more, luck will come back to you again and again. You must pass your luck on, just as fast as it comes. And luck will love you.

Some years ago, a very wealthy man called me in to assist him in making anonymous a large gift he was donating to a certain institution.

"This amount," he said, of the donation, "is the result of a sheer stroke of luck I had recently. I like to hang onto the money I make fair and square, by work, by careful calculation and even by shrewd speculation. But sometimes, if you've got money, you seem to fall into pots of it by luck. It is my principle to get rid of such money. It seems to me it spoils the money I have made."

Like the sportsman of the first instance, he was a hard-boiled happy old man.

ONE MINUTE NEWS ABOUT JOHNS-MANVILLE

3,000 DEGREES IS REALLY HOT!

A woman considers her oven as "very hot" at 450 degrees. And so that such temperatures may be reached and held with a minimum of fuel, all modern ovens are fully insulated.

Imagine then, the insulation required for industrial "oven" temperatures as high as 3,000 degrees!

The problem of developing insulation to withstand such terrific heat was solved by the Johns-Manville Research Laboratory, the largest and best equipped insulation laboratory in the world. For over 90 years, Johns-Manville has been foremost in the development of insulations to meet industrial temperatures ranging from 3,000 degrees above to 400 degrees below zero.

Whenever you need expert insulation service, contact Johns-Manville, 199 Bay St., Toronto — or see your J-M distributor.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

VIVE QUEBEC!

Quebec City, Que. — Suddenly all the signs along the highway are speaking in another tongue.

Ne stationnez pas sur le pavage. Arretez! Biere at vin. Traverse du chemin de fer! Lentement! Legumes a ventre. Creme glacees. Repas legar. Gardez le droit! Chambre et pension. Buvez Coca-Cola.

Well, you didn't expect them to be in Hindustani. But still you're not prepared to find French Canada so very French. If you are coming this way by motor for the first time you feel as if you've passed a frontier into a foreign land and this inevitably sharpens your response to atmosphere.

The 300-odd miles today from Ottawa here to fabulous Quebec—down the Ottawa Valley paling with autumn, and around the rim of Montreal and on down the north bank of the broad St. Lawrence—has been by far the most stimulating hop in our coast to-coast grass-hoppering.

To come suddenly around a bend and see ahead of you the high white hulk of a freighter steaming up river past squat lighthouses, to look down in a rolling green valley at villages so reminiscent of the real France with silver spires standing in thick foliage, to see so much activity along the borders of the road, after thousands of miles of an apparently empty land—all this (and a suddenly bilingual car radio) is a traveller's tonic.

You lightly ponder the age-old arguments of "French" versus "English" Canada and on the evidence of mood alone favor history with a happy nod. Unity, hell. Vive la difference!

WEDDING BELLS

We had a late start from Ottawa, perhaps because we felt a reluctance about leaving. No. city of my acquaintance, except possibly Paris, reacts as girlishly to a crisp early autumn day as the capital and, rolling past the Parliament buildings, we felt bound to pause for a last lingering look.

Then across the bridge and through the red brick town of Hull (no longer the Casbah of Ottawa since Ontario introduced its cocktail bars) and then, we were truly in Quebec.

It was Saturday and it seemed that half of French Canada was being married. In our first hundred miles we passed a dozen wedding parties, the cars bedecked with white ribbons and with heavy hands on their klaxons. In many cases they were disobeying the signs and definitely "stationez sur le pavage" toasting the bride or groom in beer from green bottles and waving gaily at the passers-by.

For us it was a delight to see so much animation and vitality along the way.

On we rolled through the tall corn fields, past the white crosses standing on the shoulders of the road, swinging north into the furry green foothills of the Laurentians, then down by the river where a half dozen cars stood up to the running boards in the St. Lawrence, like cattle, while their owners washed them, now climbing through the narrow street of a town.

These towns are a constant delight since the highway narrows through them, as it must, and the traveller gets a close-up of people living as he does nowhere else in Canada.

The low, open porches of ancient, orderly houses are like orchestra seats virtually overhanging the pavement and the driver passes through rows of spectators answering stare for curious stare until his car squirts out the other side into open country again.

In such a dash you come no nearer to getting a real feeling for French Canada than you would in an aircraft, but it will leave an affection that is the basis of friendship.

ON A LEDGE

We're parked tonight at Ste. Foy, just a couple of miles outside of Quebec and looking across a long valley in which the lights of five small towns are twinkling.

It was dark when we arrived and the proprietor of the auto camp we selected spoke about as much English as we speak of his language. I could tell the fellow I was feeling very well in the garden of my aunt, but when it came to a discussion about finding a place for the trailer we had nothing between us but good will.

After much hilarious talk and sign language he got us down on a small ledge of grass overhanging the valley, but with absolutely no way of ever getting out short of turning the caravan about by hand. Still it is so pleasant to be here and to know that the wonders of Quebec are waiting to be explored I will cross that bridge when we come to it.

Ah, Quebec! Ah, biere et vin! C'est la vie!

HOUSE PACKS IN

4. A bill empowering Trade Minister Howe to control—if necessary —the prices and distribution of materials and services essential to the country's defence effort.

5. A bill authorizing controls—again only if necessary—on instalment buying and consumer credit as an anti-inflationary measure.

6. Four bills implementing the off-season "baby budget", which increased corporation taxes and placed additional or new levies on luxury and semi-luxury commodities, including liquor, beer, candy, soft drinks, chewing gum, sporting goods and all household electrical equipment except stoves, refrigerators and washing machines.

7. A bill cutting off the special $25-a-day allowance for parliamentarians which, otherwise, would have continued through the adjournment period. Their travelling expenses from their homes to the capital and return were paid.

Korea, the possibility of eventual world war and the high cost of living threaded through the Chamber's debates. There was little talk of other domestic or international issues.

Speeches Abbreviated

Those three issues were echoed in most of the speeches made in the traditional Throne Speech and budget debates which, in this abbreviated session, ran to a minimum.

Traditional opposition motions of non-confidence in the government met their expected defeat in those two main debates and similar opposition thrusts aimed at altering the government's defence program met a similar fate.

One of the highlights was a statement Wednesday by Mr. St. Laurent that the government is not considering — at this time— the dispatch of Canadian armed forces to Europe as a deterrent to aggression on that continent.

Yesterday, as the Commons completed its work, George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, introduced a motion to require that Parliament be called back by Nov. 15, at least. His motion went down by a voice vote, and a motion by Mr. St. Laurent to meet Feb. 14 next was carried.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said he would be inclined to favor Nov. 15 as a meeting data, but Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), speaking for the C. C. F. group, said he thought all that was needed was an assurance by Mr. St. Laurent that Parliament would be resummoned if necessary.

The prime minister also gave an undertaking that the government, if it decides to increase the forces available for Korea or elsewhere beyond the 15,000 men authorized now, it will place that decision before parliament.

Wanted Compulsory Saving

Mr. Drew, pressing for an earlier meeting of parliament, suggested there would be new decisions which would have to be made by the end of October. He pointed to major conferences soon to be held, such as the United Nations General Assembly, Atlantic pact talks and the current meeting of the big three.

As the final debates tapered off, Revenue Minister McCann warned bluntly that the increased defence expenditures will mean "a degree of austerity we have not had for a long, long time."

John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge) joined Progrsesive Conservative members in protesting against the newly-imposed tax on candy while Victor Quelch (SC—Acadia) felt, as did most C.C.F. members, that an excess profits tax might have been enacted. He also plumped for compulsory savings.

LANDING MADE

Covered by Air Support

The Inchon landings were preceded by British and American cruiser and destroyer bombardments and strikes by carrier planes.

Chung said American troops, covered by the booming guns of warships and an aerial umbrella, hit the beaches of Wolmi Island which links to Inchon by a half-mile causeway.

South Korean marines also stormed ashore at Inchon proper, Chung said.

Inchon, a city of some 300,000, is the port for Seoul. Between and slightly to the north of the two cities is Kimpo airfield—probably the best in Korea before it was worked over by American fighters and bombers.

Gen. Chung said heavy pressure was applied quickly to Kimpo airfield. This evidently was the action described in the communist broadcast reporting United Nations forces had advanced half way to Seoul.

Another west coast landing on the Yellow Sea—at Kunsan 100 miles south of Seoul—was reported by a south Korean assemblyman, Chin Soo. He said a warship's guns covered it.

On the east—sea of Japan—coast 1,000 south Korean marines struck quickly at the coastal road north of Pohang—the retreat route for red forces arrayed from Pohang westward to Angang. In front of these communists the U.S. 24th division and south Koreans were narrowing a gap in their lines.

The U.S. battleship Missouri shelled the east coast port of Samchok, 70 miles north of Pohang.

On the Taegu front, critical northwest corner of the defence box, the U.S. 1st cavalry division still controlled the highest hill on the northern approaches to the vital communications hub.

Maj-Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commanding the 1st division, said he believed his troopers had "broken the back of the main enemy thrust." Mindful of the 24,000 red troops on his north and northwest sectors, however, he added that he might be wrong.

Artillery and mortar fire roared again elsewhere on the front after several days of comparative quiet.

WEDDINGS

HARVEY—DUNFORD

In St. John's Anglican Church, Lakefield, Keitha Viola Dunford and Mr. Robert Charles Harvey, pledged their nuptial vows Saturday afternoon before the Rev. L. J. Delaney. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wellie Dunford, of Douro Township and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Harvey, of Aylmer.

White gladioli decorated the altar and Mrs. John Twist played the traditional wedding music. Soloist Mrs. T. W. Chaplin sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden", as the bride entered, and during the signing of the register she sang "O Perfect Love".

The bride's gown of white slipper satin was fashioned with tucked bertha collar and was buttoned at the back with covered buttons to a bustle bow. The long sleeves tapered to points at the wrists and the full skirt extended in a long train. Her full length veil of white embroidered net was caught with a bandeau of velvet and pearls and she carried a cascade of red roses and white sweet peas. She was given in marriage by her father.

Matron of honor was Mrs. William Ackison, of Lakefield, who wore a bouffant gown of rose faille taffeta with scalloped yoke finished with pin tucks, matching headdress and mittens and carried a cascade of white gladioli tied with blue ribbon.

It is a good idea to establish a shoeshine corner in the basement, especially if the family is large. Install a bracket, with set of trees, and a box or small cupboard to hold polishes, brushes, etc.

Abroad With Me

By Dorothy E. Futcher

Edinburgh, Scotland.

We all love Edinburgh. It is a gracious city, dressed in its best to welcome its sons and daughters home. Friday we have a tour of the city in the morning—up to the castle again to see the crown jewels and the famed Scottish War Memorial honoring Scotland's 100,000 dead of the First World War. Holyrood Castle is filled with the spirit of Mary, Queen of Scots. It is a busy place, for the Queen and Princess Margaret Rose come in residence Sunday to see and hear the wonderful spectacle we saw Thursday night. We visit St. Giles where John Knox preached when he was young and the dignity and atmosphere of this holy place lingers with you.

Friday afternoon we shop on famed Princess Street. Prices are high but we find some things to meet our purse. We can't shop too long, for that evening we are the guests of the executive of the Scottish Women's Institutes and for this we must look our very best.

It was a delight to meet these talented women, interested in the same things we are interested in and anxious as we are to do the best job possible for Home and Country. It continually amazes me how quickly we become acquainted and what inspiration and happiness it gives to just talk and laugh together. Scotland is anxious to retain her old country dances and their entertainment for us that night was four couples going through charming dances. The lads were in their best, with kilts swinging and how they swing, their partners in long white dresses with a Scottish plaid swung over their shoulders. We were loath to let them go but it had been more than a full day and we had packing to do for in the morning we were "moving on."

The train trip from Edinburgh to Newcastle takes you along the east coast of England and we catch our first glimpse of the North Sea. We have lunch on the train and it is entirely different to what we are used to. A table is raised between the seats where you are in the coach, a white cloth is laid, cutlery and china come next and you are served here by the waiter. He is adept at serving in that swaying coach—we marvelled at his dexterity — never spilling a drop; not even the soup. When lunch is over he removes the cloth and you go back to your reading or sleeping.

The "Venus" is waiting for us at Newcastle for our trip to Bergen. It was taken over by the Germans when they "took over" Norway, but it has been entirely refitted since the war, and is really luxurious. The food is excellent —a work of art in appearance. We wish we had more than one night on board. The North Sea is kind. It can be very cruel and often is. Although it is raining, it isn't too disagreeable and we have the best sleep we've had since we left Canada, practically sleeping the clock around.

Sunday

By two o'clock we sight land and the beautiful fiords of Norway come into view with mountains in the background, towering into the clouds and in the foreground rocky promontories with colorful houses, nestling where they can hang on. Every house has a flagpole and a Norwegian at the rail beside me says every flag would be flying if it weren't Sunday. Speed boats and sail boats pass, everyone waving a welcome. We are so close to land, people come out of their homes on the rocks and wave a friendly greeting. Then the fiord on which Bergen is built comes into view and we turn and head in. I do not see how any place in the world could be more beautiful. It is built on seven hills, seven sisters they are called. The houses are colorful, red-tiled roofs, and they are built anywhere on the rocks where they can get a foothold. It is still raining and we have just one disappointment—it is too dark for color film.

Members of the Norwegian rural Institutes meet us as we dock and whisk us away to our hotels. They have every minute planned of our stay in Bergen, a hustling city of 103,000, and in a few minutes we are off by bus to visit Troldhaugen (meaning little hill) the home of the composer Grieg. It is here that he did his best works. His home stands on a promontory looking right out to sea. Interesting paths lead here and there down the rocky hillside. The home was just as he left it and the women had arranged something very special for us. The grand piano Grieg used is in the home, and after hearing a story of his life, several of his compositions were beautifully played. You can imagine the atmosphere they created.

He is greatly beloved by his countrymen and the women told us many true stories of his life—how poor he was, how his home is furnished entirely from gifts of those who love him, how delighted he was with any recognition. He and his wife are buried just below his home down near the sea. They were cremated — the face of the rock was hollowed out to contain their ashes and their names and date of their death scratched into the surface of the rock.

The day is not yet over. Afternoon tea and dinner are still to come but I will leave them for my next letter, they are so intensely interesting. Each day I think surely there won't be so much to tell tomorrow, and when tomorrow comes, it is more interesting and lovelier than the preceding one.

TIME:—Morning Rush Hour.

CHARACTERS:—Two strap hangers: PLAINTIVE PAT and KNOWING NAN.

PLAINTIVE PAT:—Your hair is awfully pretty, Nan! Mine looks so lifeless and dead; I don't know what to do with it.

KNOWING NAN:—I do! Go right down to the ROYAL — you know—it's on Front Street, opposite the McCarthy Theatre, and ask them to give you a color blend.

PLAINTIVE PAT:—Oh, no! I don't want to look dyed and artificial.

KNOWING NAN:—Well, I like that! Does my hair look "dyed" and "artificial?"

PLAINTIVE PAT:—Why, no. I just told you how pretty it looked.

KNOWING NAN:—Then, take it from me! I had mine done at the ROYAL last week, and I have never had more compliments. You're old fashioned, and your colorless hair looks old fashioned.

PLAINTIVE PAT:—Your hair does have lovely highlights — it just gleams. Maybe I will.

KNOWING NAN:—No "Maybe" about it. The number is 3226 — they are open evenings and give the best of service. It only costs $2.75., and that includes your shampoo and set. I'll bet a box of candy you won't be sorry.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

A hundred years ago pork, as today, was the best meat buy. Stewing beef now selling at a dollar a pound is reminiscent of the paper money used in Arizona a century ago. A paper bill with a picture of a bull was worth five dollars. A rooster was equal to fifty cents. A calf meant the scrip was worth twenty-five cents. A poor pig had a value of only twelve and a half cents.

Related members of the animal kingdom, such as cows and hens didn't seem to rate at all. This, of course, was in the era before equal rights.

Fortunately for women, who must now pay exhorbitant meat prices, pork is still comparatively reasonable.

The quality of both fresh and smoked pork, does not seem to vary as much as beef and veal. It seldom is tough. But you must avoid wasteful cuts with excessive fat.

Fresh pork should be fine, grained with a pinkish gray color. The meat, when refrigerated, shouldn't be soft or flabby. In baking any fatty slices of meat, stand them upright in the casserole or baking dish so that the fat can flow off. Otherwise the meat fries rather than bakes.

Pork Shoulder Steaks, Spiced Pears.—4 Servings.

Order 4 fresh shoulder pork steaks weighing about 6 ounces each, and cut 1-2 inch thick. Place meat in a paper bag with 1-2 cup flour, 1-2 teaspoon chili powder and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Shake bag well to coat meat.

Melt fat to a depth of 1-4 inch in a heavy saucepan or Dutch oven. Brown the pork steaks slowly on both sides.

Throw off accumulated fat in pan. Wipe pan dry. Return steaks to the pan, stacking them upright. Cover the pan with a lid and place in a slow oven 325 degrees. Add 1-2 cup water or stock to the pan. Bake 50-60 minutes or until meat is very tender.

Peel 1 dozen whole small seckel pears. Make a syrup by boiling together 5 minutes 1 cup canned fruit juice (or canned pear nectar) 1-3 cup granulated sugar, 1-4 cup cider vinegar, 4 whole cloves, 4 whole allspice and a 2-inch cinnamon stick. Place peeled pears in syrup and boil until tender. Chill. Serve pears in dessert dishes along with the meat.

BEAUTY

Eye shadow

Even the loveliest eyes can be made more glamorous by the application of clever beauty aids. A touch of mascara on the fringes of the eye shutters will create a pleasing frame. A bit of coloring on the lids, cleverly applied—especially if the gala evening is on the calendar—will impart a mysterious, come-hither look. Most women hesitate to play with this make-up item—and well they might, as it calls for cosmetic technique of a high order.

The woman who has dash and chic, who leans a bit toward the exotic type, is the one who can get away with it. It is almost as if eye shadows were made for her. She has her choice of blue, bronze, brown, grey, green, purple, mauve. Grey she would never consider; it drains the complexion of coloring. If she is a red head, she will select a soft green that will give accent to her delicate, fair complexion, and to her flaming thatch as well.

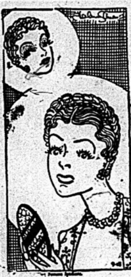
Blue has ever been the favorite; it does things for both blondes and brunettes. If the eyes are blue, the shade must be selected with care, so that it will harmonize; too strong a tone will dim the radiance of the eyes. It must be applied sparingly, do a fade-away as it extends toward the eyebrows.

One fact must be kept in mind; a light film brightens the eyes, a heavy application may bring an appearance of fatigue. The difficulty is to know how far to extend the pigment at the far end of the eyes. Ordinarily it should gradually disappear at a point below the terminal of the eyebrow. If it goes beyond that, the eyes will look narrow; artifice will be too apparent.

Metallic shadows had their little fling and disappeared. A bit of a good thing. Too theatrical; too scenic for these days when naturalness is the pattern to be followed in all that pertains to make-up.

If you admire shadows on other women, but fear to attempt to apply them you can get a charming effect, almost as glamorizing, by brushing your lids lightly with rouge. Select a faint, wild rose tint. If you do this, you must place rouge high on your cheek bones, up over your temples, so there will be no white spaces to make the application spotty.

Some girls belong to the "I don't need it" group of beauty seekers. Actually they are the vainest of all, if you come right down to it, believing that they were born lovely and that you can not improve upon nature. If you honestly belong to this class, take a long look at yourself in the mirror. Lovely though your eyes may be, they can profit by a little artifice, used skilfully.



Your eyes can profit by a little artifice

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dad's right—your parents should be home when boyfriend calls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A few months ago I met a young man through some girl friends of mine. He is about 21 and I am a little over 17. I told my parents about him, and asked if they objected to my going out with him, and they said no, if I first brought him to the house and introduced him to them. They thought he was a very nice chap and liked him a lot.

I did make a mistake by denying to them that he was in service when they asked me about this, but I thought that if I had told the truth, they wouldn't have let me go out with him.

Now this boy is due to go overseas in a short time, and I asked my father to take my mother to a show, so that I could invite him to the house and we could chat confidentially. Mother was willing, but my father refused, saying that I was much too young to get that serious, and it wouldn't look proper for me to spend the evening along with a young man I hadn't known very long.

I feel that I have grown to love him, and I know he feels the same about me, and I think I am old enough to do as I please, as long as I don't do anything wrong. Who is right?

G. T. C.

Dear G. T. C.:

I think your father is entirely right in feeling that he would prefer you not to spend the evening alone in an otherwise empty house with this young man, or any other young man.

There is no reason in the world why you can't chat as confidentially as you need to with your friend while your parents are in the house. Your father probably doesn't mean that he and your mother would have to hang around in the same room with you. What he thinks, I'm sure is that it looks much better for a girl's parents to be in her home when young men are coming to call and I heartily agree.

In your particular case, I feel that he has even more reason to think this way, as under the circumstances, with the young man about to go overseas, it would be quite easy for the two of you to get dangerously emotional if left entirely alone.

Her second husband's children ridicule her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was a widow, left with a boy of seven. I was married again to a widower with three small children. I met my second husband when I became his housekeeper, since he needed someone to care for his children at that time. We were married about a year later, and my husband has been very mean to me ever since.

He has made my step-children believe that everything I do is wrong. They even criticize the meals I get them and my husband never reproves them. In fact, he seems to delight in everything mean they say and do. Sometimes I think my husband acts this way because he hopes I will get tired of it and get out. I don't know what to do.

Dear M. H.:

If your step-children are so disagreeable about the food you prepare for them, and your husband behaves very little better than they do, it seems to me I would go on strike and let them do their own cooking awhile. I suggest you try this and see what comes of it.

Don't start a fight about it or talk about what you are going to do, but simply eat your own meal and have it out of the way before the others come around. Then when they find nothing ready for them, simply tell them that you've decided they would prefer to get their own meals than eat your cooking any longer. But be sure not to let them draw you into a quarrel. Just go about your own business quietly. Try this a couple of days; then see what happens if you cook a meal as usual, as if nothing had happened. You might find your husband and his children take a little different attitude toward you if they see you showing some spunk.

If things don't improve, however, I suggest that you have a talk with someone at a social agency who can advise you more in detail about the whole situation. Let me know if you would like to see someone at such an organization, and I'll tell you just where to go.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Why rule for "Jr." and "3rd" occasionally disregarded

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle a discussion, will you please answer this question? A man who had always kept the "Jr." after his name dies, and his widow continues to use the "Jr" . . . for example, Mrs. Arthur B. Clarke, Jr. Is it correct for the widow to continue to use the "Jr.' and for her son to use Arthur B. Clark, 3rd? Or should she drop the "Jr." from her name, and then her son use the "Jr." after his name? Please explain the rules and uses fully.

A and B.

The rule customarily followed is that, when father, son, and grandson are all called Arthur B. Clark, the father is Arthur B. Clark; the son is Arthur B. Clark, Jr.; and the grandson is Arthur B. Clarke, 3rd. (This is because the grandson is third of that name.) And then the rule customarily followed is that when the grandfather dies, the son becomes Arthur B. Clark; and the grandson becomes Arthur B. Clark, Jr.

But occasionally this rule is disregarded. For example, when the man for whom the son is named is famous, his name so well-known with the "Jr." suffix, that the son, after his father dies, is, quite understandably, unwilling to change the form of his name and assume the form of name made so famous by his father. So the widow of the senior Arthur B. Clark continues to be Mrs. Arthur B. Clark, Jr.: and the son continues to be Arthur B. Clark, 3rd. (This is, I believe, the name-circumstances of the widow and son of the late General George S. Patton, Jr.)

And occasionally, too the son who was named for his father and who for many years had been widely known, in business or profession, as Arthur B. Clark, Jr., prefers after the death of the senior Arthur B. Clark, to retain for practical reasons, the name he has used for so long, Arthur B. Clark, Jr.

Plans for her second wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in November; this is my second marriage, my first having been a 'Reno wedding'. I would like to have a semi-formal wedding; that is all we will be able to afford, as we have to pay for everything ourselves. (1) Could we have only a maid of honor and the best man? If we can get away with just having these two, we figure that this will save us a lot of expense. (2) I would like to wear pale blue. Would this be correct, and if so, what type of dress should I buy?

M. M.

(1) As a matter of fact, for a second wedding the best form, best taste, is for the couple to have only two attendants, a maid (or matron) of honor for the bride, and a best man for the groom. The bride's attendant pays for her own costume, although it is you, the bride, who plans every detail of the costume. You supply her flowers, bouquet or corsage.

(2) Your wedding and reception should be definitely on the side of informality—small, simple. Pale blue is a correct shade for you to wear; and you may wear either a simple floor-length dress, or the fashionable ankle-length, or street-length.

Funds Campaign For Sightless Now Under Way

"The Canadian National Institute for the Blind is unique as a welfare organization," stated Field Secretary P. I. Timmins in speaking of the need for funds. "Its policy is to train its registrants for independence, or for that degree of independence of which they are capable.

"The Institute then sets out to find employment for them," said Mr. Timmins, "either in its own factories, its occupational shops, in industry generally, or in the home.

"The blind who have learned from the Home Teachers to do such handicrafts as leather work, weaving, knitting, etc., can then purchase their materials at cost or less from the institute and sell their finished articles to the Institute for re-sale—or they can build up a business with private customers.

"In some cases the Institute has loaned a blind person the money to set him up in a business suited to his capabilities. This loan is paid back as the business progresses.

"Those who have experienced blindness, best know its disadvantages," the Field Secretary stated. "That is why prevention of blindness is an important part of the Institute program.

"It is to carry on these and other such services in Belleville, Trenton, and Hastings County that the Institute is in need of funds. The Canadian National Institute for the Blind asks all to give as generously as they can during the campaign which is now under way.

IN THE CITY

The city lawns are trim and neat,
Late flowers are blooming there,
And all along the shady street
Homes show a picture fair.
But oh! We miss the country skies
Where naught obstructs the view,
With fields a-stretching far and wide
And woods in autumn hue.

And yet we love the hurrying throng,
The friendly folk we meet,
The little children's laugh and song,
The voices soft and sweet;
For oh! how lonely life would be
However bright the land!
If face of friend no more we see
Nor grasp a friendly hand.

DISCUSS WORLD ANTI-RED PACT

The "Big Three" foreign ministers, Robert Schuman of France, U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Britain's Ernest Bevin are shown as they met in New York to discuss on ways and means of combatting communist aggression. European defence and Germany's role in the community of nations were to be the first topics on the agenda. There was also the possibility of the formation of a world-wide combination of free nations, along the lines of the Atlantic Pact, to maintain peace. — Central Press Canadian.

R.A.F. Cracked Nazi Air Might Ten Years Ago

Ottawa, Sept. 15 (CP) — The RCAF has picked Sunday Sept. 17, to commemorate the Battle of Britain.

The date roughly corresponds to the crucial time when Winston Churchill's "few" got over the hump in their fight against terrific odds. The Battle of Britain now is history, and ranks with the Spanish Armada and any feats in the military textbooks.

Britain became an island fortress in the early summer of 1940 following the fall of France. Its fate depended upon the outcome of the impending battle of the skies.

Opposing Germany's air might were the Royal Air Force's 50 squadrons of Hurricanes and Spitfires. The measure of their heroic victory was epitomized by Churchill in his statement to the House of Commons: "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

500 Foe Aircraft Used

Major Luftwaffe activity over Britain covered the period between July 10 and Oct. 31, 1940, but Sept. 15 was the crux of the Battle of Britain. On that day 500 German aircraft fought a running fight with the RAF from London to the coast of France.

It was announced that 183 planes had been shot down, but Churchill has since said that post war information showed enemy losses on Sept. 15 were only 56.

Roughly the battle of Britain can be divided into three phases. From July 10 to Aug. 18 the Luftwaffe made heavy attacks on coastal shipping, harbors, airfields, radio location stations and aircraft factories. London was the chief objective for great formations of bombers from Aug. 19 to Sept. 27.

Forty-seven Canadians are included among the 1,495 pilots and aircrew, killed or mortally wounded, whose names are inscribed on the parchment roll of honor in the memorial chapel in Westminster Abbey.

Most of the Canadians who fought in the Battle of Britain enrolled in the RAF in pre-war days.

But there were two fighter squadrons definitely linked with the Dominion. One was No. 242 (Canadian squadron, composed of Canadian fighter pilots in the RAF. The other was No. 1 (fighter) squadron of the RCAF (later designated No. 401) which arrived in Britain on the eve of the battle.

Lauds Both Squadrons

Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh C. T. Dowding, Air Officer Commanding-in-chief of fighter command during the Battle of Britain in an official dispatch paid tribute to the two squadrons. No. 242, he wrote, "became one of the foremost fighting squadrons in the command. . . No. 1 (Canadian) squadron also came into the line and acquitted itself with great distinction."

Group Capt. E. A. McNab, a veteran of the Battle of Britain was the first RCAF officer to shoot down an enemy plane and the first to be decorated in the war. He was awarded the DFC.

The Saskatchewan-born airman now is director of personnel administration at air force headquarters, Ottawa.

$23,000 in Cash, $200,000 in Bonds Taken From Bank

Keswick, Sept. 15 —(CP) — Thieves used nitro-glycerine Thursday to blow open a vault in the Canadian Bank of Commerce here and escaped with $23,000 in cash and $200,000 in bonds.

The bonds, mostly non-negotiable, are covered by insurance. Some belonged to customers, others to the bank.

It was the third Bank of Commerce robbery in a month. Thieves escaped with $12,000 in cash $10,000 in bonds at Binbrooke, near Hamilton, a week ago and at Beaverton stole $13,000 in cash and $350,000 in bonds.

Police said they believe Thursday's robbery was carried out by the same gang that blew the bank safe at Binbrooke and stole a large quantity of dynamite from the Nobel, Ont., plant of Canadian Industries Ltd., a month ago after tying up a night watchman.

Provincial Police, fearing an outbreak of large-scale robberies, have warned all detachments to keep a special watch on small banks in other Ontario centres.

Former Canadian Newsman Given Director's Post

New York, Sept. 15 (CP) — Theodore F. M. Newton, former Canadian newspaper man and veteran of the diplomatic service, has been appointed director of information of the North Atlantic defence organization, it was announced Thursday night.

Newton, present Canadian consul in Boston, will have the task of co-ordinating the activities of a proposed Atlantic Pact information service.

The announcement of Newton's appointment was made by the North Atlantic Council of Deputies meeting in New York.

Newton will be on loan from the Canadian government to the deputies for an indefinite period. He will leave his consular post this month for London where the new information service headquarters will be established.

The Canadian will be assisted by a small staff from other pact countries.

The announcement said that the establishment of this information service is "designed to help member countries of the North Atlantic Treaty to keep their citizens informed about the objectives of the treaty and the activities of the North Atlantic treaty organization."

The 47-year-old Newton, was born near Sarnia, Ont. He was educated at Sarnia Collegiate Institute and McGill University. He received his Master of Arts degree in English from McGill in 1926.

Beavers Outwit Road Builders

Pickerel, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)— The busy little beavers are working overtime here to outwit a hardrock miner who is trying to build a road.

Ken Wood, a former Kirkland Lake miner, is foreman of a drilling gang which is trying to build a road from Britt to Sudbury as part of the Trans-Canada Highway.

Six of Wood's furry little friends have made a small lake right where the road is supposed to go.

Last week, after chasing the beavers away, Wood blew up their dam. The lake went down two feet. By next day the beavers had rebuilt the dam.

"I refuse to be outwitted by Beavers," said Wood and blew up the dam again.

This morning the beavers had reconstructed it. What's more the beavers had built two more dams, about 40 yards downstream to reinforce the first.

As he laid another round of dynamite charges, Woods said: "I will keep blowing up the dams. . ."

Atlantic Treaty Council Meets To Consider West's Defences Against Possible Aggression

New York, Sept. 15 (AP) — Decisions that will revolutionize the defences of the west against possible Russian aggression are expected to be taken by the North Atlantic Treaty Council which opens a two day meeting here today.

The foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France as indicated by their own joint announcement, will recommend that the 12-country council take "immediate effective steps" to create in western Europe a unified military force capable of turning back any red assault from the coast.

In addition State Secretary Acheson, with the assent of Foreign Secretary Bevin and Foreign Minister Schuman, will propose that provision be made for this force to include German units.

Schuman, in the opinion of diplomatic experts, has thus put himself in position to be guided by the will of the majority on this controversial issue.

Acheson, for his part, is prepared to tell his colleagues of American plans to send reinforcements to Germany soon, but to emphasize that the fulfilment of those plans depend on the willingness of the Atlantic Pact allies to do their full share in defence preparations.

An indication of what Canada's stand will be on the question of rearming west Germany was given by L. B. Pearson when the Dominion's External Affairs Minister arrived in New York yesterday.

East Germans Armed

Pearson, who will represent Canada at the Atlantic Pact meetings, said in an interview that the time has come to rearm west Germany "because the eastern Germans are already rearmed."

"The best way to neutralize (western) Germany is to integrate her in a European system of which her armed forces would form a part," Pearson said.

Canada would enter the talks with an "open mind" on the question of western armament, but he emphasized that Canada's present plans do not include sending ground troops to Europe. This possibility had been mentioned recently in some quarters.

The big-power ministers completed a three-day conference schedule here last night with an admission that much of the work they set out to accomplish had not been finished and, because of the 12-country gathering, could not be finished today. The council meets today and Saturday; the Big Three therefore decided to reconvene Monday to wind up unfinished projects, mostly concerning Germany.

At the Monday session they are expected to approve steps towards ending the state of war with Germany.

Three Persons Guess Correct Weight of Cow

Three people guessed the correct weight of "Bessie the Butter Cow" on display at the Canadian National Exhibition. The correct weight was 1210 pounds two ounces.

"Bessie" modelled after the Guernsey breed attracted 175,000 fair patrons over the period of 14 days exhibit. She was sponsored and exhibited by the Ontario Dairy Producers' Co-ordination Board which is composed of the associations of Cheese Producers, Cream Producers, Whole Milk Producers and Concentrated Milk Producers.

Evidence of the interest in "Bessie" is seen in the fact that each day 15,000 persons were issued tickets on a special draw.

Two Belleville residents were among the lucky winners of the prizes of five pounds of cheese and butter and five quarts of milk.

IN JAIL NOW

New York, Sept. 15 (AP) — A post office employee accused of selling hundreds of Irish sweepstakes tickets through his stamp window was arrested yesterday. The defendant, Jerome Bloom, was charged with selling lottery tickets and was held in $1,000 bail. He has been a postal employee 32 years.

Arthur Stringer Dies, Wrote More Than 50 Novels

Mountain Lakes, N.J., Sept. 15 —(CP)—Arthur Stringer, Canadian author of "Perils of Pauline" a famous blood-curdling serial of the early days of films, died yesterday at the age of 76.

The cliff-hanging movie scripts brought Stringer fame, but his literary reputation was built on more than 50 novels, a dozen books of poetry and many dramas and comedies.

Born in Chatham, Ont., Stringer, like many another Canadian author, went to the United States to make his fortune, but he never ceased to think of himself as a Canadian.

He took his early education at London, Ont, later attending the University of Toronto and Oxford. It was at his suggestion that the University of Western Ontario at London, Ont., started a summer course in creative writing. Mr. Stringer gave the first series of lectures and delighted students with his whimsical sense of humor.

He told them of the difficulties he encountered in half a century of novel writing, trying to keep his heroines up-to-date.

"Just when a man has trained himself to admire the sweep of Grecian drapery, he has to hold everything and lose himself in the worship of the golden calf," he told the class.

In 1900 he married Jobyna Howland, the original Gibson girl. With the death of his first wife, Stringer later married Margaret Arbuthnott of Chatham who survives him. They had three sons.

Eruption Kills 51 In S. Philippines

Manila, Sept. 15 — (AP)—The government announced tonight 51 persons were killed by an eruption of Hibok Volcano on Camiguin Island near the northern coast of Mindiano in the Southern Philippines.

Twenty-seven others were badly injured, the announcement said.

The report of the casualties was received from Red Cross representatives on the island.

Three Philippine naval patrol vessels were ordered to go to the island and stand by in the event there was need for a mass evacuation of the inhabitants.

Three villages were reported by the Red Cross as being threatened by falling ashes.

Hibok Hibok began erupting Sept. 1, 1948, after a series of 15 earthquakes. Three days later the 45,000 islanders were being evacuated.

The fifth day of that eruption, the main port of the island was abandoned, two villages were buried under lava and 30,000 had been evacuated.

The next day a second crater of the volcano erupted, burying five persons. It threatened to spew poison gases on the island. The remaining 15,000 inhabitants were started for other islands.

The volcano calmed down Sept. 7, but the next day a new vent was opened and a frantic appeal was sent for evacuation ships when acidic ash was spewed from the volcano.

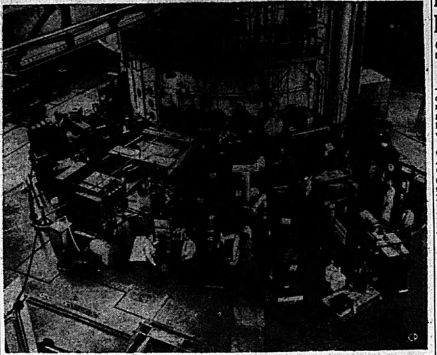
A U. S. army transport took on refugees. Some 5,000 persons remained on the island and were fed by soup kitchens. The volcano subsided Sept. 12, 1948.

UN Relief Agency Offices Blown up At Damascus

Damascus, Syria, Sept. 15 (AP) —The United Nations relief and works agency offices here were blown up shortly after midnight today, killing one man and injuring two others.

Dr. Pierre Depage, Belgian U.N. agency mission chief here, said he believes the blast either was an act of vengeance by an unemployed Arab refugee or intended as a protest against the agency. U.N.R.W.A. is in charge of an estimated $55,000,000 public improvement program to provide work for Arabs who fled Israel.

MYSTERY OF POWER



Here is the first photo ever made public of Canada's celebrated Chalk River atomic pile. Through the mysterious-looking apparatus, Canada is playing a leading role in the search for practical uses of atomic energy.

This National Research Council photo shows the atomic furnace — or pile — the circular piece in the background that resembles a ship's funnel. It has "the highest flux of thermal neutrons ever recorded," says N.R.C. This makes it possible to study the fundamentals of atomic energy and the behavior of materials under intense bombardment by neutrons.

The equipment in the foreground is used in various kinds of experiments. Concentrated beams of neutrons, emerging from openings in the face of the reactor, are guided into the assemblies. These are aligned like spokes on a wheel of which the reactor forms the hub.

Also in the foreground is a neutron spectrometer, used to determine the structure of certain chemical compounds; apparatus to produce isotopes for use in biological agriculture, medical and industrial fields; and a special type of electron-pair spectrometers which make it possible to study energy levels within the very core of the atom.—(CP Photo.)

17 Alleged Russ And Czech Spies Are Rounded Up

Heidelberg, Germany, Sept. 15 (Reuters) —United States Army intelligence agents rounded up 17 alleged Russian and Czech spies shortly before the start of the United States Army's big autumn manoeuvres, American sources said today.

The manoeuvres started Monday in the United States zone of Germany.

All but three of the spies were picked up in the Nuernberg area where American troop strength was concentrated.

A high American intelligence officer said the Russians and Soviet satellite countries are "saturating" western Germany with spies, many of them posing as refugees.

Eight of those seized have been tried and given prison terms of from five to eight years.

Four of the spies were girls, two of whom were convicted of having recruited an American Army deserter, Pte. Albert Geyer as an agent for the Czech Intelligence service.

Plant is Given Police Bodyguard

Montreal, Sept. 15 — (CP) — Former assistant police director Pacifique Plante has been provided with a police bodyguard for the duration of Montreal's current vice probe, it was announced today.

The guard, of three shifts of two armed detectives, was ordered late yesterday by police director Albert Langlois—one of the men named in Plante's charges of alleged co-operation between police, city councillors and members of the Montreal underworld.

Police would not say whether Plante has been threatened since he launched the probe in court here this week. One spokesman said protection was granted at Plante's request.

In the inquiry, Plante is acting for 50 petitioners and Jean Drapeau of Montreal. The case which began Monday is expected to last for several months.

OFFICE SAFE BLOWN

Ayr, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)— Police Chief Cecil Pickett early today disturbed three men in the Ayr Co-operative Office. He fired three shots at them before they escaped in the darkness. Only t— weeks ago the safe in the same office was blown and a small sum of money taken.

Safeguard Munitions Sent From Canada

Hong Kong, Sept. 15—(AP)—A spokesman for the Chinese communist foreign ministry today said his government has instructed the bank of Canton in Hong Kong to safeguard a shipment of munitions from Canada now in a colony warehouse.

The munitions, the spokesman explained, originally were ordered by T. V. Soong, brother-in-law of Chiang Kai-Shek, the Chinese nationalist leader. The order was placed when Soong was governor of Kwangtung province in South China.

The spokesman said the bank was instructed to protect the armaments pending ultimate delivery to the Chinese communist government.

Three Canadian Destroyers Take Part in Attack

Tokyo, Sept. 15 — (CP)—Three Canadian destroyers attached to United Nations naval forces fighting in Korean waters, took part in today's amphibious landing at this Korean port.

The Canadian ships — Athabaskan, Cayuga and Sioux were among 262 allied ships which participated in the operation.

The force, aside from the Canadian destroyers, was made up of 194 American vessels, 12 British warships, two Australian, two New Zealand, one French, one Dutch, 32 U. S. ships leased to Japan and 15 South Korean.

Everything from carriers and cruisers to rocket barges, mine sweepers and landing craft were used.

Stunned North Korean prisoners, taken in the first few minutes of the assault, said they were crazed by the explosives rained on them and from heavy naval gun fire.

Destroyers stood in close and cruisers pounded steep hills from farther back.

Fishing Good Next 25 Years Say Experts

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 15—(CP) —Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, director of Canada's wildlife service, last night emphasized the role of organized sportsmen in the formulation of fish and wildlife conservation regulations.

He addressed the 40th annual convention of the International Association of Game, Fish and Conservation Commissioners, meeting here under the chairmanship of President Harrison F. Lewis of Ottawa.

"Throughout most of the English-speaking world," Dr. Harkness said, "the administration of wildlife resources is based upon the principle that all wildlife belongs to the state, whether it can be found on public or private lands.

"Sportsmen owe it to themselves to bring themselves. . . up to date (on the) most-recent information on wildlife management."

Sportsmen's groups were often regarded as speaking for the public, and should support administrative policies "which are based upon sound facts."

Another Canadian speaker, C. David Fowle of the federal department of lands and forests, spoke on natural controls of deer.

"The most important factor in limiting the population of deer is the lack of winter food, especially in areas where the numbers are great," he said.

Severe winters, not considering deep snows that restrict movement, had a smaller effect than was generally considered. Soil fertility, disease and predation by other animals contributed to the mortality rate.

The sportsmen were told by American officials that hunting and fishing prospects are "reasonably good" for the next 25 years.

Crown Attorney Wonders Why He Was Dismissed

Windsor, Sept. 15—(CP)— E. C. Awrey, who was retired from his crown attorney's post Thursday by the attorney-general's department in a reorganization of Windsor police administration, said today he is unable to find out why he has been dismissed.

"I've been unable to find out what I've done to deserve this," he said. The attorney-general's department "hant's infosmed me of anything."

He said he was first told of his dismissal Wednesday. He returned to Windsor Thursday night after a one-day visit to Toronto and today began removing his private papers from the crown attorney's office in Windsor.

"Of course it is a different kind of justice to what is administered in the courts," he said, "but I suppose there is no use worrying after you have missed the train."

He will return to private practice.

RECOVERS FROM SCALDS

Owen Sound, Sept. 15—(CP)— Harvey Boddy of Owen Sound is recovering in hospital from severe leg scalds suffered when he accidentally stepped into a four-feet deep vat of near-boiling water Thursday. The water is used for steaming veneer logs for radio and television cabinets.

Steps in Reorganization Of Police Administration To be Studied by Windsor Bd.

Windsor, Sept. 15 (CP)—The Windsor Police Commission will meet here next Monday to consider further steps in the reorganization of police administration announced Thursday by Attorney-General Porter.

Two new members will sit on the commission with Mayor Arthur J. Reaume. They are Lt.-Col. Roland Harris, newly-appointed magistrate, of Windsor, and Judge Archibald Cochrane of Brampton.

Chief of Police Claude Renaud, who normally attends the commission meetings, will also be present.

Magistrate Angus W. MacMillan one of two police commission members whose resignation was announced Thursday, said difficulties had arisen from combination of his duties in the courts and on the commission.

"As a member of the commission I sometimes learned things that hindered my work in court," he said.

No changes in the police force itself can be taken before Monday's meeting of the commission when six recommendations made by provincial police inspectors in a report on Windsor law enforcement will be studied.

The recommendations include expansion and changes in the morality squad charged with enforcement of anti-gambling and anti-vice laws, expansion of the force itself, and enlargement of police headquarters.

Meanwhile, resignation of Constable Gilbert Ouellette as president of the Windsor Police Association is scheduled to come before a special meeting of the association today.

Constable Ouellette confirmed Thursday night that he had tendered his resignation Sept. 11 but emphasized that it was not directly connected with the reorganization. He gave dissension in the ranks of police and disagreement with the association's board of directors as the reasons for his resignation.

The association has been reported several times in recent months as objecting to treatment received by officers from E. C. Awrey, who was retired as Windsor Crown Attorney Thursday, and from Magistrate MacMillan.

Windsor — (CP) — A Royal Commission "to investigate maladministration in the city of Windsor" has been asked by Local 195 of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.).

A motion asking that the union recommend such a commission to the Attorney-General was passed at a meeting Thursday night of the local's general council.

The union demand followed publication Thursday of a Provincial Police report into police administration in Windsor.

The council is the union's policy-making body, with representatives from the big amalgamated local's 47 plant units. About 100 were present. The meetings are closed to the press.

The union's council also agreed to postpone any action on the endorsation of Mayor Arthur J. Reaume for re-election in the December civic elections. The recommendation that organized labor support the re-election of Mayor Reaume was made recently by a joint political action committee of all unions in Windsor.

Gen. Roberts Denies Report He Was Warned

Fort MacArthur, Calif.' Sept. 15 —(AP)—To a United Nations commission's report that there was six weeks' advance warning of attack in Korea, Brig.-Gen. W. L. Robert retorts: "hindsight observation."

Gen. Roberts who was chief of the United States Korean military advisory group, last night denied he was informed of large north Korean troop concentrations as early as May 12, as implied in a 111-page report of the U.N.'s Korean commission.

Gen. Roberts said he received daily intelligence reports from an officer who worked alongside the Korean officer.

'I most certainly would have been informed of an concentration of northern troops if reliable information had been obtained," said Gen. Roberts.

"Even if we had received such information at that time...it is doubtful that much more could have been done to counter it," he added.

May Close Schools in B.C. To Allow Children Help Reap Record Apple Crop

By DAVE MCINTOSH

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Kelowna, B.C., Sept. 15—(CP)—They may close Okanagan Valley schools next week to let the kids swarm through the groaning apple orchards.

With a 7,300,000-box harvest to be reaped, some 10,000 pickers are needed. There is a labor shortage and school children may fill it as they did in war years.

Kelowna, a city of 10,000 whose stores and homes seem as if they had just been freshly painted yesterday, is the golden core of the valley's $25,000,000 fruit and vegetable industry. Here are the headquarters of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd., the giant co-operative that handles the marketing of fruits and vegetables for 37,000 growers in the valley.

If the kids get into the orchards, there's going to be a terrific run on soda fountains when the harvest is home in October. Pickers get seven cents a box—nine cents if they stay until the whole orchard is picked. A good picker can fill 20 boxes a day, 150 apples to the box. That comes to $14 a day for a fast worker.

Barges now are moving freight cars to packing plants along the lakeshore. Later, filled, they will be shoved back to railheads at Penticton, Kelowna and Vernon. Hundreds of trucks are starting to cart the fruit from orchards. The valley's fruit industry is worth about $7,000,000 to the railways each year, worth another $5,000,000 to supply firms.

Over a Million Trees

There are some 1,400,000 fruit trees in the valley, scattered among 35,000 acres of orchards. The average holding is 10 acres and in a good crop year—and when prices are also good — a rancher can gross between $4,000 and $5,000.

Apples make up about 75 per cent of the crop and bring in about $13,000,000 annually.

Some of last year's figures: cherries, 520,431 boxes; apricots, 603,339 boxes; plums, 168,581 boxes; prunes, 1,023,780 boxes; pears, 609,503 boxes; grapes, 149,210 boxes; vegetables 555,776 boxes. A box weighs 40 pounds.

Last winter's severe cold all but ruined the soft fruits production. For instance, there was a crop of 2,000,000 boxes of peaches last year. This season there were only 100,000 boxes. There may be 700,000 next year.

Between 400 and 500 growers were wiped out by the killing winter and many others lost to a greater or lesser degree. About 25 per cent of all trees were destroyed.

Though the apple crop is an estimated 400,000 boxes less than last year's, prices are expected to be better, especially in the U.S. The Okanagan finds its chief markets in Canada, the U.S. and Britain, though the United Kingdom source dried up completely last year.

Married 71 Years, Brantford Couple's Advice For Happiness — Keep Busy

Brantford, Ont., (CP) —Married 71 years, Mr. and Mrs. D. Frank Roy of Brant County have a suggestion for making a success of marriage: maintain a cheerful outlook and always keep busy.

At 93, Mr. Roy still keeps busy on the farm that has been in the family for more than a century. He raises chickens and does odd chores around the farm.

Mrs. Roy, who admits only that she is a few younger than her husband, does her housework her shopping and says she likes the movies. She made her annual trip to the Canadian National Exhibition again this year, but couldn't persuade her husband to go along.

"When you get up in your 90s, you won't want to go to the fair," he told her.

Mrs. Roy vividly recalls Sept. 10, 1897—her wedding day. It was a beautiful day, she says. She also remembers the horse-drawn trolley cars of New York City, where they spent their honeymoon.

To celebrate the anniversary, they held a big dinner for the immediate family and held open house for their numerous friends the rest of the day. Mrs. Roy was resplendent in a new wine-colored dress, specially bought for the occasion.

The Roys, who still live in the white brick farm house Frank built for his bride, had a family of three—two girls and a boy. One daughter survives. They have seven grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild — Susan Waddell of Hamilton, born last July.

Trades Congress Upholds Action, Bars Suspects

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 15 (CP)—After a rousing convention-floor battle over the issue of communism in unions, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada today upheld its leadership's action in barring six red suspects from the annual meeting.

At the end of a tumultuous scrap over the question, the convention backed up by about 30 to one the executive decision keeping out the six, who are among 20 banned originally by the convention's credentials committee.

The case of the other 13 did not crop up today because up to this point they had not sought formally to be admitted.

Those who disbarment was upheld by the convention were: Mrs. Helen Weir, Toronto hotel and restaurant worker; Reg Wright, Toronto head of the Chemical Workers' Union; Sam Lapedes of Toronto, national representative of the United Garment Workers of America, and Alex Gauld, Montreal plumber.

The hour-long debate over the alleged reds was punctuated by boos, jeers and other interruptions as the overwhelmingly-strong anti-reds battled it out with the left-wing minority of about 25 delegates.

T. L. C. President Percy Bengough told the convention that in deciding on the banning of the six the executive merely was carrying out congress policy decided on last year.

Percy Bengough today was re-elected president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada for his eighth consecutive term.

The veteran Vancouver machinist went in without opposition.

Gordon Cushing of Calgary and Ottawa, General Secretary-Treasurer was re-elected.

Vice presidents: James Whitebone, Saint John, N.B., Maritimes; Claude Jodoin, Quebec, William Jenovese, Ontario, and Carl Berg, Prairies.

Canadian Ships Suffer No Losses Off Korean Coast

Ottawa, Sept. 15 —(CP)—Defence Minister Claxton indicated today Canada's destroyers off Korea have suffered no losses.

He was asked in the Commons by Harry Cavers (L — Lincoln) whether there is anything to reports that the Canadians have suffered losses in a naval action.

Mr. Claxton said he understands there has been an action but it didn't involve Canadian ships.

At the same time, he read a message from Gen. MacArthur congratulating the Canadian naval force and its commander, Capt. J. V. Brock on their skill and cooperation and inviting senior Canadian naval officials to come out and see how good they are.

Attlee Ready To Nationalize Steel and Iron

London, Sept. 15 (Reuters) — Prime Minister Clement Attlee announced today the Labor Government is going ahead with its plans to nationalize the British iron and steel industry.

Attlee also stated in the House of Commons that appointments to the steel board which will run the industry would be made Monday, Oct. 2.

Winston Churchill, opposition leader, at once gave notice that the Conservatives would put forward a motion tonight condemning the government's action.

The motion would "regret that at this most critical period in our national safety and affairs abroad" Britain by this act of the government should be "plunged into the fiercest political controversy at home."

Churchill asked for a debate on the question next Tuesday.

Today's development means the hitherto calmly-conducted emergency session of parliament called to discuss defence will probably blow up into one of the biggest rows yet staged between government and opposition.

Herbert Morrison, leader of the House, agreed to a debate Tuesday.

In the opposition view, if the Churchill motion is carried, the government would be obliged to resign.

Government supporters do not agree.

Some political quarters predicted the government decision to proceed with steel nationalization immediately may cause an autumn general election.

The Steel Nationalization Act, passed in the last parliament, provides for the iron and steel industry to be taken over by the state Jan. 1, 1951 — or at any time within a year from that date.

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 15—(CP)—Two prisoners bound for Kingston penitentiary jumped from the rear coach of a train at nearby Midhurst early today and vanished into bushland. They were handcuffed together.

The Canadian Pacific Railway coach was carrying 16 men to the penitentiary.

Shortly afterward a posse of 12 provincial policemen started beating through the bush near Midhurst, 10 miles north of here.

Cannot Clean up So Much Garbage Left Along Roads

Hamilton, Sept. 14 (CP)—Tons of city garbage are being dumped along provincial and county roads officials said today and the situation has become so bad that they now find it impossible to provide sufficient men to make daily "clean-ups."

Frank Bell, Wentworth county engineer, disclosed today that his department had sent out nearly 40 letters to city residents whose names were obtained for garbage dumped "all over the county."

The highways department is attempting to keep the heavily-travelled Queen Elizabeth way cleaned up. Despite all their efforts, however, dozens of garbage piles are found every morning. Two other districts roads are also found littered by daily patrolling workmen.

"United States tourists passing through must have a fine idea of this part of the country to take home with them," the department spokesman remarked.

Yesterday, 23 men were charged with obstruction as police scuffled with massed picket lines at the east-end garbage dump.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Winners of Zone Four in intermediate "C" softball circles, Frankford meets Meaford in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association semi-finals in a best-of-three series. The first tussle gets under way Saturday night at Frankford. The Frankford squad, with Don Boyle at the pitching helm has come through with a splendid performance this summer. They have defeated some of the best teams in the province in their class and not a few pick them as the ultimate provincial champions.

* * *

Weather permitting the Batawa Shoemen meet the Bowmanville Roses in the first game of their two-of-three Intermediate "A" baseball series at the Exhibition Grounds tonight under the lights. Batawa has been idle for some time, in fact since their elimination from the so-called COBL senior circles and should be in fine fettle for the lake-towners. Gordie Muffitt will likely get the pitching nod.

* * *

Rain again washed out all sports activities on the local front last night. The Cannifton - Latta baseball game will be played at the Fair Grounds Saturday (tomorrow) is the latest report, with the tussle getting under way at 8 o'clock. Other postponed games will be rushed to completion at the first of the week, weather permitting.

GEOHAGEN MAY BE NEXT

According to Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who was five times heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, his protege, Timothy Geohagen, will be the next holder of the world crown. Not only that, but the shrewd Lewis predicts that Geohagen, the popular Irish strong-man and wrestling star, will beat and un-mask the Masked Marvel in tonight's mat feature at the Memorial Arena.

Fans who saw the bout a few weeks ago between the talented Geohagen and the mystery - man will be able to understand Lewis' prophesy, for Tenacious Tim had his Irish Sleeper on the Mask and had him on the verge of collapse at the finish. However, Geohagen was a shade outside the ropes and refused to relinquish his hold on the hooded mat-man, on account of the latter's rough tactics throughout the match. While the referee counted Tim out, he actually looked more like the winner than the veiled grappler. Lewis declares Geohagen will reverse that decision here and go on to his title march.

One happy aspect of that prediction is that, if it's correct, the fans will see and know who the mystery mat-man is. That's besides enjoying the sight of his defeat.

Two other top bouts complete the card, with Seelie Samara, the Negro star, meeting Lee Henning, the bashing Iowan, in the semi-final. Pat O'Shocker will collide with Joe Devalteau, of Montreal, in the first match.

Wilson Will Try For World Record On Picton Bay

(By The Canadian Press)

Harold Wilson, owner and driver of Miss Canada IV, plans to try to smash the world speedboat record at Picton, Ont., some time around the end of September.

He said at Ingersoll Thursday he will make formal application in a day or two to the American Powerboat Association, asking for official timers.

The record of 160 miles an hour is held by the American boat Slo-Mo-Shun, owned by Stanley Sayres who easily won the recent Harmsworth races at Detroit. Miss Canada was forced out after one heat because of breaks in the plywood sections of her hull.

Miss Canada last year set a North American mark of 138 miles an hour and was reported to have touched an estimated 165 in a trial run on Lake Muskoka this summer.

Coach Art Massucci of the Windsor Rockets, shuffling his United States imports in preparation for the team's second game of the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union schedule, has cut loose five imports from the roster.

Two of them, quarterback Bill Snyder and inside Charlie Britz of Detroit, played in last Saturday's game when Sarnia Imperials walloped the Rockets 39-0. The others are Sy Mike, California halfback, Bill Saunders of Detroit and middle Tom Hubbard.

Six U. S. imports now with the club are expected to see action in Windsor Saturday against Sarnia.

Four more players, bringing the total to seven, signed contracts Thursday with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

The latest to sign are wingman Floyd Curry and Ken Mosdell and defencemen Glen Harmon and Hal Laycoe. Others already signed are Elmer Lach, Billy Reay and Butch Bouchard.

Clint Albright, who quit hockey a year ago after one successful season as a rookie left winger with New York Rangers, has advised Manager Frank Boucher he will report Monday at Rangers Lake Placid, N.Y., training camp.

The bespectacled 23-year-old Winnipeg winger tied with teammate Pentti Lund for most goals scored by a N.H.L. rookie in 1948-49. Each had 14.

Albright remained in Winnipeg last year to complete his education at the University of Manitoba. He earned an engineering degree.

Stan Leonard of Vancouver shot sub-par 67 Thursday to lead in the first round of the British Columbia Open golf tournament at Vancouver.

In second place was Ray Honsberger, from Klamath Falls, Ore. Honsberger was home with a 34-35—69.

Major league baseball has completed all the preliminary arrangements and set the dates for the 1950 world series—if—there are no ties in either pennant race.

That "if" looks as a big word in view of the neck and neck race among Detroit, New York and Boston for the American League flag.

If the season ends according to schedule Sunday, Oct. 1 the series will open Wednesday, Oct. 4, in the home park of the National League winner.

If the teams tie in the American League, a one-game playoff will be necessary and baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler, who presided at Thursday's session in Cincinnati, said that would mean a one-day delay in the start of the series.

If three teams tie in the American or if there is a tie in the National League, the start of the series will be delayed even more.

Two Old Pros, Joe DiMaggio And Mize Carry on Custom Of Winning Clutch Games

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A couple of old pros, Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Mize, are nobly carrying on the New York Yankee tradition of winning the clutch games.

These two veterans, both in their 12th seasons, are supplying the power that has propelled the Yankees to the front in the ding-dong American League pennant fight.

DiMaggio and Mize powered timely home runs yesterday to lead the Bombers to a 7-5 victory over the Tigers in the opening game of their vital three-game series at Detroit.

The "jump" triumph moved the world champions to the head of the class with a half-game edge.

The Tigers fell back to second while the surge of the Boston Red Sox was derailed temporarily in St. Louis by the upstart Browns, who now have won eight in a row. The Browns polished off Tom Yawkey's gold-plated boys, 6-3. The Sox now trail by two games.

Detroit turned to its young righthander, Art Houtteman, to get them back into the driver's seat today. The 23-year-old ace has won 18 games, including four over the Yanks. The New Yorkers trotted out Tommy Byrne, a Tiger tamer from way back, to improve their position. Byrne has scored 14 victories, including four over Detroit.

Dick Starr, a former Yankee, stunned the Red Sox with a neat seven-hitter under the lights of St. Louis. The Browns broke a 2-2 tie with three runs in the sixth inning and were never headed.

Chicago Trims A's

Chicago White Sox turned back Philadelphia Athletics 5-2 in the only other American League game. The Sox scored all of their runs in the first inning. Washington and Cleveland were rained out.

Philadelphia Phillies continued their march to the National League pennant by edging St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 in a night game in Philadelphia.

Willie Jones singled home Ed Waitkus from third base with two out in the ninth inning to win the game. Jim Konstanty, making his 65th appearance, gained credit for his 15th victory.

The Phils' lead, however, was reduced to six games as the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers took a doubleheader from Cincinnati Reds, 6-3 and 5-2.

Home runs by Gil Hodges, Billy Cox, Bruce Edwards and Carl Furillo featured the first game victory.

Preacher Roe gained his 18th victory in the finale but Ralph Branca saved the game in the ninth by striking out two pinch-hitters with the bases loaded.

New York Giants split a double header with Pittsburgh Pirates, winning the second game 6-1 behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Hearn after losing the opener 7-1 to little Murray Dickson, who also granted only six blows.

Johnny Sain became Boston's third 19-game winner as he pitched the Braves to a 7-4 victory over Chicago Cubs. Vern Bickford and Warren Spahn also have won 19 games for Boston.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Sept. 15 (AP) — When the Portsmouth, Va., Cubs clinched the Piedmont League pennant, owner Frank Lawrence got on the phone and badgered the manufacturers until they promised delivery of the flag in time to raise it at the next home game . . . Asked Frank: "What's the use of waiting until next year to raise the pennant when this year's team won?" . . . As the big-league hockey teams prepare for the start of training, reports indicate the biggest turnover of "name" players in five years . . . Among those who have decided to retire (unless they change their minds) are Bill Durnan, Frank Brimsek, Jack Crawford, Red Hamill, Garth Boesch and a flock who said "maybe" . . . The sports editor of the Czechoslovak radio says that athletes who don't work hard in factories or on farms should be barred from sports. How far can this "amateur" business go?

X-tra Ordinary

George Keough, Indiana University, ticket manager who spends a large part of his time listening to complaints, got a laugh out of one ticket application from a feminine fan . . . She enclosed a clipping of an aerial photo of the stadium . . . A big "X" crayoned on the 50-yard line bore the caption, "Here." . . . An arrow pointed to another "X" marked in the distant end zone and labelled "Not here". . . . Maybe it's giving away a trade secret to report that she got midfield seats.

Passers Dandy But Also Find They Need a Kicker

Montreal Alouettes, reigning champions of Canadian football are beating the bushes for someone who knows how to kick.

Paradoxically, Lew Hayman's Grey Cup holders were rated as pre-season football favorites because of their abundance of hirelings who could pass, plunge, tackle or run. Apparently nobody thought to line up an expert at the occupation for which the sport was named.

The oversight showed up plainly as the Montrealers dropped two of their first three games They struggled manfully up the field, only to have someone hoist a booming punt that left them back where they started.

In an effort to plug the gap Alouettes reached into the hinterland of Northern Ontario to sign up a tourist-camp proprietor who hasn't played the game for years, but who owns a reputation as one of the most fearsome knickers in the game's history.

If Ab Box can boot the way he did in the 30's, Hayman's problem is solved. Just in case he can't, the Alouettes are investigating the possibility of signing Ernie Becker and Pete McKeown, two cast-offs from Toronto Argonauts with kicking ability.

Box made his mark with Toronto Balmy Beach, with whom he first lined up in 1930, and with Toronto Argonauts, whom he joined the following year. He played off and on, for those two clubs until his retirement in 1938.

Triple-Threat Man

In those days Ab was a triple-threat man, equally known as a quarterback and passer. But if he gets into action against the Rough Riders at Ottawa Saturday, he'll be a kicker only.

While the Riders and Alouettes fight it out for last place in the Interprovincial Union, with identical records of two losses in three starts, Hamilton Tiger-Cats will tackle the Argonauts in Toronto to break their tie for the league lead.

The surprising Cats, who dropped their first decision to Ottawa last week, downed the Argos in their first encounter on Labor Day. It was Toronto's only loss in three starts.

In the Western Canada Conference, the champion Calgary Stampeders, who won their first game in six starts last Monday, entertain the first-place Edmonton Eskimos while Winnipeg Blue Bombers visit Regina in an effort to break their second-place tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Sarnia Imperials, 39-0 victors in their first two Ontario Rugby football union starts, will play a return engagement with the Rockets at Windsor. Rocket coach Art Massucci will send six United States imports against the Imperials, the only all-Canadian team in senior football.

RETAINS BRITISH TITLE

Swansea, Wales, Sept. 15 (AP) — Eddie Thomas, 150, retained his British welterweight title Thursday night by decisioning fellow-Welshman Cliff Curvis, 147, in a dull 15-rounder.

The crowd of 18,000 yawned and booed. The referee threatened to throw both boys out of the ring if they didn't speed up the action.

Thomas put Curvis down for a nine count in the sixth round with a right to the body. Curvis, a lefthander claimed a foul but the referee ignored him. Rain slowed up the proceedings.

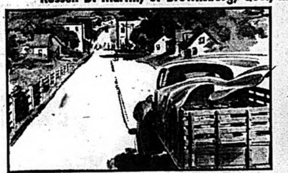
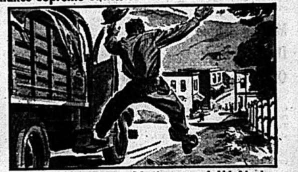
TRUCK DRIVER LOSES LIFE TO PREVENT TRAGEDY

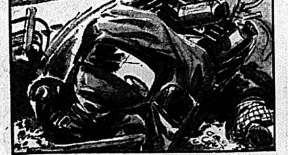
Russell D. Martin, of Brownsburg, Que., makes supreme sacrifice after brakes fail



1. The highway into Brownsburg from Dalesville gets quite steep as it approaches the main intersection. Russell Martin instinctively applied the brakes to slow down his 3-ton truck. But nothing happened! He exchanged a glance with his companion, Orval Gunn . . . and they realized the tragedy that would result if the runaway truck ran into the traffic!



2. Quickly and selflessly, Martin commanded his friend to jump. He had seen the children on the street below . . . and the cars . . . and knew that he had to ditch the truck if a disaster was to be avoided. Orval Gunn obeyed the order and leaped. When he saw that Gunn was safe, Martin did the only thing possible. He steered towards the side of the road . . . towards a metal railing . . .



3. It will never be known whether Martin tried a last minute jump or whether he was thrown by the terrific impact. He was killed instantly . . . because he did not want to guide a death-bearing vehicle into the intersection. His sacrifice merits the respect and admiration of every Canadian. We are proud to add our tribute through the presentation of THE DOW AWARD.

Rochester Wings, Montreal Royals Even Series

(By The Associated Press)

Johnny Keane took a page out of Connie Mack's book, and as a result the Rochester Red Wings have evened their semi-final International League playoff series with Jersey City Giants.

Keane surprised everybody last night by starting Jackie Collum, a little lefthander, against the Giants in the second game of the series. Collum, used mainly in relief throughout the regular season, came through with a 10-4 victory to square the series at 1-1.

Mack pulled an even-greater stunt in 1929 in the opening game of the World Series against Chicago Cubs. Mack had Lefty Grove warming up on the sidelines for the first game, but at the last minute sent in Howard Ehmke, who was supposed to have a sore arm. Ehmke came through with a 3-1 victory.

Montreal Royals also evened their semi-final series with Baltimore at a game apiece by edging the Orioles 3-2 in Baltimore.

George Shuba broke up the game with a home run in the 8th inning. Don Thompson singled home two Montreal runs in the third. The Orioles tied the score in the sixth when Butch Woyt, a former Royal, socked a two-run homer. Jim Hughes was the winner and Tom Fine the loser.

First Perfect No-Hitter Won By Tip Tops

Austin, Tex., Sept. 15 (CP) — Toronto Tip Top Tailors covered themselves with glory yesterday in their uphill struggle to get back in the driver's seat of the Amateur Softball Association's world tournament when they defeated Phillips 66 of Oklahoma 1-0. It was the first perfect no-hit, no-run game in the 18-year history of the world tournament.

Percy McConners, pitching the perfect game for Toronto, struck out six men and his teammates rallied behind his performance to retire the remaining 15 batters in order without a single Oklahoman reaching first base.

"The explosions were like depth charges going off," a member of the crew said.

ARMY WEEK

Sept. 17 to 24
This "parade" will take place in cities and towns of all ten Provinces. On display will be Canada's Army. These are some of the men who stand ready to defend the freedom of Canada and democratic nations everywhere against aggression.
Take this opportunity to meet and salute Canada's men in the Active and Reserve Forces. Visit the public exhibits and demonstrations in your district. You will be proud of the men and machines that make up Canada's Army.
At the same time you will probably realize the need for more men, more equipment. You will understand why Canada is now doing everything possible to strengthen our Active and Reserve Forces—why we are asking young Canadians from coast-to-coast to visit their nearest Recruiting Depot or Armoury at once.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

To lead a trump when in doubt has long been out of fashion. A trump is led for a specific purpose. You can figure out the purpose by rule or by logic or from a combination of both.

Rule says a trump is led to show partner you have ace or king in each unbid suit. Hotshots will lead a trump at other times, too. Knowing when, their partners are not fooled by these variations.

Well known trump lead deviations are these:

1. With four or more trumps if you will not lose a trick thereby.
2. If the bidding shows opponent trick-taking ability depends mostly on ruffs.
3. If dummy has rescued a penalty double with an assist.
4. If partner opened with a no-trump bid and opponents ended in a trump contract.
5. If partner passed your take-out double for a penalty double.
6. If the strength of your pair is in all the side suits.

All these deviations can come under two main headings. One is the information suggested in the basic rule. The other is the aim to prevent declarer and his dummy from getting too many ruffs.

In a deal the bidding has gone like this:

South	North
1 D	1 S
2 C	2 NT
3 C	3 D
5 D	Pass

You have the west hand shown here:

♠8 6 5
♥K 6 3
♦9 4 2
♣Q J 8 3

Obviously south will try to establish clubs with ruffs in the dummy. Prevent as much of this as you can by reducing dummy diamonds. Start with the lead of a trump.

Do that which does your side the most good.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 15 (AP) — Tarzan of the movies has been to Africa for the first time and he says "it's not for me."

Tarzan is Lex Barker, the 10th to portray the bare-chested jungle king in films and the first to enact the role on actual locations in Africa.

"All I can say is that Tarzan wouldn't last three days in Africa," said Barker. "If he went around with just a loin-cloth on, he'd be quickly eaten by tse-tse flies, poisonous snakes and various other pests. When I appeared in it, the natives just laughed."

Africa presented a number of other disappointments. "We expected the country to be hot," Barker said. "The weather was about 50 or 60 degrees. I was shivering in that outfit I wear.

Built Sets

"And the scenery didn't look like Africa is supposed to look. It seemed just like parts of Arizona or California. We found ourselves actually building sets to make the place look like Africa."

As for the jungle, it stank. "You couldn't see the monkeys, but you could smell them," he remarked.

Nor were the animals as co-operative in real life as they are with Tarzan in the movies.

"I was making some movies of an elephant when he decided to take after us," he related. "He came right at the back of our jeep and the wheels were spinning. We were stuck. Finally we got underway. The elephant was travelling almost as fast as we were until he finally gave up."

"The Black Rose," Famed Romantic Adventure Story

What looms as the new season's most ambitious picture undertaking will have its Belle Theatre premiere tomorrow with the arrival of "The Black Rose," starring Tyrone Power, Orson Welles and Cecile Aubrey, and featuring Jack Hawkins, depicting in Technicolor the grand scale on which Thomas B. Costain wrote this best-selling romantic adventure story, Twentieth Century Fox filmed "The Black Rose," throughout the world in order to encompass its English, European, African and Asiatic settings. Concentrating its production activities in England and North Africa, the travelling film company under the charge of Director Henry Hathaway, undertook to re-create two thirteenth century worlds, the Occidental and Oriental.

"The Black Rose" tells of the adventures that befall two young Englishmen, a scholar and a bowman (Power and Hawkins), when they go off in search of the unknown wonders of the world. They fall into the service of Bayan of the hundred eyes (Welles), mighty conqueror making a pilgrimage to Kiblai Khan. On the trek heroism is tested by their rescue of a half-English girl known as "The Black Rose" (Miss Aubury) from the Oriental world she would escape.

The fabulous voyage of Power and Hawkins takes them from English medieval castles to desert wasteland and finally to Oriental shrines. From the gateway to the East at Antioch to the point at which they cross into fabled Cathay there is the rugged encounter of the ropewalk, life or death archery contests, viciously played knife games, thundering racing camels and Arabs on horseback. Once across the borders of China, there are the wisdoms of the east, including the compass, the invention of the printing press, and others eventually to be introduced to western life.

In addition to the glittering quartet of top players, represented by Tyrone Power, Orson Welles, Cecile Aubury and Jack Hawkins, the Talbot Jennings screen play is enacted by top-flight British talent.

'COON LOSES FIGHT WITH CIVILIZATION

Apparently not convinced that human civilization is here to stay, this racoon paid for his opinion by becoming a pelt. He rushed at George Ingram, shown, who was firing a boiler in a factory within a stone's throw of the main intersection of St. Catharines, Ont., and according to George was "growling like a tomcat." He killed it with a shovel. He says it is common to see rabbits, racoons, skunks and muskrats within 100 yards of the town's main street.—Central Press Canadian.

WOMAN WENT TO JAIL

Oakville, Sept. 15 (CP) —Mrs. Marie Hamilton explained in court Thursday why she rented three bedrooms one night recently to a family of tourists:

"They couldn't get in anywhere else with their four children."

She was fined $8 for breaking a by-law which says houses in the area in which she lives must not be used for overnight tourist accommodation.

Mrs. Hamilton refused to pay and took three days in jail instead.

She had a pillow and a battery radio as she was led to the cells.

Ma looked at pop finishing his coffee this morning, saying, William, I was so provoked at you this morning I could of left you forever with pleasure.

The pleasure would of been all yours, I assure you, pop said, and ma said, Really, I mean really, I'm not over it yet.

My dear as far as I know, I'm innocent, pop said, and ma said, You'll feel different when you hear the dreem I had about you. I dreemed it was my berthday and I waited all day to see what you would bring me, and you came home with empty hands and a blank expression. In other werds you had completely forgot-you were concerned I mite as well never of been born, she said.

Yee gods, pop said, and ma said, When I woke up I realized I couldn't of had sutch a vivid dreem without some justification, and I remembered all our various anniversaries that you really had forgotten ,and especially one actual berthday of mine when we had guests to dinner to celebrate, and you came home late and unshaven and without having stopped at Shroder and Schulz's to pick up the berthday cake.

My dear, I've behaved like an ingrate and a cad, but I'll make handsome reparations tonite, pop said. I'll have a dreem of my own. I'll dreem I suddinly remembered every berthday you've had in our whole mutual acquaintance, and I came home with a hugh package of silver shoe buckles, gold ear rings, and diamond hat isn't as realistic as yours I'll fortify it rite now by inviting you to a movie after dinner, even if you pick out a dubble feature with both pictures loaded with grief

Oh, how nice, we'll eat erly, ma said, and pop said, It's a woman's werld but I'll continue to vote for it.

And he kissed her goodbye and

Blood on the Stars

By Brett Halliday

Shayne backed up a few feet, put the sedan in second gear and rolled smoothly toward the entrance of the estate, keeping close to the left-hand side of the drive. Directly opposite the stone gate post, he wrenched the steering wheel sharply to the left and there was a loud grating crash as the fender was crumpled against solid stone.

The sedan shivered and rocked to a halt. He calmly put it in reverse and backed out onto the macadam, then went forward and around a corner and on southward past Fifth to South Beach. He parked inconspicuously on a dimly lit side street got out and hurried to the garish boardwalk, the Coney Island of southern Florida.

There, among hotdog stands and shooting galleries he hastily entered a hole-in-the-wall barroom and moved swiftly back behind the row of occupied stools, catching the proprietor's eye as he passed the cash register and jerking his head significantly toward the rear.

The proprietor was a thin, tubercular looking man with pallid cheeks and small eyes sunk far back beneath bulging brows. He nodded his head slightly in response to Shayne's signal rang up a sale and made change then slid off the stool behind the register. He said something to the nearest bartender and strolled to the rear where Shayne awaited him.

"Haven't seen you around much," he began casually.

Shayne seized the man's thin arm and said, "I'm in a jam, Bert A big jam." He paused to lick his lips and went on hoarsely, "Ran into a guy up the street a few minutes ago. I wasn't going too fast but it knocked him ten or fifteen feet.

"Hurt bad?" Bert Haynes pursed his lips and looked concerned.

"I don't know. Afraid so." Shayne shrugged and went on rapidly, "I didn't stop to find out. You know the way I stand with Painter here on the Beach."

Bert nodded. "I know he'd like to hang something on you, all right."

"My crate's parked up the street. Busted fender and headlight. If they pick me up my garage will tell 'em it was all right when I took it out tonight."

"Tough," Bert murmured with commiseration.

Shayne's big hand tightened on his arm. 'I've been out of circulation a long time Bert. There must be some place when I can get a fast job done on that fender without any questions."

Bert Haynes blinked both eyes and tightened his bloodless lips against his teeth. "Try Mickey's Garage. Down near the end of the beach and over a block." He gave Shayne explicit directions. 'I hear around that they know how to keep a buttoned lip on the sort of work they do."

'Hot stuff?"

"I wouldn't know. Wait a minute." He caught Shayne's sleeve as the redhead started away "You're not working?" he asked anxiously. "You wouldn't work me for a tip with a phony come-on?"

Shayne laughed shortly. 'Have I ever pulled a fast one like that?"

"No. You ain't for a fact," he agreed.

"But I am working again," Shayne said quietly. "You can pass that along to anyone who might be interested." He hurried out of the small barroom and back to his damaged car, got in and drove around to a neon sign that read, "Mickey's Garage Gen'l Repairs, Body Work A Specialty."

The wide wooden door leading into the garage was closed. Shayne turned off the street and stopped with his front wheels on the sidewalk. He got out and found a button on one side of the door with a metal plate above it that read, "Night Bell."

He put his fingers on the button and held it down until the door slid open enough to let a man come through. He wore grimy coveralls and a greasy mechanic's cap. He scowled inquiringly at the man who had disturbed him, blinked in the glare of the single headlight of Shayne's car and said "Yeh, Whadya wan?"

"Had an accident." Shayne gestured toward his car. "I need a fast job before the cops pick me up."

"I dunno." The mechanic came through the aperture and went to study the damage to the fender and headlight. He shook his head and said, "Rush jobs come high." "I don't care about the cost." Shayne had his wallet out and began pulling out twenty-dollar bills. "How much to fix me up with a new fender and headlight?"

"Trouble is, we're busy." He furtively considered the bills fanned out in Shayne's hand. "Anybody hurt bad?"

"I'm not paying for a lot of questions," Shayne countered. He added another twenty to the four in his hand, then more slowly, another. He closed the wallet and returned it to his pocket. "It won't be hard to match this new paint job of mine." He smoothed the six bills together folded them lengthwise, and slapped them against his palm.

The mechanic nodded and reached for the money. 'Drive on in. I'll get on yours just as soon as I finish the job I'm on." He stepped back and slid the door all the way open.

Shayne drove inside a big room with half a dozen cars parked around the wall in various stages of dismantlement. He waited just inside while the mechanic closed the door and said, 'This doesn't look too good. If the cops come around...."

The mechanic stepped on the running board beside him and grinned widely, showing a gap in his front upper teeth. 'Never you mind about the law, buddy. Drive straight ahead and turn in between them white lines on the floor."

As Shayne drove in he neared a solid ten-foot panel that rose slowly to admit passage onto a rickety freight elevator.

The mechanic chuckled at the detective's surprise when the panel closed soundlessly behind them when the sedan was on the elevator He stepped from the running board and pressed a button and the elevator descended slowly to the floor below which was brightly lighted and resounded with the thumping sounds of a wooden mallet on sheet metal.

"Pull it off over here," he directed Shayne. 'We'll get to you just as soon as we finish up this other one.

Shayne drove off the elevator onto a clear space in the underground workroom and cut the ignition. The mechanic strolled over to say a few words to his fellow workmen who was pounding out dents in the right front fender that had been removed from a black limousine.

After lighting a cigarette, Shayne got out and strolled over to the workmen to ask casually, "How much longer will you be on that job?"

"Quarter of an hour, maybe. All you got to do is sit tight and you can drive that hack of yours out of here fixed so nobody in a world'll ever know you been in an accident."

Shayne said, 'Fair enough." He walked around the limousine looking at it with casual disinterest, memorized the number of the Dade Co. license plate then returned to the mechanics and said enthusiastically, "That's the kind of crate I'd like to own. I suppose a guy would have to be a millionaire to get one like it these days."

One of them grunted some noncommittal reply and they both went on with their work.

'I always wondered," Shayne went on, "how it felt to sit behind the wheel of a buggy like that."

Neither of the men said anything, but went on with their hammering as though their lives depended upon getting the job finished within a few minutes.

Shayne shrugged and dropped his cigarette to the concrete floor and ground it out with his shoe. He yawned and strolled back to the limousine and leaned inside the front window to study the rich upholstery and the gleaming dashboard.

Glancing at the mechanics he saw that neither of them was paying any attention to him. The windshield of the big car appeared to be faintly opaque. Shayne fel the window glass between his thumb and forefingers. It seemed extra thick and he had a hunch it was intended to be bulletproof.

He unlatched the door and slid onto the soft cushion behind the wheel switched on the dashlight and pretended interest in the speedometer and various other gadgets.

There was a single key in the ignition lock and Shayne pressed a button on the glove compartment to search for some clue as to the car's owner. It came open easily and he was groping inside the small opening when two men appeared on a wooden stairway leading down from a room upstairs.

The men came slowly toward the limousine halted and glared at him. They were both neatly dressed in dark suits and the slimmer one was quite young. He had thick lips and his eyes bulged a trifle giving his face an expression of boyish astonishment. His companion was heavier and some twenty years older. He had a thick black mustache and looked like newspaper photographs of Molotov.

He said, 'What are you doing in there?" and put his right hand inside his coat pocket.

U.N. FORCES MOVE SWIFTLY TOWARD SEOUL

35 Officers, Men Of French Navy Missing After Blast

Mysterious Explosion Sinks Frigate off Atlantic Coast

St. Malo, France, Sept. 16 (AP)—Thirty-five officers and men of the French navy were reported missing after an explosion sank a frigate off the Atlantic coast today.

The ship, a meteorological craft, went down in the Bay of Frennale about 90 miles south of Cherbourg.

Naval rescue vessels and tugs from all along the French coast rushed to the scene.

A merchant marine ministry informant said about 40 of 75 crew members were believed rescued.

The frigate was identified as La Place, the former 1,400-ton U.S. frigate Roanoke.

La Place, adapted for weather observation, was en route from Brest to take part in ceremonies at the opening of a new lock in St. Malo, when the mysterious blast occurred.

Andre Monteil, marine secretary of state, hurried to the scene to take charge of an investigation into the explosion.

Writer Denied Permission to Use Army Phone

Tokyo, Sept. 16 (AP)—Ap correspondent Bill Shinn, who broke the story of the Inchon landing, today was denied permission by the army to use the military telephone connecting Korea and Tokyo.

He had been using the military telephone regularly.

Maj. Buel A. Williamson, a public information officer in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, said Shinn, a native of Korea was not an accredited correspondent in the Far East command.

Williamson said, however, that Shinn would be permitted to continue to work for the AP in Korea and his stories could be telephoned to Tokyo by other AP men on the scene.

Shinn was the only correspondent for a World News Agency present in Pusan when Maj.-Gen. Chung Il Kwon announced that U.S. marines and south Koreans had landed near Inchon.

Chung, commander-in-chief of south Korean forces, released the news to south Korean reporters for Korean-language newspapers in Pusan.

Within 20 minutes, Shinn had reached the only telephone to Tokyo he could use and was dictaking the story to AP headquarters there.

An hour and 19 minutes later Williamson told the AP that general headquarters had ordered the AP to kill the story on the grounds that is was premature.

At that time Chung's report already was in print in Korean-language newspapers in Pusan and had been broadcast by the south Korean radio. News of the landing was general knowledge throughout Korea.

The AP did not kill the story since it already was out and its accuracy had not been questioned.

Knopfel used matches from his pocket and upholstery from a seat in the wrecked car to build the fire. A passing motorist notified firemen who freed Knopfel.

Kenny Reardon Of Canadiens Has Retired

Montreal, Sept. 16 (CP) —Kenny Reardon, rugged defenceman and spark-plug these last few years of Montreal Canadiens, has retired from professional hockey.

Frank Selke, managing director of the National Hockey League Canadiens, made this known today in a story written for the Montreal Herald.

"Reardon's decision is final and irrevocable," Selke wrote.

"In the Stanley Cup series of 1946-47 Kenny aggravated a back injury which had plagued him from boyhood and three specialists advised him at that time he should have an operation and retire from hockey."

Selke told how Reardon was loath to quit, and to get himself into condition the Winnipeg-born ace went into the Labrador bush during the next Summer and came back to continue his starry role with Canadiens.

In the playoffs with Rangers last Spring Kenny dislocated his shoulder and, said Selke, this injury has not responded to treatment.

"Reardon is convinced that he should withdraw from active play while he is still in one piece," wrote Selke.

The Canadiens' chief said he would ask the next Canadiens' directors meeting that Reardon be retained as a goodwill ambassador.

Reardon was born in April 1921 and turned professional with Canadiens in the 1940-41 season. Canadiens have been his only pro team.

Queen's Niece Weds Danish Prince In Ancient Glamis Castle

Glamis, Scotland, Sept. 16 —(Reuters) —Royal Glamis Castle 1,000-year-old ancestral home of the Queen today formed an impressive background for a wedding which linked Britain's Royal family with that of Denmark.

Denmark's Prince Georg and Scottish Viscountess Anson, 32-year-old niece of the Queen, were married in the castle today after days of last-minute confusion.

Last night the wedding plans were in a "complete muddle" and Viscountess Anson had "no idea" what form the ceremony would take.

Today the Queen arrived with Princess Margaret at the castle 10 minutes before the end of the service but did not see the ceremony.

The marriage was conducted in Danish and English, the actual ceremony being performed by Rev. Mogens Buch, pastor from a Danish Seamen's Mission in England.

He was assisted by Canon H. C. Rorison, Scottish Episcopal clergyman. Mr. Rorison was not allowed by his Bishop to be the principle officiating clergyman because the Viscountess had divorced her former husband.

Prince Georg is the son of Prince Axel and Princess Margaretha of Denmark and is a military attache at the Danish Embassy in London.

TRUCKERS TOLD NOT TO CARRY RED LITERATURE

May Cancel Licences Says Quebec Premier

Quebec, Sept, 1—(CP)—Premier Duplessis yesterday reminded Quebec truckers that their licences are issued for "recommendable purposes" and warned them not to carry communist propaganda in their trucks.

The premier also made known during his regular Friday press conference that an inquiry is being conducted into a statement made by Charles-Emile Poliquin, key-figure in the trial of two provincial police detectives and a former policeman, that he trumped up evidence in a "plot to overthrow the union nationale government."

Also announced was the government's decision to introduce legislation at the next session of the legislature to allow the fire-wrecked towns of Rimouski and Cabana to make provincial government-guaranteed loans to help home building.

Some truckers, the premier said, are using their trucks to distribute communist literature in the province and it was the government's intention to stop that.

"We have been given information that communist propagandists, some operating in disguise, have used trucks circulating in the province to diffuse literature and propaganda that is atheistic, anti-patriotic, unwholesome and unfortunate."

The premier said some truckers may have unknowingly carried the propaganda but he was issuing a warning so that no one would be surprised when the government took action.

Takes Rap at Govt.

It was unfortunate, the premier said, that the Canadian postmaster-general "gives so many facilities to communist propagandists". This referred to communist use of the mails, a subject about which Premier Duplessis has often spoken.

"All deplore the activities and propaganda of the communists but not all take steps to prevent them." The province of Quebec was the only one" to take steps to stop this "perfidious" propaganda.

The Poliquin statement to which Premier Duplessis referred was made at St. Hyacinthe Tuesday before Judge Herman Barrette as the self-confessed bank robber came up for sentence.

The premier said he had received a stenographic report of the statement by Poliquin and that it "implicated several important persons."

"There is not the shadow of a doubt," the premier stated, "that complaints against three Montreal policeman were in large part at least the consequences of partisan political manoeuvres on the part of certain so-called Liberals who have the title but not the qualities of good Liberals."

Premier Duplessis said some of the "extraordinary activities of our opponents will be brought to light at the proper time and place."

Place of Paper Advertising In Business World Outlined To Sales and Ad Club

The local Sales and Advertising Club opened its 1950-51 season last night with a dinner at the Hotel Quinte, an address on newspaper advertising, a film and a tour through the Ontario Intelligencer publishing plant. The address to the club was made by Harris B. Holmes, sales representative of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association, and dealt with the place of newspaper advertising in the business world of today, and it's effect on that business.

Mr. Holmes told the gathering that the desire for new things set up by newspeper advertising is a great force in the determination of the standard of living, because it sets in motion an expansion of industry and an enlargement of the retail distributive system.

Film Shown

In addition, Mr. Holmes showed a film titled "The Story That Couldn't be Printed", dealing with the attempts made in 1734 to suppress the printing plant of John Zenger, and the court battle that ensued. "This," Mr. Holmes said, "was for the maintenance of a right that has been cherished in North America for nearly two and a half centuries—the right to print the truth.

"The primary purpose of the newspaper is to print the truth of events at home and abroad," Mr. Holmes said. "It was not surprising then, considering the quick acceptance of the daily newspaper, that it should be discovered it was also a useful medium to spread news of good and services for sale."

Interest in advertising has always been at a high level, Mr. Holmes said, and today, "readership studies have shown that the percentage readership of advertising has, in some instances, proved as high as or higher than readership of news stories."

Carry 50 Per Cent

Mr. Holmes told Sales and Ad members that daily newspapers in Canada carry more than 50 per cent of all national advertising placed in publications, and that of the total money spent by advertisers in publications of all types, daily newspapers received "practically 75 per cent of the total." Their nearest competitor, he said, reached only 6.7 per cent.

Advertising success is dependent on many factors, Mr. Holmes said, but "the one thing that attracts most readers is the heading." The featuring of price of the articles advertised is also of prime consideration, he said.

The newspaper, Mr. Holmes continued, is not primarily an advertising medium, but in that fact lies its greatest strength as a medium for advertising. "It is edited primarily as a means of supplying the people with news and information that time has shown is necessary to their well-being."

Not Newfangled Idea

Advertising is not a "newfangled idea," the speaker said. "The first advertising appeared in a newspaper on this continent on May 8, 1704." In terms of results produced, advertising has proved so profitable that many newspapers found advertisements occupying a considerable portion of their total numebr of columns each week. This demand for space has been directly responsible for the growth in size of daily newspapers from the one sheet of old to the larger publications of today, Mr. Holmes said.

"The daily newspaper," he said, "had brought together an audience as interested in the advertising messages as in the editorial content, and that having caught the attention of a cross section of people, it can provide an invaluable service for the advertiser, if the product or service is right."

Mr. Holmes was introduced to the members and guests by Jack Bond, and a vote of thanks was moved by Malcolm Robb. President Bill Stovin presided over the meeting.

Premier Leslie Frost Will Officially Open Prince Charles School on October 17th

Ontario Premier Leslie Frost will officiate at the official opening of the new Prince Charles public school on the West Hill, it was noted Friday evening at the September Board meeting when plans for the opening program were discussed by the members.

The official opening of the school will be held on the afternoon of October 17th., with Board of Education members, civic officials and school children scheduled to take part in the program. A special committee of board members was set up to finalize arrangements.

A committee was named to investigate the feasibility of erecting a flagpole at the new school, they to make a decision whether a pole on the grounds or placed atop the school would be most suitable.

The board accepted the tender of the Quinte Roofing Co. for placing of a new roof covering on the auditorium at the Queen Mary School at a price of $371. No action was taken on a proposal to sod the slopes at the newly graded collegiate campus. Suggested cost of work was roughly $500 which members decided to lay over until next year.

Investigate Lighting

The board will investigate the best type of artificial lighting for use in school rooms with the view of re-wiring the Queen Alexandra School. The general opinion was that indirect incandescent lighting was best but its use was determined on the height of the ceilings. There was some objection to fluorescent lighting because of glare, it was stated.

Mr. J. E. Bateman, principal of Prince Charles School reported that a Detroit eye specialist after seeing the school described the indirect lighting there as the best he had seen in school classrooms.

Approval was given for the purchase of two music record albums for the schools music teacher at a cost of $100, and also for the sale of the old playground building situated on the Queen Mary School grounds. The building was stated to be in bad state of disrepair.

Approval was also given for a film strip slide projector and tape recorder for use with the newly organized visual aid teaching department at a total cost of $250.

Request Granted

Request of Sidney township for admission of 18 pupils to King George and Queen Mary schools, and of Thurlow township for admission of 65 pupils to the same schools was granted. These pupils are already attending city schools, the board to receive the customary non-resident fees.

The following teachers were appointed to the temporary staff of the public schools. Mrs. Ruth Holmboe, Mrs. Norma Powell and Mrs. Ann Stewart.

New to the teaching staff are: Miss Marjorie Greer from Peterborough Normal School to King George School, Mr. William Burgoyne from Peterborough Normal School to King George School, Mrs. Ann Stewart from Longbranch Public School to King George School, Mr. J. F. Dier from East York Public Schools to Queen Alexandra School, Mrs. Norma Powell from S.S. No. 1 Haldimand to Queen Alexandra School, Mrs. Wanda Sine from Foxboro Public school to Queen Alexandra School, Miss Joyce Benway from Deseronto Public School to Queen Mary School, Miss Ruth Holmbbe from Toronto Public Schools to Queen Mary School, Miss Marilyn Kerr from Peterborough Normal School to Queen Victoria School, Mr. John Carswell from S.S. No. 20 Thurlow to Queen Victoria School.

OLD PROBLEMS STILL DOG U.N. SECURITY COUNCIL

500th Meeting Held In N.Y. This Week

Lake Success, N.Y., Sept. 16 (AP)— The United Nations Security Council, nearest thing to world government the globe has ever seen, held its 500th. meeting this week but still has 21 long-standing major problems on its docket.

Right now it has the Korean conflict on the shelf, temporarily disposed of but handy to pull down for new action if necessary. Its most immediate problems are communist China's charges that United States planes have strafed it sterritory and that U. S. policy on Formosa is aggression.

But the council has never completed action on a whole string of problems that have made headlines since 1946. Problem No. 1 on the old docket is Iran's charge that Russia was guilty of aggression against her Azerbaidjan border area.

The council, with the veto power granted to its five permanent members — the U. S., Britain, France, Russia and China — held its first meeting in London in January, 1946.

Since then the world's political crises have passed in review over the desks of the five permanent powers and six elected smaller nations which have included at different times Canada, Argentina, Brazil, Australia, Syria, The Netherlands, Belgium, Colombia, Mexico, the Ukraine and Poland — and now India, Ecuador, Cuba, Norway, Yugoslavia and Egypt. Canada ended a two-year council term last January.

Most of the problems are dormant or deadlocked but never completely disposed of. All bear the imprint of the east-west cold war, with Russia usually far outnumbered in voting but blocking action with either threatened or actual vetoes.

Hopelessly Deadlocked

Highest in the list and most hopelessly deadlocked is the question of international control of atomic armaments. Linked with it are such questions as reduction of armaments and providing information about the size of each nation's armed forces; establishing a U. N. armed field security force; the dispute between the Arab League and Israel over Palestine, still halted under a truce; the question of appointing a governor for Trieste.

The Iranian question provided what is still one of the most dramatic moments in Security Council history when Andrei A. Gromyko, now Soviety deputy foreign minister, then chief Soviet delegate, staged the first Russian walkout.

Russians Walk Out

Gromyko's successor, Jakob A. Malik, walked out of the council last January 10 and 13, in protest over the council's refusal to throw out the Nationalist Chinese delegate.

He announced July 28 he would be back the next day to take over the presidency of the council for Russia's turn under the alphabetical rotation system.

MacArthur Wears Broad Grin, Good Sign of Outlook in Korea

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

So a big offensive by United Nations forces in Korea finally is under way, with Gen. MacArthur himself in the field directing operations.

Co-ordinated landings by United States marines and infantry on the west coast, and by south Korean marines on the east coast, got away to a good start. How good is indicated by the fact that the commander-in-chief wore a broad grin.

From the theatre of war comes word that this may be the decisive action of the conflict. The landings are far to the north, behind the invaders' fighting front. This means that the north Korean forces are in a mighty vise whose jaws are closing to crush them.

That's the way things stand at this writing. Whether the enemy will be smashed, and whether this is indeed the climactic action of the Korean conflict still remains to be answered.

I think we distant watchers should be pleased at the initial successes but should keep our fingers crossed. If this proves to be the decisive campaign it will mean that the north Korean fighting machine has been smashed but there may be some "ifs" to be dealt with before that is accomplished.

If it were certain that the north Koreans would be left to their own devices by their Russian and Chinese communist friends, then one could breathe easier. I think that is the meat of the nut.

Capture Airfield 12 Miles East of Inchon Beachhead

Gains up to Three Miles Made in Taegu Front

Tokyo, Sept. 16 — (AP) — Tank-led United States marines today captured Kimpo Airfield, 12 miles northeast of the new Inchon beachhead and 15 miles northwest of Seoul — the communist-held former Korean Republic capital.

This swift drive inland from the beachhead established Friday was made as a big Allied offensive kicked off all along the 120-mile perimeter on the old beachhead in Southeast Korea.

It was Gen. Douglas MacArthur's grand-scale gamble to end the war soon.

(Reuters News Agency reported that U. N. troops pushed a spearhead into the outskirts of Seoul. The agency attributed the report to the South Korean General Staff.)

A U. S. Air Force spokesman said the Marines seized the Kimpo airfield against relatively light resistance. He said the field was secure and soon may be in operation.

The leathernecks swiftly secured their beachhead after 262 allied ships arrived off the Yellow Sea port with some 40,000 troops. At daybreak Saturday they began fanning out toward the red-held capital of Seoul, 23 miles eastward.

Troops and equipment poured ashore. Inchon's port installations were put into operation quickly, despite the thunderous naval and air bombardment preceding the landings.

Meanwhile, on the old allied beachhead, the Eighth Army's big push had gained from one to three miles on a 70-mile front — from the Taegu sector to the South Korea coast.

(The Reuters report said front-line dispatches placed U. N. troops little more than a mile from the centre of Seoul.

(The report said front-line dispatches placed U.N. troops just over a mile from the city centre.

(The report also said Kimpo, an airfield and town 10 miles from Seoul, had been taken, and that U.N. fighter planes already were operational from there.

Behind the advance marine units were some 40,000 men. Offshore was the liberation fleet of 262 ships—including vessels of many nations.

Some 165 miles to the southeast allied troops mounted an offensive on the central and southern sectors of the 125-mile United Nations beachhead perimeter—seeking a major breakthrough. A booming artillery barrage kicked off the push.

Pinchers Being Applied

Thus, the lengthening arms of a giant nutcracker were being applied to the North Koreans — a bold strategy planned by Gen. Douglas MacArthur July 12. This was less than three weeks after the tank-led reds charged southward across parallel 38—and at a time when the North Koreans were pulverizing U.S. troops along the Kum river.

MacArthur said the big pincer movement would cause the Korean red army to "disintegrate" sooner or later. MacArthur obviously gambled that red China or Russia would not fight.

Two Are Killed, Five Injured Near Pembroke

Pembroke, Sept. 16. (CP)—Two persons were killed and five others injured, two of them critically, in a highway accident east of here Friday.

Dead are: Mrs. R. A. Elliott, 58, of Copper Cliff, and Lawrence Lacroix, 2, of Pembroke, who died in hospital shortly after the accident.

R. A. Elliott, 61, husband of the dead woman, is in hospital with multiple injuries and his condition is described as "very serious." In similar condition is Elmer Kidd, 15, of Pembroke, with two broken legs, concussion and severe shock.

Also in hospital are Mervin Condie, 22, of Pembroke, suffering shock, concussion, lacerations, fractured ribs and a possible fractured leg. Miss Doreen Sheer and Mrs. Renaud Lacroix, also of Pembroke, are in hospital, but their condition is not described as serious.

It was reported the car driven by Condie crashed into a car driven by Mr. Elliott.

TWICE WAR WIDOW

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 16. (AP)—Mrs. Donald B. Atherton is a war widow for the second time. She was notified that her husband, Sgt. Donald B. Atherton, died of wounds in Korea. Her first husband, PFC. Joe T. Winter, was killed in the battle of the Bulge in the Second World War.

Harris B. Holmes, sales representative for the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association, who was in Belleville last night to speak to the Sales and Advertising Club, may not think much of the city this morning. ONTARIO WELFARE DEPT. OFFICIALS PAY CITY VISIT

In the city Thursday and Friday on an informal visit, members of the Ontario Department of Welfare met Hastings County members of the legislature and discussed matters pertaining to old age pensions and mothers' allowances.

Here were Mr. J. S. Band, executive assistant to the Minister of Public Welfare and Mr. S. Asbury, chairman of the Old Age Pensions Commission.

While here the government officials were the guests of Elmer Sandercock, MLA, Hastings West and Roscoe Robson, Hastings East.

TRAPPERS' LICENCES TO BE ISSUED BY GAME WARDENS

Resident trappers' licences, formerly issued by local issuers, will in future only by issued by conservation officers of the Department of Lands and Forests, according to a bulletin issued by the department.

Depending on the location of the trapping area, the trapper will apply to the local officer, pay his fee and obtain a licence. Should the area extend into an adjoining overseer's patrol, the trapper will also obtain permission from the second officer, before the licence is effective.

Conservation officers of the Bay of Quinte district held a special meeting at which the new trapping regulations were discussed. Mr. John Grew, Wildlife Division, Toronto, presided.

Monday night's session will be used to make arrangements for the band, and to form a junior corps. Any boys between the ages of 12 and 18 who are interested in the Sea Cadets are asked to report to R. C. S. C. C. "Quinte" on South Front Street, Sunday night.

Fruit, Vegetables In Large Volume On City Market

Tomatoes were still in quantity on the farmers' market this morning, but vendors said that the weather wouldn't have to get much colder before frost would nip them. Last night was close to the margin, but the cold failed to touch the plants. One vendor said that about half of the crop is still green in the field, and some anxiety is being felt for the plants.

On the rest of the market, peaches were drawing the crowds. Near the police station, two men were working on top of a truck filled with peaches and plums, and they were handing the peaches out just as fast as people shoved the money into their hands. The price was 90c per basket, or 85c if you turned in a six quart basket.

Watermelons and canteloupes were in good quantity, too, with prices on the latter ranging from 10c to 35c, and the average watermelon price being 40c. Size determined price in most cases. Pears, in three varieties: Clapp's, Bartletts and Flemish Beauties — were moving in an 80c to 90c scale for a six quart basket.

McIntosh apples were being offered for 65c per basket, $1.00 for 11 quarts, and $2.50 for a hamper. Wealthies were 60c for six quarts and 80c per peck.

On the vegetable market, prices remained much the same. Corn was 30c and 35c per dozen, cabbage was 10c to 20c, tomatoes were 35c per basket, squash was 10c and 15c, potatoes were 50c per basket, onions, carrots and beets were 10c per bunch, or three for 25c, and green peppers were 5c each.

Eggs were 60c to 63c per dozen for 'A' large, with other prices corresponding.

Radio Firm Shows Models To Many Dealers

The Queen's Hotel took on a different look yesterday afternoon and last night, as Stromberg Carlson moved in with a showing of their new products. The one that attracted the most attention was the television set, and a few local men had trouble tearing themselves away from the inner lounge to go home to dinner.

The display was organized by the company primarily to acquaint its dealers with new products, and to instruct them in the sale and repair of the machines. The caravan, which was in Belleville started out from Montreal, and was going on to London and Windsor, then back to Toronto, from here. Another troupe is covering the Maritimes, and the west will be covered from the Toronto office.

The men who are in charge of the equipment said yesterday that their lot was similar to that of people in "show business." They set the machines up and tear them down each day and night before they move on. So far this week, they have had nothing but rain in which to drive to their next stops.

Ten Models Displayed

In all, ten models were on display, some of which will be left with dealers here. Men were expected from a 40-mile radius to attend the show.

"The television model shown is a handmade outfit," the engineer in charge, Sam Carew, said. Mr. Carew was called down from Toronto yesterday morning to make adjustments to the set when reception proved to be poor. A former radar and radio man with the Air Force, he has been wrapped up in television for the past five years.

Men in charge of the exhibit, along with Mr. Carew, were B. R. Billesdon, advertising manager J. A. Dove, sales manager, and S. D. Buchanan, the eastern Ontario sales representative.

Last night, fight fans crowded into the room to see Paddy Young and Ernie Durando waltz their way through ten rounds at Madison Square Garden. After that, old movies of famous fights were shown, and the Young-Durando go was pretty well outclassed by Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy, to say the least.

25 to 40 More Workers for West Harvests Sought

A further appeal for additional experienced farm workers from the Bay of Quinte district to assist with the Western wheat crop was made today by H. H. Reed, manager of the local employment office. An additional 25 to 40 workers from the Belleville area could be used, it was stated.

Already 48 workers from this district have been sent to the wheat fields, but farmers in Manitoba and Saskatchewan are still in need of additional assistance.

Train fare for workers going West is $15 to Winnipeg and $11.50 return from that point. Train fare west of Winnipeg is provided at no cost to the worker. Experienced workers interested in going West are asked to get in touch with Mr. Reed at the employment office.

Who Owns Poison Ivy?

Much to the annoyance of school children in the immediate district, the Belleville Board of Education and the city public works department are disclaiming ownership of a certain patch of poison ivy on the West Hill.

The patch of poison ivy is in a corner of what appears to be the Prince Charles public school grounds, but the moot question is whether the troublesome ivy is on city property or on that of the Board of Education. And while minds are being made up the children continue to get into the ivy.

Principal of the school, J. E. Bateman told members of the Board Friday evening that he believed the ivy was on an old road allowance extending north from Holloway Street to Yeomans and therefore was the responsibility of the city. He reported the city engineering department however, as saying no such road allowance existed and the ivy was the Board's baby.

In the meantime at least six children have gotten into the ivy with consequent irritation.

A suggestion that the ivy was the responsibility of the weed inspector got nowhere, it being doubted whether such a matter came even under his jurisdiction.

No definite plan of action was arrived at outside of the firm feeling that the ivy should not be there.

Sightless People Benefit Through Institute Work

Where are the blind beggars whom we saw on the streets of our town and cities a few short decades ago, appealing for our pity and the pittance we carelessly tossed them? We still have the blind in our midst, but they are no longer begging on the streets. Thanks to the efforts of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, it is no longer necessary for them to beg, sell shoe laces and pencils on the sidewalks, or play a squeaky violin for a meagre livelihood. The C.N.I.B. and its many sighted friends spearheaded the campaign more than ten years ago to establish the pension for the blind, and this was brought in as an amendment to the Old Age Pensions Act. With the pension came a minimum economic security for hundreds of sightless folk who formerly had to beg or live upon the bounty of their relatives.

A new Life

But the Institute for the Blind did not stop there. Because of its activities, the lives of the blind of Canada are rich in new experiences, and stirred by new accomplishments, blind home teachers give instruction in handicrafts, the reading of embossed type, and the use of the typewriter, thus making it possible for those without sight to spend their time profitably, augment their meagre income, continue to enjoy the world of books, and correspond with their sighted friends. For those able to work and capable of useful employment, Institute employment officers have found jobs in general industry or in shelter work-shops, such as the C.N.I.B. broom factory or dress and apron shop. More than 1,700 blind people are today working and making a useful and worthwhile contribution to life and to their communities.

It is recognized that the radio is a boon to the person without sight, forced to spend many long weary hours at home. Because of this the Institute for the Blind provides radio sets on loan, batteries, and repairs for those who could not otherwise afford these. Free licences are given to all blind persons registered with the C.N.I.B.

Some elderly blind folk are unable to learn to read braille, and so the world of books would remain closed to them, were it not for the talking book service of the Institute, which provides books on phonograph records and the proper type of machine to play these records. There are a number of these talking book machines in use in this county.

Appeal Now On

To make possible these and many other specialized services for the blind, The Canadian National Institute for the Blind appeals each year to its sighted friends for the funds required. The appeal is sponsored by the Institute's Hastings County Advisory Board and Trenton Welfare Committee, and is county-wide in scope. The officers and members of this Board and Committee are public spirited citizens who voluntarily give of their time that something positive may be done for the 120 registered blind persons of Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County.

The campaign for this year has as usual been set for the month of September. There will be a tag day in Belleville on September 23rd of which Mrs. H. Rollins is convener. The Trenton tag day has been set for Sept. 30, with Miss Helen Bensley as convener. Other tag days and their conveners are as follows:

Bancroft, W. R. Robinson, Deseronto, E. E. Maybee; Frankford, J. A. Warren; Madoc, Mrs. I. V. Hulin; Marmora, Mrs. F. R. Wells; Stirling, Mrs. F. Houchin; Tweed, S. R. Curry; Coe Hill, W. N. Gilroy.

This is your opportunity to express your gratitude for good sight. Be as generous as you can during the campaign.

Y's Men Club Meets First Time For Fall Term

The Y's Men's Club got started on another year of activity under the presidency of Gerry Hyde when members gathered for the first meeting of the fall season at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night. A number of the members became benedicts since the spring recess including the president himself and became the focus of much attention during the meeting.

Rev. E. F. Church, interim minister of Bridge Street Church, gave a vivid description of the beauty points of interest and advantages of British Columbia where much of his ministry was spent. These, he stated, assured a great development for Canada's western province in the future.

He related interesting experiences of his first visit to Belleville at the turn of the century, under trying circumstances, some of the situations in which he found himself guided him into the ministry in which he has served until his recent retirement.

He assured the club that he had many and happy times in Y's Men's Clubs and the Y.M.C.A. during this time and recognized the value of the work and service within the reach of every Y's Man.

Mr. Church was introduced by Y's Man Linton Reid and thanked by Y's Man Oscar Wagar. The appointment of Les. Reid and Robbie Clarke to the directors was announced.

The support of the club to the extent of $250 for the equipment of the Belleville Playgrounds during the past summer was reported as among the projects of the club. Overseas work in assisting European Y's Men's Clubs was also reported.

No, they're not hieroglyphics : : : they're part of the prescription your doctor gave you the other day.

To you, that abbreviated Latin legend meant nothing, but to your pharmacist it said, "Mix the ingredients of this prescription in the form of an emulsion, and label the bottle 'One teaspoonful three times a day after meals'."

Your physician often uses Latin in writing prescriptions, and for two reasons. First, Latin is the universal language of medical science, and a prescription written in any part of the world, by a physician of any nationality, can be filled by any pharmacist. Second, Latin is a "dead" language, and, therefore, the exact meanings of words are not subject to variation from year to year as are words in the modern languages.

Many drugs that have similar names, have very different actions. Take, for example, mercurous chloride and mercuric chloride . . . one is calomel, a laxative; the other is bichloride of mercury, a violent poison. Then there are phenobarbital and pentobarbital, sodium salicylate and sodium silicate, acetanilid and acetone, aconite and aconitine, and a multitude of other drug names equally confusing to you.

They are not confusing to your pharmacist, however. His familiarity with medical, chemical, and pharmaceutical terms is but a part of his skill as a pharmacist . . . a skill developed through years of college training and experience in compounding prescriptions and rendering other necessary public health services.—Reprinted from a copyrighted advertisement published by Parke, Davis & Company.

Two Brothers Injured in Crash Near Madoc

Two O'Grady brothers, James, age 72, of Kirkland Lake, and John, Belleville district market gardener, were injured Friday afternoon when their light panel truck crashed into a coal truck at the north entrance to the Moira Lake bridge, south of Madoc.

James O'Grady suffered a broken nose, possible fractured skull and eye injury as he was thrown against the windshield and dash, while his brother who was driving, sustained a cut forehead and shock. Both were taken to Belleville General Hospital.

The accident occurred as the O'Grady brothers, southbound, apparently failed to see the northbound coal truck, owned by the Madoc Co-Operative, which was coming off the bridge. Driver of the Co-Operative truck, Donald Ash, of Madoc, was not injured.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable T. Lummis of Madoc.

Band Festival Will Take Place At Arena

The second annual band festival to be held in the city will take place at the Arena, October 2. The festival will be preceded by a parade, and at the arena each band will stage a marching display.

Featured outfits will be the R.C.A.F. Central Command Band from Ottawa, regarded as Canada's outstanding service band, under the direction of Bandmaster Flight Lieutenant Edward Kirkwood, and the R.C.A.F. Trumpet Band from Trenton. Each of the bands will appear by the permission of their commanding officers.

Last year's effort was regarded by the public as an outstanding spectacle, and plans for this year's event mark it as the same type of show. A number of other bands, both local and from the surrounding areas, will also participate.

Master of ceremonies for the affair will be Prof. C. F. Thiele, dean of the bandmasters of Canada. Prof. Thiele is also bandmaster of the famous Waterloo band which for two years has been one of the main attractions at the bandshell of the Canadian National Exhibition.

The R. C. A. F. Trumpet Band, Trenton, is internationally known for the awards it has received all over the country. This year, it took the highest honors at the Waterloo Festival, the largest such gathering in North America.

(3RD. INSTALMENT)

The Revolution had stripped them of all this and in 1785 the Quinte settlers were still dependent on the government for everything needed to start their new life. The authorities at Quebec were doing their best to supply their needs, but difficulties of transportation enhanced the ordinary slowness of government departments and everything was in short supply. In the opinion of the settlers, there were not enough tools, seed or cattle. (The allowance was one cow to every two families.) By the autumn of 1784 some settlers were busy planting wheat and building houses and it was becoming evident, as settlement spread up the bay, that the mills and merchants of Cataraqui would of be less use to the inhabitants of the upper townships. The prevailing winds made it easier to transport timber and goods to Prescott than to the Quinte settlements. Ross was pushing the building of the Mill Creek sawmill, and in 1785 work was begun on mills on the Napanee, but there were evidently openings for enterprising men with a little capital near the bottom of the Bay, if any such could be found.

In allotting the first five townships an attempt had been made to settle a company with its officers in each township, so that old neighbors would be near each other. The other townships, however, were settled in a more haphazard fashion, and since the demand for lots in the remote townships was less keen, the restrictions on the granting of 'front' lots were relaxed. A number of officers and non-commissioned officers, who had already drawn from lots elsewhere, were allowed to take part of their military lands in the first two concessions of Sidney and Thurlow (Eighth and Ninth Townships), and in some cases to take up two contiguous lots in the first concession.

• •

In 1784 a group of four of these reduced officers settled on the lands on each side of the Moira, where the City of Belleville now stands. Lot 1 in both first and and second concessions was granted to John Chisholm. Lot 2 in both concessions to David Vanderheyden, who had been a lieutenant in the Indian Department, and Lot 3 in the first concession to Alexander Chisholm, who had been a sutler with Burgoyne's army and claimed the rank of reduced captain on the strength of later raised a company of "bateau-men" for service on the St. Lawrence.

Petitions of Alexander Chisholm 1788 (Ontario Archives Report 1923, p. 42) and 1797 (Ontario Hist. Soc. Vol. XXVI p. 126). Chisholm is trying to establish his title to the lands of a "reduced captain". In the first he says that he and several others were "seated" in the ninth township (Thurlow) before the survey of 1787. In the second he describes himself as "of Thurlow" and says he "has been settled thereon (on his lands) since the year 1784." These petitions, with Kotte's Journal quoted later, fix the date of the settlement as "Singleton's River" several years before that given in the printed histories. Chisholm was finally allowed a grant as a lieutenant, but was refused the rank of captain. He continued to live in Thurlow, and became a major in the militia. Lot 4 on the east bank of the river was reserved for the Mississaugas, so that Captain George Singleton, the leading member of this little settlement, took lots 5 and 6 as part of his military grant. (Captain George Singleton does not appear to have been granted his full proportion of lands during his lifetime, but his heirs received large grants in Sidney as the balance of his military lands.)

George Singleton has some claim to be regarded as the founder of Belleville. Had he been more fortunate he might have played much the same part in the history of the town as Captain Meyers afterwards did. Like Meyers, Singleton gave his name to the river for a time and his house seems at once to have become a landmark for travellers. It was from "Captain Singleton's on the River Saganashkokan" that Lieutenant Kotte's party set out on July 27th., 1785, to explore the Trent route to Lake Huron. (Ont. Hist. Soc. XXVI p. 407). The quotation from Kotte's journal is embodied in a long quotation from a later report by John Collins concerning a salt spring on Rice Lake. No year is given for the Journal but the day of the week (Wednesday, July 27th.) fixes the year as 1785. See also Robinson-Toronto under the French Regime—p. 197, for a reference to Kotte's expedition of 1785.)

• •

Singleton was a native of Ireland and had been a merchant in New York Province before the Revolution. He had held no land in New York and no claim of his for compensation appears in the records of the Commissioners of Claims sitting in America. However, he seems to have had some command of cash and to have been less interested than most of his fellow Loyalists in acquiring a large landed estate. It was the possibilities of establishing a trading post that attracted him to the mouth of the Moira. He was evidently a capable, intelligent and humane man, who had the knack of getting on with the Indians. (Singleton had served in The place of his birth and the fact that he held no land in the Colonies are given in a muster roll of this regiment. He had commanded the very small force of white troops who went with Brant on the last raid from Oswego in 1783. Singleton was successful in keeping the Indians under control and his report of the raid indicates the characteristics mentioned above. It also shows that he was a man of some education. Ont. Hist. Soc. Transactions and Papers.)

No doubt he was also influenced in choosing the location by the possibility of building mills at the northern end of his land, but mill sites at that time were reserved for the government. Singleton took his brother-in-law, Lieutenant Isaac Ferguson, into partnership with him and Ferguson appears to have moved from Fredericksburgh Township, where he had drawn land, and settled at the mouth of the Moira with his wife and family. (There can be little doubt that the "Lieut. Ferguson" of Canniff's account is Lieutenant Isaac Ferguson. He was no nearer relation of John Ferguson, the trader in Sidney and partner of Col. Bell, from whose letters Canniff quotes extensively. His claim for compensation is dated January 11th., 1788, Richard Ferguson, a brother, had half-pay as an ensign and had been associated with J. Walden Meyers. Wm. Canniff: "History of settlement in Upper Canada"—1869.) Ferguson's parents, brothers and sisters, had surrendered their claims for compensation to him, so by 1788 he could command £100 or so to put into the partnership, as well as his half-pay as lieutenant.

These claims for compensation were almost the only source of capital available to the Loyalists, except for the few who had been able to save a little out of the wreck by one means or another or who had honest debtors who paid up after the peace. (In some cases conveyances to friends in trust or marriage, settlements were used to protect part of the property. In some districts the authorities were lenient and allowed Loyalists to sell half their estates or to retain half by surrendering the rest, or neglected to enforce the confiscatory decrees. The British, by holding the western forts in pawn, were able to enforce in part the treaty clause with regard to payment of debts. But only a few of the early Loyalists in Upper Canada benefited by these means.) The only source of cash incomes was the half-pay of the officers. Thus it was the reduced officers with compensation claims who were behind almost every private effort to start trade or industry in the first settlements.

•

The venture at Singleton's River may have prospered for two or three years, though the settlers had little to spend on luxuries. Even such staples as flour, salt, tea and gunpowder sold at prohibitory prices, and, lacking time and ammunition to hunt, the settlers had little to barter. The Indians must have been the chief support of the post. In 1788. (There is some disagreement as to the date of "starving year" in Loyalist memoirs but contemporary references point to 1788 as the year of drought and 1788-1789 as the "hungry time") came unexpected tragedy. That Summer drought set in early and continued for months. Even allowing for exaggeration in the recollections of old people, there seems to have been no such disastrous season in the history of the province; it surpassed even that of 1949. The issue rations had just been discontinued, and since the situation had developed slowly the government was not prepared for the desperate straits to which the inhabitants of Upper Canada were reduced by the opening of 1789. Since all crops had failed there was hardly enough for the next year's seed. Cattle and sheep were scarce in the settlements in any case, many died, though hogs seem sometimes to have survived, and the chief source of meat was the deer. Extensive forest fires and lack of ammunition cut off this source of food from most settlers, and an unusually cold Winter sealed the lakes and rivers with such thick ice that fishing was made so difficult as to be nearly impossible. Springs, swamps and streams dried up, and when the luckless settlers were forced to take their precious seed grain to the mills there was difficulty getting it ground. By midsummer people were eating any sort of food they could get, and some died from eating poisonous roots, some starved, and many of the old and the very young died later from the effects of undernourishment and unsuitable food. The authorities did what they could. At Niagara and Kingston the commanders on their own responsibility put the garrisons on shortest possible rations and issued the "King's Stores" to the worst sufferers. Supplies were shipped in from Lower Canada and free importation was allowed from the United States, rather too late to help the situation at its worst.

• •

The settlement of the Bay of Quinte suffered even more than the rest. Here there were no "King's Storehouses" or merchants with large stocks and large resources, and the Upper Bay lay out of the way of shipping. Some merchants shamelessly exploited the situation and men parted with everything they had to obtain a little flour or a few potatoes. Some traders grumbled, but gave credit as far as their stocks went, and sometimes ruined themselves in the process. There is evidence that something of the kind happened to the firm of Singleton and Ferguson. Singleton seems to have been pressed for money in 1788, for he appears to have mortgaged Lot 5, Concession 1, of Thurlow to Robert Hamilton. (This mortgage is still extant in the Registry office at Belleville. It is for Lot 5, Concession 1, "Township not named". The year date has been read as 1780, but since it is not likely that Singleton owned any land in 8, Robert Hamilton and Richard Cartwright, Junior, had had a trading post on Carleton Island which was moved to Kingston in 1783. Hamilton later lived at Niagara), the merchant, and certainly sold it to John Taylor in 1789. In that year the partners set out on journey to Kingston to obtain supplies, stopping to visit their relations in Fredricksburgh. (Singleton may have had property at Fredericksburgh by this time, acquired by purchase or, as his wife's dowry. He is called "of Fredericksburgh" in the first commission of the Peace — appointing justices for the Macklenburg District (24th. July, 1788). Since no justice was appointed for Thurlow, Singleton may have been chosen because of his interest in that township.) Here Singleton and his servant, Johnson, fell ill and died. Ferguson completed the trip to Kingston and returned with the precious flour, but he also died suddenly and was the first man buried in "Taylor burying ground" on the site of Belleville. (The trip took place late in the year. Canniff suggests that Ferguson's death was due to exhaustion after the return journey. It is quite possible that both the partners and their servant were victims of the starving year. The three widows were left alone at Singleton's River, but not quite so lonely as Canniff indicates, since there were neighbors nearby. Canniff is mistaken as to Singleton's name, his settlement in Ernestown and the date of his settlement in Thurlow.)

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

BIRDS IN YOUR BACK YARD

"Sparrows are the only birds that ever come into our backyard," is too common a remark of the city dweller. Those who are bird conscious can see many varieties without leaving their town homes. Quite a few nest within hearing of heavy traffic every summer, there are always permanent residents that thrill us on Wintry days, and many transients appear in migration season.

Long billed, bob tailed, dark birds are now, in some localities, outnumbering English Sparrows. Many of these Starlings occupy crannies under our eaves all Winter. Brown Creepers, White-breasted Nuthatches, Hairy and Downy Woodpeckers may climb our tree trunks any month in the year, but we are more liable to see them once the leaves have fallen. Juncos, dressed in grey, with white on each side of their tails, should be looked for on the ground. They often stay around throughout Winter, as do also some Purple Finches and Goldfinches.

One cold January day a big Barred Owl sat sleeping on a branch of an elm tree within three yards of one of our bedroom windows. Automobiles passed honking their horns, doors of delivery vans banged, we took its photograph, but nothing disturbed its slumbers until after dusk. And each year a flock of gorgeous, yellow and black Evening Grosbeaks, gypsies of Birdland, pay us a visit in February or March. For ten days or so they take their noon meal just outside the window of the dining-room where we are having ours; but their fare is rather different. The great attraction is a Manitoba maple from which the dry seed pods are hanging.

Beginning in mid-March we see migrants. It is not unusual for a Crow to linger on from Autumn until Spring, but now we hear a great "cawing" at dawn, and presently the elm is sprinkled with large, black birds. Robins try to find a patch of grass on the snow-covered lawn. In April we watch for strutting Grackles, with their pale yellow eyes and fine tails. Hermit Thrushes, Phoebes, several kinds of Warblers, Sapsuckers, various Vireos, Crested Flycatchers, Rose-breasted Grosbeaks, and Catbirds come and go.

But the Yellow Warbler that loves our sumachs, Chimney Swifts and Tree Swallows that fly past our windows, stay all Summer; and a pair of Nighthawks have their home on the roof of the next door verandah.

Urges Budget For Education On Liquor, Drugs

Toronto, Sept. 15— (CP)—The Women's Christian Temperance Union, Thursday, urged an Ontario government budget appropriation for alcohol and narcotic education and opposed increases in liquor-sale outlets.

The meeting also:

1. Asked the government to stop granting liquor permits for banquets.
2. Urged strict enforcement of laws respecting sale of liquor to minors.
3. Asked a tightening of drunk-driving laws, with results of blood or breath tests to be made available in court.
4. Commended publications which deal editorially with the alcohol problem and those which refuse liquor advertising.
5. Sought a ban on motion picture emphasizing sex, drinking and crimes of violence.

MODERN EXPLORATION

Man is everlastingly inquisitive. For that the race can thank the scientists for endless discoveries which have extended the life span and which may yet bring what to people of today would appear as miracles. Recently in the Milwaukee Journal there appeared an article by Marvin H. Creagor in which it was stated that "a third of the earth still is unexplored." The article says that the truth is that science knows nothing about what is going on out in the sea where the water is more than three miles deep. And the water is deeper than that over nearly a third of the earth surface. Even some waters that are less than three miles deep have not been looked into.

Mr. Creager says "the Danes now propose to do something about it. "Danish scientists have been recognized leaders in sea exploration for a century or more. They have sent out two important world expeditions — the last one some 50 years ago. Now they are sending out a third, a thoroughly equipped naval vessel with 11 top marine scientists and a laboratory with every known instrument for their work. They plan to spend two years at sea.

"It is the strange world into which the 11 Danes intend to probe. A steel hawser 15,000 metres (9.3 miles) long will be used to lower instruments that only the most skilled understand. The greatest known ocean depth is 10,800 metres (6.66 miles). It is to the east of the Philippines.

"Vast areas covered by waters not more than a mile deep have never been studied. Earlier expeditions have resulted in important additions to knowledge of the weird ocean caverns, but the greater depths still hold their secrets. Scientists do not know whether any life at all exists at the extreme depths where the pressure exceeds 1,000 atmospheres. They can only speculate as to what it is like if it does exist.

"The most amazing thing given up by the deep in recent years was a fish caught off Southeast Africa. It belonged to a group which zoologists had believed extinct since the Cretaceous age, some 80 million years ago. But there it was, as chipper as a Flambeau muskie. It was five feet long and weighed 125 pounds, according to official records."

WHAT OTHERS LIKE AND ENJOY

What famous people do and like is of interest to everyone. As a poet once said "the proper study of mankind is man."

So what Field Marshal Montgomery likes is not only enlightening but it may enrich the minds of others if they but knew what the other person likes.

The Field Marshal has been attracted to a gramaphone record album, known as "Those You Have Loved," by Doris Arnold on the BBC.

Learning what he prefers, she spent a month looking into what the great warrior likes in the way of gramophone records. From this she is trying to build up a list from which he can build up a library for his radiogram. She spends days on the compilation of each of her radio programs, mixing and balancing the ingredients to suit all tastes. Accordingly she was only too willing to expend the same amount of labor on building a library of records for Monty's own private delectation. But she had to know what his musical preferences were and then she set to work with a will. She appealed to his aide-de-camp who revealed that his chief had a particular fondness for Strauss waltzes "those enchantingly gay masterpieces of light music which she so often uses on her program, and a list of the best recordings of them was soon compiled. She then began on a list of ballet music and progressed to favorite overtures, symphonies, concertos, operas — with particular emphasis on Gilbert and Sullivan, and many other kinds of music. Having compiled programs for years she was therefore able to supply a list of many favorites for the Marshal, who conducting the purchase of a record library rather like a military operation, accepted them and is going to build his own record sequences from them.

Radio folk must come in contact with a great many persons of all ranks with their many predilections and preferences and it was a pleasure to Miss Arnold to meet the famous soldier and to learn that he was a frequent listener to her programs.

To the world at large who have come to give high place to the Field Marshal as one of the great military leaders of his time it is pleasing what the great soldier likes is music.

To know the preferences of people gives some insight into their outlook on life just as music reflects this pleasure for music.

Probably no form of human peril excites more popular interest than that of men entombed in mine shaft or otherwise. The Scottish mine affair of last week was another such incident, ranking above some features of the war news which concerns many more lives, says Port Arthur News Chronicle.

Bank in Victoria, British Columbia, honored a cheque that was written on the shell of a hard-boiled egg, according to Hamilton Spectator. Among the things that banks don't recognize are hard-boiled yeggs.

Weigh not so much what men assert, as what they prove. — Sir Philip Sidney.

JUST FOLKS

PURSE PROUD

He who loves money most
Merely has wealth to boast.
Blind must he be to things
Time for his pleasure brings.

Beauty he scarcely sees.
Wasteful to him seems ease.
Counting always the cost,
Friendships are often lost.

Laughter and love of jest
Comfort the troubled breast.
Friendship makes light the care
Life asks us all to bear.

Wiser and happier he
Who lives life gracefully,
Earns what he needs, and then
Shares all God meant for men.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IN BASEBALL PARLANCE

An examination of the batting records of the most famous baseball players reveals that a hit is the exception rather than the rule. The very best players in the business frequently strike out, or are put out in some other way, even before they get to first base. No man can make a hit every time he comes to bat. The player who could do that would very shortly command the highest salary ever paid a baseball player. It is even more likely, however, that within a year or two the baseball magnates would mutually agree to eliminate him from the game. That abundance of ability would constitute unfair competition, human nature and gifts being as they are.

Every game is a reproduction of life. The daily game of living goes along very much like a baseball game with its ins and outs, its strikes, its foul tips, its hot grounders which are hard to negotiate. Men slide the bases in life the same as they do in baseball. One of the most disconcerting things for a player is to give the ball an awful clout and then have an outfielder pick it off the fence. Every salesman knows what it is to have a prospective sale ruined in like fashion.

Every man gets a home run once in a while, but even the best get few. Don't worry if you can't knock them every day. Neither can anyone else. And don't expect a hit every time you come to bat.

CHILD FALLS INTO TUB

Williamson, W. Va., Sept. 16 — (AP) —There was a crash in front of Mrs. Luther Rowe's home yesterday. She left her wash tubs and went out to see about it. Two cars had collided. When she came back, she found in one of the tubs the body of her year-old grandson. He had toddled across the floor and fallen in.

WAITANGI TREATY

New Zealand became a British colony in 1840, when British settlers and Moari representatives signed the treaty of Waitangi.

Navan Farmer Not Supplier Of Horse Meat

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP) — An unidentified Navan, Ont., farmer was cleared by police Friday of suspicion as the supplier of horse meat said to have been sold in hamburgers at the Canada Central Exhibition here last month.

Complaints during the exhibition led to the closing of some suspected hamburger stands at the fair and examination of the meat showed some contained a quantity of horse flesh.

Detective James Kettles of the Ottawa police, appointed by Dr. J. J. Day, city medical health officer, visited the Navan farmer Friday in a follow-up of the case. He came back to report the farmer slaughtered horses for feed for fox farm breeders but there was nothing to indicate he had supplied horsemeat to exhibition concessions.

The detective said the complaints were not so much against the sale of horsemeat as about non-inspection of the meat and its misrepresentation as beef. He added that if a butcher opened a shop, advertised horse meat for sale and had the carcasses properly inspected by health authorities, he would be operating within the law.

City officials believe that the horse-meat sold in hamburgers at the exhibition found its way to Ottawa from Quebec and investigations are still going on.

Population in Canada Tops 13,850,000 Mark

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP) — Canada's population has topped the 13,850,000 mark.

The Bureau of Statistics estimated Friday that it reached 13,871,000 at July 1—the latest date for which figures are available—for a gain of 143,000 over the January 1 total of 13,728,000 at July 1 last year, it was 13,579,000.

The increase in the previous half-year was 149,000, making an estimate gain of 292,000 in the 12 months ended June 30.

In 1941, when the last official census was taken, the population was 11,507,000.

Entry of Newfoundland into Confederation last year accounts for 348,000 of the 10-year gain.

Civil Defence Must be Set Up by Municipalities

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP) — Ontario municipalities must set up their own civil defence organizations to combat the effects of atomic or other attacks, Arthur Welsh, Provincial Secretary and civil defence chief, announced on Friday.

Civil defence organizations will be built around a nucleus of civic officials and volunteer organizations and, where needed, provincial and federal agencies, said Mr. Welsh.

Some municipalities would be ordered to create such organizations, while other communities not required to do so might wish to take such action. Each municipal authority will be responsible for evaluating the consequences of attack or disaster and for establishing a public warning system, care and evacuation of injured.

Mr. Welsh said a civil defence school would be established at either Camp Borden or Meaford to train leaders and future instructors of civil defence workers. Such training was needed.

Special courses for specialists in defence measures against atomic and chemical warfare will begin at the army's Camp Borden site in September.

Porter Says Awrey Knows Why Dismissed

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP) — Attorney-General Porter said Friday that E. C. Awrey was retired as crown attorney at Windsor, Ont., because "there was a lack of confidence in the administration of that office and we made a change.

As a result of a shake-up in the Windsor police administration, A. C. Hall, Whitby Crown Attorney, will take over the duties of Crown Attorney in Windsor. Mr. Awrey is returning to private practice.

"I've been unable to find out what I've done to deserve this," Mr. Awrey said in Windsor.

Asked for comment, Mr. Porter said:

"I told him. He knows."

Urgently Need Seaway Project Says Truman

Washington, Sept. 16. (AP)—President Truman said Friday the proposed United States-Canada St. Lawrence Seaway Power project is needed to make a "major contribution to our growing economic strength."

In a letter to the Great Lakes St. Lawrence Association Truman said that the "demands of the present situation greatly increase the urgency of getting started on the project and completing it as rapidly as is physically practical."

Truman's letter was read to Association's annual luncheon meeting by Lewis G. Castle, Duluth, Minn., chairman of the Association's executive committee.

"We urgently need the seaway," Truman's letter continues, "especially as a secure route for transporting iron ore from new sources to supplement our diminishing domestic sources of ore.

"We urgently need the power, not only for normal use in farms, homes and factories, but especially to help in expanding important chemical and metals industries."

He told the Association that the "relatively" small investment of materials and manpower needed to build the St. Lawrence project would be "richly productive".

Truman even prior to becoming president, had advocated construction of the long-discussed St. Lawrence project. On many occasions since entering the White House he unsuccessfully has called on the Congress to take action on the project, first considered more than 50 years ago.

Legislation to authorize the more than $800,000,000 development has been introduced in this Congress but, because of the nearness of adjournment, is virtually certain to receive no action.

(In an address at Cornwall, Ont., Friday night, Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier of Canada said it is time for the Dominion to explore the possibility of building a St. Lawrence Waterway system of her own if the U.S. Congress does not want to approve the project internationally.)

General Electric And Employees Reach Agreement

New York, Sept. 16. (CP)—The General Electric Company reached a contract settlement Friday with more than 100,000 workers—40,000 of them on strike.

The General Electric settlement was reached with the Independent United Electrical, Radio and Machine workers claiming to represent 45,000 workers in 46 plants and the International Workers (C.I.O.) claiming to represent 60,000 workers in 60 G.E. plants.

Forty thousand C.I.O. workers were out on strikes which the company said hampered war production, including jet engines.

The agreement with the C.I.O. provided a $125 pension and insurance plan and a 10-cents-hourly wage boost. Workers also got a cost-of-living wage increase. The increase will be one cent for every 1.14 point advance in the U.S. government cost-of-living index. The agreement is for six months.

The U.E. agreement was on all points except details of pensions and insurance. These terms were not announced but were believed similar to the C.I.O. settlement.

Pope Pius Has Throat Affection

Castel Gondolfo, Italy, Sept. 16 (Reuters) —The Pope, who has probably spoken more often in public than any other world figure, today was ordered by his doctors to keep absolute silence for the next few days. He is suffering from a throat infection brought on by a cold.

All audiences at his summer palace here have been temporarily cancelled.

At tonight's mass audience of 50,000 pilgrims in Rome, the Pope will not give his usual address but will simply make the sign of the cross over the crowds in silent blessing.

SOON TO WEAR PATCH

Ottawa, Sept. 16. (CP)— The new red formation patch of the Canadian army's special United Nations brigade will be making its public appearance in and around the training areas across the country in the near future.

Wearing instructions have been issued to the troops.

The patch is composed of a scarlet shield centred with a gold Maple Leaf, ano encircled by a wreath of silver olive branches of the same design as that appearing on the United Nations flag. The word "Canada" appears in gold lettering across the top.

It will be worn on both sleeves of uniforms and greatcoats directly below corps and unit flashes.

KEEP TO THE MIDDLE OF THE ROAD

Speaking of a health, physical or medical examination, whether prophylactic or diagnostic, let's call it examination or test and not "check-up." Morons who talk about going to the "clinic" for a "check-up" deserve the "vitamin shots" the racketeers give them there.

A reader made this observation in reference to an eye examination: A physician may be more capable to judge whether there is anything wrong with his own eyes or vision than a layman is.

That's a valid exception. It reminds me that a good many queries I receive from readers who are evidently concerned about their eyes mention signs or symptoms which seem trivial or insignificant to me—but that is because I happen to know more about physiology than the average (health) ignorant high school or college graduate does.

I still believe it is good hygiene and good sense for every woman at forty to have a medical examination for possible signs of cancer of the neck of the womb. Every woman, I say—no matter whether she has had any disturbance of health or not.

I advice every individual, man or woman, who attains the age of forty in good health, fair health or poor health, to have a urinalysis, especially a test of the urine for sugar, not by a "laboratory" but by a physician or under the physician's direction.

Perhaps we all regard the periodic health examination in the wrong light. We think of it as a search of the person for evidence of disease, for instance by chest X-ray film to detect possible lung tuberculosis or by ophthalmoscopic inspection of the arterioles in the retina (back of the eye) to detect early, arteriosclerosis. Of course the annual test should cover these particulars when the physician so advises. I assume the client has enough sense to return regularly to the physician who has his or her health record on file, for the periodic examination.

But the periodic health examination ought to include measurements of health assets or endowments as well as determining that the client is free from disease. How long does it take the pulse rate and systolic pressure to return to normal after a rapid run up a flight of twenty steps? How many teeth are missing or not functioning and what type of denture is necessary to maintain good digestion? What bad habit of interfering with automatic regulation of intestinal function requires correction? What blood-destroying or heart-damaging dope does the client take for headache, tired feeling, nervousness, insomnia, "indigestion" and the like? What basic change of diet is necessary to prevent serious manifestations of vitamin and mineral deficiencies?

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Arrested

Can a boy of twenty years of age, discharged from hospital as an arrested case of tuberculosis transmit the disease to a person he is constantly with (his fiancee)? (A. H.)

Answer—Arrested means the disease is not active. No tubercle bacilli are given off and so the disease is not communicable. It is for the boy's physician to say whether the disease becomes active again and might be communicated to any one who associates closely with him over a considerable period of time.

Congenital Development Defect

Boy, 7 months old, healthy, happy, active, but left foot seems to "toe in" at 45 degree angle. Will this pigeon-toed condition correct itself as he grows? (J. N. A.)

Answer—No. Have the baby examined by your physician or an orthopedic surgeon your physician recommends.

Caffeine

Which contains the more caffeine, tea or coffee? (Mrs. M. A. E.)

Answer—One cup of coffee is equivalent to two cups of tea in caffeine content.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

"We have hardly a weed we can call our own," said the famous John Burroughs. Most of the color along the roadsides and fields, these conclusive September days, is provided by weeds. And nearly all the weeds came here from Europe. Sheperdspurse, campion, corn cockle, Queen Anne's lace, moth mullein, butter and eggs, sow thistle, hawkweed, white clover, alsike, chicory, burdock, bull thistle, the blue-weed or viper's bugloss — how's that for a name? — and the teasel the arty ladies love to gild for a dried bouquet: all, all from Europe.

Some of them came two to three centuries ago, like the common white daisy, in the seeds and fodder the first pioneers brought with them. In seed, in the mud tracked off ship by the emigrants or the cattle, the several hundred foreign plants that now call themselves Canadian or American got here and went on the loose.

But we have plenty of native color besides that of the native trees, now that October is on the threshold. In eastern Canada alone there are some 50 species of golden rod. And of the 275 species of wild aster the botanists have named in the world, most of them are in America, the majority of them in some part of Canada. And all of these asters and golden rods choose September to be at their best, as if, being Canadian, they had a job to do with their color in harmony with the trees.

After the vulgarity simple design of most cultivated flowers, it takes an appreciator of fine things a little while to get the hang of these wild beauties. You must look a little closer at a plume of golden rod or a spray of wild asters than you would at a rose or a tulip. But if you might be so daft as to carry a pocket magnifier with you when you go strolling in September, there are elements of design and adventures in pattern to be found in these last, lean, wild flourishes of nature that can positively humble you.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MEMORABLE THINGS

We all feel like walking away from people who have tales of their misfortunes to relate. But we stand around with our ears alert and our mind in tuneful accord when with those who have memorable thoughts to express or happy experiences to tell us.

Memorable people, events, and personal experiences stay with us. Even after our loved ones have gone from us, we have the memorable associations, the recalling of their kindnesses and fine acts to give us cheer, hope and the urge to live better lives.

How many characters in fiction as well as in life, keep coming to us again and again, and we are inspired by the memory of what has been planted in our minds. We read Dickens and we know the characters' portrayed. We listen to a great actor, and the character represented lives for us before our eyes. When I saw Joseph Jefferson in Sheridan's "Rivals" I saw Bob Acres! Edwin Booth made you feel that he was Hamlet.

Birthdays are memorable events, as are marriages. We celebrate them that we may not grow cold to their beauty and significance. Memorable poems are read over and over again. So are the great books of the world. So long as life is given to us, we return to the happy days in memory, and cherish them.

We must all become acquainted with sorrow, poverty and distressing experiences, but these gradually fade from our memory as the brighter and happier things mist them from our minds. It is well to dwell upon happy things, watering them with the years, and looking to God in thanksgiving for the endless blessings that are ours.

We are planting something in our minds every day that we live, no matter where we may be, or with whom. It is well to keep the memorable things fresh in our consciousness, never letting a beautiful act or experience fade from our memory. The saddest event in history was the crucifixion of Christ—but the happiest was his ressurrection!

OUR TOWN
By JACK SCOTT

MAGIC TOWN

QUEBEC CITY, Que. — This city is completely captivating. For our wandering family, whose appetite for new impressions has been dulled somewhat by too much travel, whose thoughts are turning more and more to home, Quebec has been a sparkling adventure.

I've written nary a line since we arrived two days ago, bringing myself perilously close to the deadline for this copy. The reason for this is simply that I cannot bring myself to confront the typewriter when that wonderful town waits but two miles away from the trailer's door for our exploration.

In other stops along our route its been the drill to look for stories, to find interesting people or situations that will feed the hungry mouth of a daily column.

Here, in Quebec, after two full days, I can only make the happy croak of the satisfied tourist and hope that it may have some contagious effect on those of you who've never been within the stone walls of this old and beautiful city.

So much for the days. As for the nights they have been occupied by a display of aurora borealis, or Northern Lights, the heavens' evening performance to complete our day.

We set up the deck chairs on our private little ledge of grass overlooking the wide valley of the St. Charles, wrap ourselves in blankets against the cool of the September night and settle back for the indescribable show. Over the black silhouette of the Laurentians the sky is filled with a pale, swirling ectoplasm, changing in color now from delicate orange to green to blue.

Couldn't have asked for more if we'd found Aladdin's Lamp.

Seats for Four

The past two days have been bright and blue with a stiff breeze that whips at the Union Jacks and Duplessis' flag of Quebec with its white cross and fleur de lis. The city stands under this live silk like a fortress in the sun.

It is not a city best seen from the windows of a car so we've been parking the station wagon up near the Chateau Frontenac and strolling about in discovery or merely sitting in the sun on a bench of the Dufferin Terrace.

Here, directly in front of the Chateau, there is a wide plank promenade hanging on the face of the rock, a position of great advantage for the heavy black cannon that defended these ramparts in tenser times or for today's goggle-eyed visitors.

So we sit, looking down into the town below with its narrow heart of the city.

For the past two mornings we've arisen at an uncommonly early hour, rushed through breakfast, got into our best clothes and sped along the Chemin St. Foy, under the St. John Gate and into the streets and gabled roofs and there the gracious little church of Notre Dame des Victoirie fronting on the 17th. century market place. The heavy bells are ringing. The sound of children laughing comes up from the ancient town below.

Your eyes look beyond to the river where the squat, snub-nosed ferries shuttle through the white caps on the St. Lawrence to the town of Levis. Off to the east is the graceful span of the bridge to Ile D'Orleans. The river is alive with activity and its interesting to speculate on the scene as it must appear in Winter.

The terrace and the square in front of the chateau, where you may rent a Victoria or Caleche with yellow-spoked wheels, is aswarm with tourists. So, too, is Cape Diamond, crowned by the citadel and, beyond, the Plains of Abraham. But a stroll in any direction will take you into the old and authentic cobblestoned alleys where you can feel that you are in another age.

Then it will be time for lunch and an introduction to snails, which no one will dare admit are a disappointment.

Regret, Desire

The essence of Quebec's charm is age. A modern city, even on such a magnificent site, could never have this deep an appeal for the outsider.

This is especially true for the great many New Yorkers who come this way and it is true for us, too, coming from a part of Canada where an old building is generally an eyesore and not a subject of reverence.

But it is more than that. Against this historic and very European backdrop there moves a population of such vivacity and outward charm that the visitor is enchanted.

"People look so happy," our 10-year-old observed yesterday and this is no more than the truth. On the other hand, maybe people are saying that about us.

Only one thing stands in the way of complete enjoyment of this environment and that is the language gap and we have made a solemn pact that before we come this way again something will be done about that.

A pamphlet on the city that I picked up yesterday had these words: "May the stranger leaving Quebec have only one regret; to be unable to stay here longer; and only one desire; to be able to come back."

It sounds like a perfect description of these four strangers.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

How Thick is Blood?

By ROY L. SMITH

Our fathers used to say, "Blood is thicker than water," by which they meant that family ties are the closest known to men.

It is appropriate then to ask, "Just how thick is blood?" To what extent do we have the right to judge men by their relatives? Is it fair to condemn one man because his brother has gone wrong? Can we attribute to one man the beliefs of his kin?

Jesus Had a Family

There is an ancient tradition, unproved by well accepted, that Joseph, the head of the Nazareth household, died about the time Jesus was a lad of sixteen years of age.

If the tradition is to be accepted, the widow Mary was left with a numerous little brood to care for. At the age of sixteen Jesus was reckoned to be a man in the Jewish community, and very probably took charge of the Nazareth shop.

> The Sunday School lesson for September 17: "James, Leader in the Jerusalem Church," Mark 3:31-35; 6:3; I Corinthians 15:7; Galatians 2:9-12; Acts 12:17; 15.

It seems to have been the case that the young prophet who appeared at the fords of the Jordan, alongside of John the Baptist, preaching the coming of the Kingdom of God, was a man accustomed to carrying the responsibility of the head of a house with a family to care for. What the attitude of that family may have been toward the eagle growing up in their midst is a fascinating question.

Skeptical Kinfolk

As if in complete defiance of the proverb, Jesus seems never to have been supported by His family. True, His mother moves in and out of the scene occasionally, and at the crucifixion she took up her station near to the foot of the cross, a helpless onlooker doomed to sob out her heart, altogether unable to so much as to lift a finger in defence of her son.

There is nothing in the New Testament to indicate that any of His brothers or sisters understood Jesus, or followed His teachings. Perhaps it was impossible for them to believe that a miracle had taken place before their very eyes and that they had lived in the prsence of One in one whom there dwelt the Spirit of the Holy God.

At any rate none of His brethren became His disciples, none were members of the Christian Church, and none acknowledged His unique position between God and Man. None of them, that is, besides James, became a Christian. There is even a hint at one point that Jesus' brothers and sisters had a fear that He was just a little demented.

James Becomes Pastor

The New Testament is a very incomplete record of those first years of The Christian Church, and many events of extreme importance are left out entirely or painfully ignored.

We do know that James, the oldest of Jesus' brothers, became a Chritsian as a result of a vision that came to him, and that he soon became a powerful leader among the Christians.

Just why Peter should have surrendered his leadership of the Jerusalem congregation is not known. It is easy to guess that the old fisherman's zeal and energy may have made it difficult for him to sit quietly in some hired house in Jerusalem and order the every-day-life of the Christians. At any rate, whatever the cause may have been, we suddenly come upon the fact that the brother of Jesus has acceded to the first place among the Christians and is shepherding the flock in Jerusalem.

He Was a Popular Pastor

James had been reared amid the same deep spiritual moods and convictions as Jesus had. It is not unreasonable to believe that the same religious influences which played on the life of Jesus with such glorious affect must also have played upon the life of James, only slightly younger.

Enough records have been left behind to indicate that under James the Christian Church enjoyed no little favor at the hands of the Jerusalem Jewish leaders.

James, it must be remembered, was a devout Jew, one reared in the niceties of the law, one who held the sacred writings in the utmost veneration and regard. Such a leader would, quite inevitably, get along well with the Jewish leaders, particularly if he did not show too much disposition to "get along" with the Roman world.

Very naturally the pastor of the Jersusalem Church would wield a very great authority throughout the Chritsian world, and stubborn and difficult cases would be referred to him. This week's lesson tells one such story, a lesson of tolerance, open-mindedness, the ability to discern basic issues, and a readiness to face spiritual facts.

It would have been so easy for the Christian Church to have split up into a succession of warring factions. James held it together by the exercise of nothing more than those powers which are available to any man who is determined above all to do the will of God.

Fascinating Variety of Foods To Fill Shelves of Dominion Master Market in Belleville

Judging from the vast number of packages and cartons being unloaded at the new Dominion Master Market on Victoria Ave., just about everything in the line of foods will be on display when this new market opens. As a matter of fact, Dominion Stores stated that more than two thousand different items will be carried. This will provide the shopper with an unusually wide selection, thus making it an easy matter to plan praise-winning meals for her family.

Dominion's new fruit and vegetable department will carry a full range of seasonable items from domestic growers, plus those imported lines that add delightful variety to any menu. Wherever possible, Dominion Stores will buy produce locally thus materially aiding local growers.

At the meat counter, the same wide selection will be evident to every shopper. Here will be seen handsome examples of steaks and roasts properly prepared from top-quality beef. Pork, veal, lamb, poultry and fresh fish will give the customer ample choice at all times. All meats will be kept under refrigeration, thus protecting the quality right up to the moment of purchase. In addition, there will be a staff of expert salesmen to guide selection and give personal attention.

To the shopper visiting a Dominion Master Market for the first time, the spaciousness of the store and particularly the shopping aisles will be most impressive. Wide aisles will provide plenty of room for shoppers to wheel a bundle-buggy about the store. Rows of fluorescent lights placed close to the ceiling keep the entire store brightly lighted at all times. Another interesting feature is the installation of powerful electric fans to ensure customers and staff an abundance of fresh air.

And here's good news for those shoppers who appreciate fast, efficient service. Dominion Stores' new Master Market will have six modern check-out desks, each equipped with the latest type electric cash register.

From progress to date, indications are that Dominion Stores will open this newest market soon.

WEDDINGS

MACKENZIE—BRENNAN

Arrangements of white gladioli and ferns decorated the altar of the Holy Name of Mary church, Marysville, Ont., for the wedding of Rita Bernardine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Brennan, of Lonsdale, and Archy V. MacKenzie, of Detroit, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Rod MacKenzie, of Nova Scotia.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph J. Brennan, of Mallorytown, brother of the bride, who also celebrated the mass.

For her nuptials, the petite bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a beautiful gown of imported Belgian lace over satin, fashioned with a tight fitting bodice, Queen Anne collar, and long sleeves ending in lily points over her hands. The bouffant skirt with scalloped hemline was accented by a very full peplum gathered at intervals around the waist, forming a bustle back and ending in a panel train. Her tulle illusion veil fell from a crown of matching lace and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and fleur d'amour.

As her sister's bridesmaid, Patricia Brennan, of Detroit, wore a gown of Nile green taffeta with off shoulder neckline and matching picture hat. She carried a French nosegay of orchid gladioli petals with yellow roses nestled in the throats.

Maureen Culhane, of San Francisco, little niece of the bride, was lovely in a dainty gown of yellow nylon. She carried a miniature French nosegay similar to that of the bridesmaid. Hoops worn with the gowns lent an old-fashioned trend to their style.

The best man was Johnnie MacNeil, of Detroit. Ushers were Hector Davis, of Kingston, and Charles Brennan.

Mr. Ken Carney, of Kingston, was organist and rendered "Ave Maria", "On This Day O Beautiful Mother", and "Panis Angelicus", during the ceremony.

Acolytes were Gerard Brennan and Peter Roach.

For the reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Brennan wore a dress of brown with matching accessories. Her corsage of Johanna Hill roses was in chatelaine style.

The groom's gift to his bride was a watch of platinum.

When they left on their honeymoon to Nova Scotia and New England States, the bride, was wearing a navy gabardine suit with burgundy accessories and an orchid corsage. Upon their return the happy couple will reside in Detroit.

SHAW—MUMBY

Thomasburg United Church was the scene of a lovely Autumn wedding on Saturday September 2nd at 2 p.m., when Molly Marion, elder daughter of Mr. Arthur J. Mumby, was united in marriage to Samuel Delbert Shaw, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. James Shaw, Madoc. Rev. M. Clarke officiated. The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of gladioli and late Summer flowers for the occasion.

Entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the bridal music played by Mr. Fred Porter, the bride looked charming in a floor length gown of white slipper satin featuring a net nylon yoke and bustle back with lace trim. Her long fitted sleeves ended in points over her wrists and the fingertip veil fell gracefully from a matching headdress. A single strand of pearls with matching earrings were her only adornment. She carried a bouquet of Bettertime roses.

Her only sister, Miss Doris Mumby, of Belleville, was maid of honor, in a floor-length gown of pale blue nylon with brocaded organdy yoke. She carried a bouquet of orchid gladioli. Mrs. Warren Hill, sister of the groom, bridesmaid, wore yellow nylon with matching headdress and carried a bouquet of orchid gladioli. Miss Donna Shaw, as second bridesmaid, wore pale green nylon with matching headdress and also carried orchid gladioli. All three gowns were fashioned alike with gathered net over nylon skirts and fitted brocaded organdy bodices with long matching gloves. Little Miss Jean McKillican, who was flower girl, wore pale pink net over taffeta, styled in lines similar to that of the bridesmaid and carried a bouquet of yellow gladioli.

Mr. Douglas Maynard of Madoc, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Joseph Mumby and Mr. James Shaw.

Before the ceremony and during the signing of the register Mrs. Wallace Provost of Tweed, sang "O Promise Me" and "The Wedding Prayer".

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's father for seventy guests. The rooms were tastefully decorated in pink and white and a three-tier wedding cake adorned the table. Those serving were Misses Merle Carleton, Edna Jones, Phyllis Kleinsteuber, Vera Martin and Elsie Richardson.

Mrs. Angus Mumby, aunt of the bride and Mrs. Iva Doran received the guests wearing wine crepe dresses with corsages of red roses. They were assisted by the groom's mother wearing navy blue figured crepe with black accessories and corsage of red roses.

For travelling to points east, the bride chose a navy blue gabardine suit with navy accessories and corsage of red roses.

The bride and groom will take up residence in Tweed.

STATHER—MEYERS

Bridge Street United Church adorned with standards of white, yellow and Picardy gladioli and candlelight, was the setting for a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, September 9th., of Jean Elizabeth Meyers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Meyers, of this city and Harold Thomas Stather, Yorkshire, England, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Stather. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Donald C. Amos. Mr. S. Alec Gordon played the wedding music and Miss Loretta McDougall sang "I'll Walk Beside You", and "Because", during the service.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was lovely in a traditional white satin gown with lace yoke and alternate lace and satin gores in the hooped skirt. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a braided satin and pearl bandeau and she carried a bouquet of white glamellias.

Miss Muriel Gifford, Oshawa, as maid of honor, and Miss Shirley Badgley, cousin of the bride, Belleville, as bridesmaid, were gowned alike in green nylon marquisette over taffeta with matching braided taffeta headdress. They carried bouquets of yellow, white and Picardy glamellias.

Mr. Norman Meyers, of Kingston was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. N. E. Miller, and Mr. Bruce Blatherwick.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlor with Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Stather, of Milliken, uncle and aunt of the groom, assisting the bride's parents in receiving the guests.

Out-of-town guests were from Toronto, Oshawa, Milliken, Enniskillen, Port Hope, Tweed, Trenton, Corbyville, and Shannonville.

The bride and groom met in Bermuda where both were stationed for some time.

Bathing Suits, Shorts Not Wear For Cathedral

Canterbury, Kent, England, Sept. 15. (CP) — Bathing suits and brief, vivid scarlet shorts are not the wear for a cathedral, lamented a King's school scholar after visiting Canterbury.

"I was most distressed by the chattering, the queueing, the slovenly dress and appearance of the modern pilgrim, one of whom was wandering about the Mother Church of England in a bathing costume," he wrote in the school magazine.

Mr. O. M. Woodliffe, chief verger of Canterbury, said he has not yet seen a visitor in a bathing suit, but that it was necessary for hikers, cyclists and other touring visitors to see the church in what they were wearing.

"I have seen girls and men in the briefest shorts, kneeling reverently on the bare stone of the cathedral, taking part in the service," he said.

Women's Institute

ELDORADO W.I.

The Eldorado and Bannockburn Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Hugh Barker, for their Sept. meeting. With the president, Mrs. Russel Empey, in charge. Meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode and repeating the Creed. The roll call was answered by telling your favorite school teacher. Business was dealt with. It was decided the Institute would have a booth at the Madoc Fair. It was also decided to charter a bus to go to Ottawa.

Mrs. Hugh Barker then took charge of the program, which was on "Education". A reading was given by Mrs. Barker entitled "The Little Red School House on Wheels".

The motto was given by Mrs. Barker which was given in parts by several members. She also gave a talk on the Rideau Canal which was dug by hand in the year 1812. A talk on [illegible] ture emphasizing the importance of good books for rea[illegible] and art. A presentation of a silver spoon from the Institute was given to the little son of Mrs. Harold Pigden and daughter of Mrs. Clarence Stevenson. A very amusing contest was given by Mrs. Barker.

The meeting then closed with The Lord's Prayer.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

Women's Activities

WEST HUNTINGDON W.M.S.-W.A.

The September meeting of the W.M.S. and W.A. of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. J. Moorcroft on Sept. 7, with a good attendance of visitors and members. A pot-luck dinner was served at noon followed by a meeting at 2 p.m.

Business was dealt with. It was decided to have an open meeting in October and a committee was formed to plan this meeting consisting of Mrs. Hammond, Mrs. Cooke, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Poste. The program conveners for next meeting are Miss McInroy and Mrs. Moorcroft. It was decided to have a quilting at Mrs. Cooke's on Wednesday, Sept. 13, in the afternoon and also a committee meeting.

The program for the afternoon opened by a solo by Mrs. F. Wilson. A reading by Mrs. J. S. Wilson and Mrs. Bruce Stapley favored with an instrumental number.

The guest speaker for the afternoon was Miss Mary Chambers of Eggleton, who spoke on "The World Conference in Toronto", which she had the opportunity of attending. The theme of the conference was "Jesus Christ is Lord". She gave a vivid picture of all the different nationalities in their own costume all mingling together as one.

Mrs. Grant Eckhart gave a reading and the president moved a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Chambers, to all the visitors and all those responsible for the program and to Mrs. Moorcroft for opening her home.

Cooking Hints

Ottawa, Sept. 13. (CP)—If home to you means "One room with grill privileges" then a few tips on how to prepare small quantities of food tastefully should prove helpful.

Health and Welfare department officials say that even for working people keeping house alone can be easy and interesting. A little thought given to planning can make the preparation of varied, nutritious meals a pleasant hobby as well as an aid to health and vitality.

A double-boiler is the first "must" in every miniature kitchen. A pressure cooker also is invaluable as a time and fuel saver.

Here are a few cooking hints which might prove useful:

Always remember that too high a temperature shrinks meat. Tougher cuts may be cooked slowly in tomato juice, canned tomatoes or water. Make gravy with the liquid later.

When frying meat, cook in a hot uncovered frying pan with fat. Sear on both sides and turn frequently.

To Braise: brown meat in hot fat, cover and cook slowly in its own juice or in a little water or liquid from vegetables.

To Stew: cover with water and simmer. Add vegetables.

Cooking Fish

Fish may be served several ways.

To Fry: roll in flour or cracker crumbs; fry on both sides in well-greased pan. It's cooked when it flakes.

To Boil: wrap in parchment paper, tie with string and boil in salted water. Allow five minutes a pound for fillets; eight to 10 minutes a pound for thick fish. Serve with a lemon wedge or white sauce with chopped hard-cooked eggs.

Left-over fish may be served creamed in white sauce; added to mashed potato and fried as fish-cakes; or used in salads.

For Vegetables

Vegetables may be cooked together to save space and fuel. Put those requiring the longest cooking in first.

Pudding can be cooked in the top of a double boiler while vegetables cook in the bottom.

Do not overcook vegetables.

Many left-over vegetables may be browned in the frying pan, creamed, or served with cheese sauce. Left-over beets may be pickled in vinegar.

The Health department has other homemaking hints for the single person or working couple in its booklet "meals for one or two"

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

A BABE IS BORN

OBSTETRICS WING, Room 24 — You have to get confined in here to find out that it isn't only fighting men who endure pain and push through the smell of blood and guts. This baby factory right here with its patients and its nurses, holds a task force of commandos that could be sent to face any fire at any hour in any front line.

In contrast with the world outside, this world of babies is a different sort of fighting front — a line where the latest push-through usually means the creation of a soul, rather than its blotting out. And while none of us here can report the latest development in the Far East, we can tell you that our wonderful baby girl has gained two ounces. She can already laugh and sneeze, and holler.

Peaceful Awakening

The last few days stretch back —a horrible agonizing dream with a rainbow at the end, thank God. For some mothers, there is no rainbow after the storm. The hours of labor, the hours of delivery, then the knock-out blow. But for most, comes at long last the beautiful awakening from an anaesthesic sleep, an awakening to peace, contentment, complete freedom from pain. A child has been born.

Having a baby in 1950 certainly jolts you into realizing how little has been achieved by medical science to relieve the suffering of a mother in child-birth. Billions of dollars go out to develop atomic energy. In comparison, how piffling are the amounts earmarked for the creation of life.

It was not surprising the women of England demanded that the painless childbirth method used for the birth of Princess Elizabeth's Prince Charles should be developed for all women. As yet, this particular treatment is very expensive and can be administered only by experts.

Back to Realities

Second day after the birth of our baby, I was fiddling with a huge mid-morning glass of milk, only to look up and hear a most dignified nurse inquiring about my health and handing me some papers. "Here are your birth registration and family allowance forms. I am Miss Jones, the hospital superintendent."

Beginning in the cold, grey dawn and every four hours, the nurses shuffle up the babies in the nursery and deal them out like so many bridge hands to their respective names for feeding. Except for the 6 a.m. date, these are happy minutes for mother. She gets the lead on papa in getting well acquainted with baby right from the start.

Though hospital buzzers buzz all day calling the nurses for this and that attention, no mother ever buzzes for her baby to be returned. She hangs on to that precious little bundle praying that the nurse will forget ever to come back.

Being readers of digest magazines, my husband and I are sold on the medical contention that breast-feeding is a child's birthright and a mother's best way back to health. In the hospital here, you find that the other young marrieds believe what they read in the magazines too. Few formulas are prepared. Breast-feeding is back in fashion.

Few Visitors

No visitors, except fathers and maternal grandmothers are permitted in obstetrical wings in order to guard against infection of the mothers and infants. Twice a day, The Show Is On — at 4 o'clock, again at 8. It is then that the papas and grammas may see their wee ones on display behind glass in the nursery.

A nurse wearing a mask, brings each babe from its crib to the window and shows off the child, much as a model would a handbag in a fashion show. Needless to say, this Baby Show is over much too soon, for the audience would willingly stand by for hours to take it in. On the left wrist of each babe is a bracelet of white bone beads. On each bead is stamped a letter of the baby's surname. This is tied on in the delivery room and left attached until the baby leaves hospital.

Not even the father or grandmother is allowed in a room when the baby is with its mother. Staff members must wear masks when they enter. Believe me, it is somewhat startling the first time the door opens and the cleaning woman enters with mop in hand mask on face.

To clothe the baby, the hospital provides each with a long-sleeved cotton shirt, a factory-made long-sleeved flannelette nightie which ties at the back of the neck and a diaper. The babe is wrapped in a pink or blue cotton blanket.

Nurses' Aides Great Help

Nurses' aides are doing real service in our hospitals today. Several of them here in the Obstetrics Wing are college girls on a Summer job. Most of them are bright sun-tanned youngsters with an eye on a nursing career. They relieve the graduate nurses of many errands such as filling thermos jugs, bringing clean linen, raising and lowering beds and the like.

Two visits a week as made by members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary here. They call at every private room and ward with a small mobile canteen from which patients can buy cigarettes and chocolate bars. They also run a lending library of new books and the latest magazines and digests free of charge. I enjoyed reading through Mazo de la Roche's "Jalna" again and liked Robert Nathan's little book "Long After Summer."

Use of polished stainless steel for hospital treatment utensils and trays of all kinds, has replaced the old granite enamelware. New furniture is of pastel metal and plastic. Walls and curtains in their soft, pretty colors are much more restful and homelike than the old stark white variety.

Same Old Routine

Otherwise, even the newest hospitals are up to the same old tricks. Hospital routine is placed ahead of the patient's comfort. Staff personalities are crushed in an effort to hurry through the all-too-heavy duties. Flowers go out of the rooms at night into the hall with a kind of suspected make-believe that they will get fresh water.

The old hand-type of hospital plumbing amazes a 1950 patient. In these days of flush toilets in train and plane compartments, why there can't be a removable mattress cushion on a hospital bed leading directly to a flush toilet below, seems ridiculous.

Private rooms have built-in bathrooms anyway, as do most semi-privates. As for the public wards, department stores and theatres think nothing of building in 20 odd lavatory units. Why not introduce them into hospitals? Surely if we can spend millions to make profits, we can find a few thousands to make life more comfortable for those in pain.

Nor have I been deceived into thinking that pastels and plastics make a hospital. Like a home, a hospital is no better than the personalities and the abilities of those who live and work there. Hospitals, like regiments and schools, must have a spirit of their own which pervades everything. They must be as kind as they are efficient, as generous as they are sanitary, and as human as their new-born babes.

Uncle Frontenac says United Nations would be spelled more correctly today if the "i" and "t" were interchanged in the word "United."

Abroad With Me

By Dorothy E. Futcher

Bergen, Norway,

The head of the housewives (Institute) Organization in Bergen is Mrs. Irminger, and it is to her interesting home we are now taken for afternoon tea. Did I tell you it is raining hard? It rains one day out of three in Bergen. We've appreciated our raincoats as there has been very little sunshine since we landed at Liverpool. We literally climb up to the house, the gravel walk winding the easy way around the rocks, but through an enchanting garden, with flowers blooming in every available nook.

Mrs. Irminger is away, having planned organization meetings before she knew of our coming. Mr. Irminger makes a delightful host and Miss Strong, British Consul in Bergen, is with him to welcome us. The home is delightful—so much done to honor us. Tea tables are set here and there in the lovely rooms. Mr. Irminger was in Canada 35 years ago, and to make us feel at home, around the centrepiece on each table he had placed a circle of Norway maple leaves, adding to them, here and there, maple leaves he had brought home with him so many years ago and saved as a souvenir of his Canadian visit.

And now what do you think the centrepiece on each table was? A most appetizing ring of Norwegian pastry, and I assure you it was just as tantalizing to the taste as it was to the eye. It was placed on a large linen square and the maid cut it there in wedges and passed it to us—evidently the custom of the country. There is a striking difference in the furnishings of the homes in the different countries we have visited, but all are decidedly attractive. In this Bergen home lovely window boxes bloomed along the wide windows, but on the inside of the home, not outside.

Floien Mountain rises abruptly 1,200 feet in the centre of Bergen. We are entertained to dinner at 7.30 at a beautiful hotel right on the top of the mountain and reached by a funicular railway, similar in principle to the one operated at Port Stanley but much more pretentious and, of course, many times longer. The car kept stopping on the way up, people getting off, and our friends tell us there are narrow roads all along the mountain sides, where families live.

The Norwegians are great athletes, they like to walk and think nothing of walking four miles down into the city from these high places and back again. They say you can tell a Norwegian by the lilt of his walk, he is so used to climbing up and down mountain sides. When the Germans took over their city they refused the use of this railway to the inhabitants and they had to trudge up and down the mountain, carrying everything they needed. Did I tell you about the German U-boat base at Bergen?

As we came into the harbor a Norwegian pointed out to me two or three dark caves at the water's edge. These were the German U-boat pens, from which U-boat wrafare was launched on Atlantic sealanes. The Norwegians are still dismantling them and the women tell us it was amazing what the Germans had done. The tunnels went into the mountains for rods and everything was there for serving and equipping them.

When we reach the top of the mountain we stand in the pouring rain and look down at the fairyland below—the lights of Bergen following the curve of the fiord and twinkling at us from every hillside. A roaring log fire greets us as we step into the hotel lounge and we are further warmed by the firm handclasp and welcoming smile of 100 of our sister country-women. They are handsome, well-dressed women, and we do wish they had given us time to get out of our traveling suits and into something more suitable.

The Norwegians are masters of filigree, a fine tracery or openwork on silver and gold—and the broaches, bracelets, etc., that the women wore are the loveliest I have ever seen. Some of them speak English remarkably well, some broken English, and with some we have to talk with the eyes and the hands. I wish all of you were here in this beautiful dining room with us—birds are singing and a row of large potted palms in copper tubs follows the centre of the room. The famed Norwegian Smorgesbord centres all the tables and the coffee is excellent.

After dinner the vice-president welcomes us in the absence of Mrs. Irminger. Here are a few of her words: "I call you friends, though we have never met, but that does not matter at all. We can do much for unity. As mothers we have a tremendous responsibility. If we haven't enough wisdom, then we must pray for it. May Copenhagen light the way to peace. And now I have spoken all the English words I know."

The tables seat six, and each Canadian has a Norwegian friend on either side. The table is decorated with the flags of Norway, Canada (Union Jack) and United States. I neglected to tell you that at Newcastle two American delegates joined our party. I have always appreciated our great organization, but it means more to me now than it ever has before, because the vision is wider.

Isn't it a marvellous thing that Canadian countrywomen so far from home can greet countrywomen of many lands as friends and co-workers because the chain of service "For Home and Country" binds us together and makes us one?

One or two things about Bergen before I close. The streets are all up and down. I'm sure you couldn't find one horizontal one. Its inhabitants are typically Scandinavian—fair-haired, blue-eyed, and of splendid physique. Here is something unusual about their city pavements: At regular intervals are three-inch wide gutters, running across the sidewalks into the road, carrying off the water from the down-pipes on all the buildings.

Save your pennies—plan a trip to Bergen. It is delightful.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Partridge and pheasant hunters should have one of their best seasons in years this autumn. Partridge are approaching the top of the cycle of plenty. Over 10-year periods partridge, for some unknown reason, reach a peak of population, then decline almost to the vanishing point. Hunting isn't responsible for it — rather it is Nature's way of regulating the birds. Reports from Parry Sound, North Bay, Wilberforce, and North Hastings all indicate a good supply of partridge. Pheasants have reached a new high in numbers at Pelee Island and this year there will be two shoots instead of one, the first October 23-24, and the second October 27-28.

* * *

For each shoot the bag limit will be 11 birds for two days. In the first no bag may contain more than eight cocks or more than three hens. In the second, with the overall limit still 11 birds, no bag may contain more than eight cocks or more than seven hens.

* * *

In counties of Essex, Kent, Lambton, Lincoln, Welland and Haldimand the open season will be November 1 to November 4 and the bag three cock pheasants a day. In the remainder of the province the season will be November 3 and 4 and the bag limit, 3 cocks a day. Hours for pheasant shooting are 8 a. m. to 5 p. m.

* * *

For ruffed grouse, spruce grouse, sharp-tailed grouse and ptarmigan, the season will be open north of the French and Mattawa rivers from October 7 to November 25. South of this area, in the district of Parry Sound, Nipissing, Muskoka, Haliburton, Victoria, Peterborough, Renfrew, Lanark, Frontenac and Lennox and Addington, and north of No. 7 highway in Hastings county, there will be two open seasons, October 7 to 28, and November 6 to 18.

* * *

Partridge season will remain closed in the counties of Essex, Kent, Lambton, Middlesex, Elgin, Haldimand, Lincoln, Welland, and the townships of Ancaster, Barton, Saltfleet, Glanford, and Binbrook in Wentworth County. In the remaining regulated townships of Huron, Wellington, Simcoe, Ontario and Durham counties, and the entire counties of Perth, Oxford, Norfolk, Brant, Waterloo, Halton, Peel and York, there will be an open season November 3 and 4.

* * *

In the counties of Bruce, Grey, Dufferin, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Leeds, Grenville, Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry, Carleton, Russell and Prescott, and in the non-regulated townships of Huron, Wellington, Simcoe, Ontario, and Durham counties, and south of No. 7 in Hastings County, the season will be October 7 to October 28. The bag limit will be five birds per day, with a possession limit of 15 birds, except in the areas open only on November 3-4 where only three birds a day may be taken.

* * *

An open season on black, grey and fox squirrels has been set for November 10-11 with a bag limit of five per day in the aggregate of all kinds.

* * *

As far as rabbit-hunting goes, there will be an open season starting with the opening day of pheasant shooting in the regulated townships, and it continues until the expiry date of gun license in that area. An exception is on Pelee Island where rabbits open November 1, the same as on the mainland of Essex County, and may not be shot during the pheasant season. In the rest of Ontario there is no closed season on rabbits.

The 'Mask' and the Irishman Stage Battle Outside Ring And Get the Well-Known Gate

Just what do some of these ky wrestlers want, anyway? Here in the Memorial Arena, e City Commission went to eat expense to install a ring, that modern in all respects with the ception of a cocktail lounge, and ong comes a pair of snooty chyderms, who disdain the canvas comfort and prefer to slug it t on the floor.

That is what happened last night hen Referee Bert Maxwell, rotund arbiter who was the third man in the ring, decided to call off the main bout between handsome Timmy Geohagen and the villainous Masked Marvel because they insisted on bashing each other on the floor, too close to the customers' laps.

It's all right to get yourself a ringside seat, but who wants 256 pounds of pachydern wiggling and grimacing on your lap. Besides, it's hard on the trouser press.

Out of the Ring

The two main bout playboys after roughing matters up for quite a spell in which both won a fall, adopted an Alphonse-Gaston style. The Mask chucked the Geohagen out of the ring along about eight minutes of the third fall, and the customers were wondering, some of them that is, if they could make a brew or two before closing.

Geohagen cruched up a few choice cusswords which nobody understood since Gaelic is not taught in our public schools, and attempted to climb back to the scene of activity. The Mask leering behind his facial disguise promptly belted the Irish puss with a foot built like a ham. He repeated the performance several times, until the Irish temper flared.

Timmy, niver a bhoy to be tossed around willy-nilly, let alone having six inches of foot rammed down his jugular, finally leaped into the ring, and after plastering several healthy elbow smashes to the Mask's jaw, promptly hurled the villain to the mastic plastic.

The impact which jolted the vertebrae of the customers in the top pews, infuriated the Mask. He attempted to climb back and was met by a five-toed reception committee attached to the lower limbs of the Irisher. But then Timothy made a mistake.

He leaped out of the ring joined fistic battle with the willing Mask while nearby pewsters sought safety in retreat. Realizing that M'sieu Maxwell was counting on his fingers, and it wasn't anything to do with his income tax, Geohagen leaped back into the ring. Ditto the Mask.

"No Soap" says Ref.

But alas, kiddies, it was all over. Referee Maxwell ruled the boys had been naughty and that poppa should spank. He "spanked them both to their dressing rooms with tabs of disqualification on their sweating torsos.

Leering Lee Henning was at his best villainy and worst behavior in his semi-final bout with popular Seell Samara, the African sensation. Henning battered and smashed the colored boy with everything but the police station and dished out some terrific punishment. Samara tamed him a couple of times with his famous noggin nudge while Henning nearly broke his hand when he thumped the Negro atop his kinky pate.

Then La Henning brought out one of his favorite props a piece of string and applied it to Samara's wrist. Not satisfied he wrapped it neatly about the Samarian jugular vein and pulled. He got away with the trick for quite a while until Referee Cliff Fox discovered the hanging act and promptly disqualified Henning after 22 minutes of rough and ready wrestling.

Pat O'shocker and Jim Devaltева staged a spirited preliminary with the Irisher in the villains role. He, too, used every trick in the book and added a couple of his own for good measure. He was given the decision after 20 minutes of milling.

Ted Williams Back in Lineup After Long Layoff Changes Face of American Loop Race

By WILL GRIMSLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Baseball's lean-hitting perfectionist, Ted Williams, is back on the firing line for the Boston Red Sox, forcing a new appraisal of the neck-and-neck American the neck - and - neck American League pennant race.

The willowy slugger, out of regular action since July 11, may provide just the impetus needed for Steve O'Neill's old pros to overhaul Detroit and New York in the mad dash down the stretch.

Williams' big bat boomed like old times yesterday. He smashed a three-run homer and three singles to crack an eight-game winning streak of the upstart St Louis Browns, 12-9, and to move Boston within 1½ games of first-place Detroit.

Boston's half-step up the ladder was aided by developments at Detroit where the Tigers, behind the excellent relief pitching of the veteran Hank Borowy, turned back New York Yankees 9-7 to level this top-drawer series at a game apiece.

The vital "rubber" game was scheduled today with the Yankees sending out their phenomenal young rookie star, Eddie Ford, to recapture the lead they lost to Detroit. The Tigers countered with Dizzy Trout. Ford has won six games and lost none. The veteran Trout, with a 13- record has been a surprising stalwart of the Detroit staff.

Red Sox Move In

The Red Sox, Williams and all, move into Detroit Sunday for two games.

Williams' impressive comeback after more than two months on the shelf with an elbow fracture was just one of the highlights of a newsmaking baseball Friday. Other unusual happenings included:

1. Philadelphia Phillies had to go 19 innings, longest game of the season, to wrest the second half of their doubleheader victory from Cincinnati and thereby put the National League flag under virtual lock and key. The regulation first game was won 2-1 and the second 8-7, pushing the Phils 7½ games in front of Brooklyn.

2. Big John Mize of the Yankees poled three homers in New York's losing effort at Detroit and broke his own major league record for the number of times the feat has been turned in a single game. He now has hit three home runs on six occasions.

3. Plate umpire Dusty Boggess twice reversed himself on a play at home at Ebbetts Field, causing Brooklyn Dodgers to protest their 6-2 loss to St. Louis. There was no immediate ruling on the protest.

Plastic Surgery Required

Emory (Bubba) Church, the Phillies rookie righthanded pitcher, was hit by a batted ball in last night's first game and was taken to a hospital where plastic surgery was required.

The rhubarb at Brooklyn came when umpire Boggess called the Cardinals' Tommy Glaviano safe, then out, then safe again on a play at home in the first inning. Bruce Edwards, Dodger catcher, argued Glaviano didn't touch the plate.

In other National League games, Boston Braves whipped Pittsburgh pirates 7-4 on pitcher Mike Surkont's three-run homer, and Chicago Cubs beat New York Giants in 10 innings, 4-3, with pitcher Johnny Klippstein scoring the winning run after hitting a double.

In the American, Cleveland split a doubleheader with Washington. The Indians won the first game, 4-2, but lost the second, 4-1. The eighth-place Philadelphia Athletics snapped a seven-game losing streak by beating Chicago White Sox, 4-1.

TIP TOPS IN FINALS

Austin, Tex., Sept. 16 (CP) — Toronto's Tip Top Tailors, defending world softball champions, last night continued their uphill fight to repeat as titlists in the Amateur Softball Association's world tournament by defeating Grumman of New York 5-2.

Earlier yesterday they eliminated Napa, Calif., 2-1 in a one-hit game.

Toronto will meet the winners of the Houston-Clearwater game. They now have seven victories and one defeat.

First Place In Two Leagues At Stake

(By The Canadian Press)

First place in both the Big Four and the Western Conference is at stake in the country's grid battles today.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Toronto Argonauts fight it out for the Big Four leadership in Toronto's Varsity Stadium.

In Calgaryy, Edmonton Eskimos, top club in the West, meet the last-place Calgary Stampeders. If Eskimos lose, they'll fall into a first-place tie with the winner of Winnipeg Blue Bombers' game at Regina against Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The Big Four's last place, too, is at stake. Ottawa Rough Riders can hand it over to Montreal Alouettes by beating Alouettes.

Riders' chances of doing it have increased with the news that Howie (Touchdown) Turner, ace scoring back, will be in the lineup. He missed the first three games because of a pre-season shoulder injury.

Alouettes, hunting wildly for a kicker, yesterday signed up Ab Box, now 41, and a kicking great of the '30s. Box will be used for punting only.

Both Tiger-Cats and Argos are hoping for a dry field to unlimber their prize passing attacks. The weatherman predicts cloudy, cool weather. Argos lost 13-6 in the first game between the clubs this year.

Sarnia Imperials, who've won both their league games this year by scores of 39-0, will be out again against Windsor Rockets of the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior circuit. Balmy Beach, other club in the loop, will be playing an exhibition game in Kingston, Ont., against Queen's University.

Winnipeg will have high-scoring Jack Jacobs back in the lineup at Regina today. Jacobs missed two games last weekend with a shoulder injury. Before that, he and fast-stepping Tom Casey had done all the Winnipeg scoring between them.

Box Will be Used For Kicking By Alouettes

(By The Canadian Press)

A colorful chapter out of Canada's football past was officially reopened yesterday.

Al Box, 41-year-old former football great with Toronto Balmy Beach and Toronto Argonauts, signed with Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four.

The Alouettes, who have lost two of their first three league games, will use Box strictly for kicking—a department in which they are exceptionally weak this season.

The Canadian Maccabiah team, which will fly to Israel next week for the world Jewish athletic festival, is holding its final workout at Ste. Agathe Des Monts in the Laurentians this week.

The team of 16 will participate in boxing, wrestling, swimming and basketball at Ramat Gan, Tel Aviv and Haifa.

A Smuts golf competition, along the lines of the United States-Britain Ryder Cup competition, may be started for professionals of South Africa and Australia.

Broadcasting from Sydney last night, Bobby Locke, holder of the British Open championship, said that on his return to South Africa he would try to promote such an event.

Locke, who was on the air with Norman Von Nida, Australia's open champion, said the tournament would be a gesture from golfers in memory of Field Marshal Jan Smuts, former South African prime minister.

Orville White, 42, Winston-Salem, N.C., pro, blasted his way into the lead in the $15,000 St. Louis Open golf tournament Friday with a three-under-par 67 to give him 135 for 36 holes.

Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ill., also fired a 67 for a 136 score.

Cary Middlecoff, Ormond Beach, Fla., and Art Doering of Richmond, Va., were third with 137s.

Trailing closely were Joe Kirkwood, Jr., of Hollywood, known as Joe Palooka in the movies, Ed Oliver of Seattle, Wash., Jim Ferrier of San Francisco and Jim Turnesa of New York—all tied with 138.

Dutch Harrison of St. Andrews, Ill., had 139.

The early favorite in the race, golf's top money maker this year and last, Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., shot a 69 to bring his total to 140, five full strokes behind the leader.

Australia's Frank Sedgman yesterday scored a repeat triumph over his American Davis Cup adversary, Tom Brown, and U.S. singles champion Arthur Larsen moved into position to tackle his arch rival, Ted Schroeder, in the semi-final today of the Pacific Southwest Tennis Tournament at Los Angeles.

Sedgman defeated the San Francisco star, 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1, and he faces young Herbert Flam, national intercollegiate champion, in the other semi-final match today.

Flam advanced to the round by whipping Earl Cochell of Los Angeles, 8-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Larsen followed Flam on to the centre court of the Los Angeles Tennis Club and defeated tiny Felicisimo Ampon of Manila, P.I., 6-4, 8-6, 6-3.

Mae Murray, a grim little scrapper, hunted down Helen Sigel Friday for a 3-2 victory in the semi-finals of the U.S. National Women's Amateur Golf Tournament at Atlanta.

Beverly Hanson of Pasadena, Calif., defeated her sister West Coaster, Grace DeMoss of Corvallis, Ore., one-up in the other semi-final.

Little Mae, 24-year-old daughter of a Rutland, Vt., golf professional, made the turn one-up with her par-37 shooting at East Lake course. Ladies' par on the 6,521-yard course is 37-38—75.

SURVIVORS PICKED UP

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—A U.S. coast guard cutter raloed today that a 788-ton Portuguese fishing vessel had sunk in mid-Atlantic but that servivors had been picked up by another ship.

The number of the survivors or the size of the fisherman's crew was not disclosed. The ship was the 152-foot Cova De Iria.

Gossip From The Courts of The District

BY "DIG"

Trenton by their defeat of the Batawa squad last week in their leg of the Bay of Quinte Tennis League Corby Cup series earned the right to meet either Quinte Two or Point Anne in the final. The deciding match is this second semi-final round between Quinte Two and Point Anne was rained out last Sunday afternoon and thus the eventual finalist will not be known until later on in the week, possibly this evening. The league executive have scheduled the first match in the final to take place tomorrow afternoon weather permitting. The final round will consist of three matches with total points won to count. The other two matches are scheduled to be held on 24th Sept. and 1st Oct. If Point Anne win their semi-final the first match of the final will be played on their courts but if the Quinte team are the victors then the first match will be Trenton's home game. Whoever is in the final the fans are assured of some very attractive tennis.

As a finale to the official tennis season the Bay of Quinte Tennis League is to make merry at a dance at the Club Cedars. At this function the league trophy will be presented to three-time champion Point Anne and also the Corby Cup will be presented to the winner of that series. Tickets for this event priced at 75c will be available next week from all club secretaries and team representatives and it is hoped to have a bumper crowd of tennis fans there this season.

Weather permitting it is hoped to be able to finish off the season with a men's and mixed doubles tournament to be held on the Point Anne courts. Tentatively the men's event has been slated for Oct. 8th while the mixed doubles will be played off on Oct. 15th. Further announcements about these tournaments will be made by the league executive later on.

Amateur Weather Forecasting

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

Mark Twain once said that while everybody complained about the weather nobody ever seemed to do anything about it.

That, of course, is no longer true. Now the professional rain makers can bring on showers or storms at will. But the fisherman or the hunter must be content to take what comes in the matter of weather.

For centuries people who live or work outdoors have been watching the weather. Through experience they have set up some useful rules. If you know them you can eliminate much guesswork and trusting-to-luck when you are planning your weekends.

Animals, birds and fish are expert weather forecasters. They seem to know, days ahead, when any major storm is approaching.

If you live near the seacoast, watch the behavior of the sea gulls. During fair weather they usually fly over water but when a bad storm is approaching you will see them far inland.

Anticipate Bad Weather

Fish will go on a hunger strike as much as three or four days before the arrival of a serious storm. How they know is anybody's guess but the fact remains that they do. Thus, when conditions seem perfect for fishing, but the fish refuse to co-operate, look for bad weather in the near future.

Bats are influenced to some extent by weather. Ordinary rains or thunder showers affect them only temporarily but the advent of heavy storms will keep them from flying for as much as two days at a time.

In most of the weather rules not a great deal of attention has been paid to the winds. Wind, as you know, is a deterrent to any of the outdoor sports, so when you are making your plans you may as well think about winds as well as rain.

Roughly, you can expect to have winds when there is a change in the weather. This is especially true when fair weather and a "cold front" replace a spell of rain. Usually the wind will blow for one day. Then the following day will be comparatively calm.

"Mare's tails" in the sky—those long, whispy clouds, usually with curled ends — bring wind with them, wind and rain.

During periods of high pressure wind is not usually severe near the ground or the surface of the water, but low pressure areas bring the troublesome winds that sweep across the ground and the water and make casting difficult if not impossible.

Wind Direction Important

Wind direction also is important in weather prediction. Here in Pennsylvania an east wind brings rain. In your section of the country you no doubt are familiar with the 'rainy winds.'

Mr. Luis M. Henderson, author of "The Outdoor Guide," sets up an interesting set of rules about weather prediction. Here are some of them:

"If the smoke from your campfire rises high in a long, spiral thread, there's good weather ahead, but if it rises sluggishly for a short distance, drifts off slowly and settles, then break out the rain gear.

"If all the trees (particularly the maples) are showing the undersides of their leaves, look for rain within 24 hours.

"Heavy dew on the grass presages fair weather, lack of it is likely to mean rain.

"Red at night, sailor's delight—red in the morning, sailors take warning! The same rule applies to rainbows in reverse. A rainbow in the morning bodes no good but a rainbow in the evening portends a fair tomorrow.

"When the moon wears a halo, or has a ring around it, look for rain. The same goes for a red moon. But when the moon is a clear, bright white you are pretty safe in planning a trip next day.

"When the sky is like black velvet and the stars seem especially brilliant and more numerous than usual, look for rain or snow the next day.

"Big white, puffy clouds that look like balls of cotton mean fair weather, if they stay scattered, but when they gather in a mass over one spot, such as a mountain or wooded hill, look out!

Cross Currents a Warning

"Clouds that move at different levels and in opposite directions are a warning of unpleasant weather ahead.

"If the clouds float high about sundown and are tinged with red, prepare for high wind to follow.

"When you see crows pitching and tumbling about in their flight, take up on the guy ropes —there's a gale in the making."

There is a gadget now on sale at the sporting goods stores known as the Krick Weather Guide, developed by Dr. Irving P. Krick of Pasadena, California.

The guide is based upon cloud formations and wind directions. It consists of a well made aluminum frame in which are set 14 colored pictures of cloud formations, and a small compass.

First you select the picture which resembles most closely the current cloud formations. Then you move the red arrow until it is opposite the proper wind direction. Automatically the forecast for that day will appear in an opening at the top of the frame. It makes a useful adjunct to a sportsman's equipment and it is quite accurate.

Barometric Changes

You must remember that changes in the weather are accompanied by fluctuations in barometric pressure. There are some things about barometric changes that come in handy if you know them. In general, a "falling glass" or a succession of changes which makes for unsteady barometric conditions usually make for poor fishing. Abnormally high or abnormally low barometric readings are not healthy signs.

Conversely, a "rising glass" or a steady one within normal ranges are accompanied by good fishing as a rule.

When you are figuring on the probable weather, be sure to include the times of the daily Solunar Periods in your plans. The experience of thousands of hunters and fishermen verify the fact that the Solunar Tables will point out for you the best sport that each day has to offer.

Of course, nothing is perfect or infallible. Rules of weather can be, and often are, wrong. Adverse weather or water conditions often will offset the effects of the Solunar Periods.

Day in and day out, however, both the rules of the weather and the Solunar Tables will help you to find the best in sport in the outdoors. Make your plans accordingly and remember—it pays to keep track of the daily Solunar Periods.

A Weekly Peek At The Soccer Picture
BY ELDEE

Last Saturday Trenton Flyers, the local entry in the Ontario Intermediate championships, drew their match with Camp Borden Army at Camp Borden. The score was two goals each. Today the second of the semi-final is to be played at the Air Force Station with the kick-off slated for three o'clock. This match will be played to a finish with extra time being played if the teams are tied at the end of ninety minutes. We understand that Alex MacGregor secretary of the Ontario Football Association Commission was a spectator at this game and was well pleased with the brand of soccer served by the two teams. Apparently Andy Clapperton who last season was captain of Batawa was playing for the Camp Borden outfit.

In the other semi-final Peterborough U.E.W. beat Kingston United by the odd goal in five, and of course, play their second leg at Kingston today. This was the first time that Kingston had been beaten by a Canadian team this season. Their only other previous defeat was at the hands of Buffalo. We drove over to Peterborough to see this match and it was really well worth seeing. It was one of the fastest games seen this season in Eastern Ontario and was real cup tie football with the play going continually from one end of the field to the other. Quite a fair crowd of spectators turned out to see the game and seemed to enjoy the thrills. No quarter was given and none asked but nevertheless the game was uncommonly free from fouls.

While Flyers were otherwise engaged Batawa took the opportunity of increasing their lead at the head of the Bay of Quinte League at the expense of 6 R.D. who they managed to beat by six goals to one. Batawa now have three points lead but have played one more than second place Flyers. Today Batawa have a return game against the Depot boys but this time it will be played at Bain Memorial Park in Trenton the ground that the R.D. share with Trenton Merchants as their home park.

The league standing to date is as follows:

	P	W.	D	L	F	A	P
Batawa	11	9	1	1	35	13	23
Flyers	10	8	1	1	35	15	20
Pelle U.	7	2	1	4	11	12	10
6 R.D.	11	2	0	9	17	33	6
Trenton	11	2	1	8	13	37	5

Jersey Giants And Baltimore Ahead in Series

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Giants, dark horses in the International League playoffs, will try to make it three victories over the heavily-favored Rochester Red Wings tonight.

Joe Becker's Little Giants, who defeated the Red Wings 2-1 last night to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven semi-final series, will pitch Roger Bowman. Johnny Keane, Rochester's manager, is expected to counter with his ace righthander and most valuable player in the loop, 20-year-old Tom oholsky.

Baltimore took a 2-1 edge over Montreal in their elimination round last night by downing the Royals 3-1, Bill Kennedy, although relieved in the seventh by Karl Drews, picked up the victory. The loss was charged to Joe Landrum.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 16 — (AP) — For years it has been a tradition that the National League had the close pennant races, and a tussle like the current one among the Yankees, Tigers and Red Sox is something unusual in the American.

It ain't exactly so — you can go back to 1906, when Chicago's celebrated "hitless wonders" put on a 19-game winning streak in September, and find a full share of thrills in American League races.

Take 1908, when the Cubs-Giants post-season playoff overshadowed all other doings. The Tigers didn't beat out the White Sox for the pennant until the last day of the season.

The Red Sox won by a single game in 1915; Cleveland, Chicago and New York finished within three games in 1920, and the 1922 Yanks just nosed out the Browns by a game.

The idea of lopsided races probably grew up with the mighty Yankee and Athletic teams of the 1920 and 30s.

The Exception

But the 1928 Yankees got to thinking they were too good, and the result was a real thriller of a finish. At one time the Yanks led by 17 games, then frittered away their margin until the Athletics moved ahead on Sept. 8.

Miller Huggins' mighty men wouldn't stand for that; they licked the A's in a doubleheader the next day and stayed in front until they clinched the pennant two days before the season ended.

And at they were a day ahead of the Cardinals, who had a battle with the Giants to the end of the National League race.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Times are when you discover a count of more than 13 tricks in your partnership pair. This means a duplication of values in one or more suits. No telling in which suits, however.

No bid in bridge calls for taking more more than 13 tricks. So, the preponderance in tricks is not serious. The only problem is to make a decision whether your final bid should be six or seven.

To keep from blowing your top, a convention for showing aces and kings acts as a safety valve. From there on, any stretch of capacity is a personal opinion based on circumstances of the moment.

In our last championship match we got a lucky break in the deal you see here:

NORTH
♠Q 3
♥A K 10 9 8 5
♦A 7 5 2
♣3

WEST
♠K 10 7 6 4
♥7 5 2
♦10 9
♣7 5 4

EAST
♠A J 9 8 5 2
♥Q
♦Q 8 6
♣J 10 8

SOUTH
♠None
♥J 4 3
♦K J 4 3
♣A K Q 9 6 2

My partner was dealer in north and opened with a bid of one heart. It shows, among other things, five tricks. Actually he has a total of seven; four high cards, a short in spades, two shorts in clubs.

East stuck in a defensive simple overcall of one spade. This is in good taste. It does not promise more than five tricks among which may be only two highs of which only one need be a sure.

My south hand made an immediate one-jump takeout of three clubs. This guarantees a total of six tricks among which are two sure. With four highs and three shorts my hand actually counts seven tricks.

From the moment north opened I could see a total of 12 tricks in our pair. So, a slam was already known to be probable. Even before I knew he had two tricks more than he showed so far.

Even though a slam looms, a pair does not barge into it too soon. Partners first try to agree on or discover a satisfactory trump suit. So, a further exchange of values was next in order. Don't rush me.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 16—(AP) — Irene Dunne, home from Britain, is brimming with praise for the Queen.

The actress is back after a six-months absence, during which she played the part of Queen Victoria in "The Mudlark." While she was in Britain, she had a lengthy chat with the King and Queen.

"They were very interested in the picture," she related, "and were anxious to know if we were getting the right help on preserving the authenticity. They were both very charming."

Miss Dunne had chances to observe the Queen on public occasions, too, and she enthused about her.

"She is the picture of serenity. At all times she seems greatly interested in whom she is meeting and what she is being shown. You can tell that she feels deeply the responsibility to her subjects."

Miss Dunne found her own reign as Victoria somewhat gruelling.

The reason was the now-famous jowls, which had to be applied every day. The rubbery neckpiece was glued on in a process that required almost two hours each morning.

The chore of putting the jowls on and taking them off was fairly painful, and Miss Dunne isn't sure she would be willing to endure the grind again.

"There were times when part of my skin came off," she said, "and I expected my neck to be never the same again. Amazingly enough, my skin is better than ever. Maybe I've discovered something."

Sports Shorts From Britain

(By The Canadian Press)

London, Sept. 16 (CP) — A Harley Street specialist, Dr. Nevil Leyton, started something with his diagnosis of Britain's troubles in the field of international sport.

Following recent setbacks to his countrymen at soccer, cricket, tennis and in the ring, Dr. Leyton bluntly declared that in international competition British sport proficiency was at its lowest ebb.

He blamed the decline on improper diet— mainly to an insufficient intake of "meat-like" foods —and the increasingly greater specializations given to selected sports by top-flight competitors in other countries.

"In general we still look upon sport in the manner we used to," he said "but to achieve victory is an impossibility with this state of mind, when up against equally able individuals, who have been given special training and live only for their sport and the winning of it."

But the doctor was a bit off in the timing of his statement. He unburdened himself of his theory just as a couple of "H-bombs" were lifting British sports morale out of the rut.

The gloom-busters were Reg. Harris, winner of the world's sprint cycling championship at Liege, Belgium, and stout-hearted Jack Holden, who at Brussels last month cut down a formidable pack of international stars to win the European marathon title. He finished the gruelling 26-mile course in two hours, 32 minutes, 13.8 seconds and with plenty of margin to spare.

What's more, he accomplished the trick at the age of 43, just 12 years after he had talked of retiring.

The double-barrelled triumph provided a stimulating tonic for the British sports fan. The press also was elated. "So the fools of the earth thought we were decadent. What a mistake to make," wrote one sports scribe.

Others trained their heavy artillery on Dr. Leyton and his theory of inferiority.

Sir Sidney Abrahams, member of the British Olympic teams of 1906 and 1912, and one time long jump champion, led the attack.

"I have just returned from Brussels," he said, "exhilarated by the splendid victories of what may be described as one of the finest, if not the finest teams that has ever represented Britain in athletics. If today our sport is at its lowest ebb, I should like to be informed when it was at its highest flow."

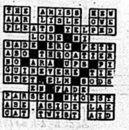
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:



Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning and she said to pop, That was very good mackerony and cheese Maud Hews prepared last evening, wasn't it, William?

Yes, not bad, pop said, and ma said. I dont blame you for taking 2 big helpings of it.

I hope I didn't make an exhibition of myself, pop said, and ma said, Not at all, on the contrary, quite the reverse. I meen the highest compliment and the greatest tribute you can pay a hostess is to make it obvious that you think her food is out of the ordnerry. Personly I'm rather famous for my own mackerony and cheese, but I hope I can flatter myself that I'm broad-minded enough to give credit where credit is due. I wouldn't of blamed you if you had taken 3 or 4 enormiss helpings, she said.

Yee gods, my stummick would of blamed me, pop said, and ma said, I may put more cheese in mine than Maud does.

Oh, the more cheese the merrier, if you ask me, pop said, and ma said, It's nice of you to say so, but I dont actually mind if you really prefer hers, William.

But for Peet sake, Maud Hews's mackerony and cheese cant hold a candle to yours, pop said. It cant even hold a wax match. Why, compared to yours, hers is as taistless as an egg without salt. If I was a judge in a cooking contest, I'd take one taist of your mackerony and cheese and then I'd throw hers out the window and lift you up on my shoulders and carry you through the streets cheering like a madman, he said and ma said, Now William, I'm afraid that's an exaggeration.

You're wrong, my dear, it's an under statement, pop said.

And he kissed her good bye and left for his office looking as if he thawt he was grate.

Which he is.
